2 More Arrested in Murder of Pastor's Wife

BISHOP BROTHERS HELD AS WOUNDED WOMAN SUCCUMBS

Three Now in Custody in Connection With the Death of Pastor-Raider's Wife.

MRS. STEWART DIES AT HOSPITAL HERE

Posses Scour North Georgia Section in Search of Assailants of Pastor of Draketown Church.

BY LOY WARWICK,
Staff Correspondent.

Dallas, Ga., November 15.—(Special.)—Tom and Calvin Bishop, young brothers, were arrested Saturday morning in connection with the fatal shooting of Mrs. Robert Stewart Thursday night by a band of alleged liquor runners.

The two men were arrested near Draketown—the scene of the fatal shooting—only a few hours after Mrs. Stewart had died at Wesley Memorial hospital in Atlanta. Tom Gober, another young Draketown man, was taken into custody Thursday night, shortly after a sheriff's posse launched a sweeping search for Mrs. Stewart's slayers.

Mr. Stewart, Draketown's famous Methodist preacher and liquor raider, was not at his wife's bedside Saturday morning when she succumbed to her wounds at Wesley Memorial hospital. He accompanied her to the hospital Friday morning, but returned to Draketown late the same night.

Will Push Search.

Mr. Stewart has resolved to push the hunt for his wife's slayers, and declares that he will not give up until the last one of them has been brought to justice.

Solicitor General Ed Griffith, of the Tallapoosa circuit, is an active leader in the investigation of the tragedy. He said Saturday night that he was undecided whether or not to ask the judge of the circuit to call a special term of Haralson county court. He intimated, however, that such steps would be taken if conditions warranted it.

Four More Warrants Issued.

While the three men were being held at Buchannon, warrants charging murder were issued against four others Saturday. Their arrests are expected to follow soon.

Mrs. Stewart was fatally wounded when she went to the aid of her husband. A band of nearly 20 men were attempting to abduct him from in front of the little parsonage at Draketown. Hearing the muffled screams of her husband coming from the direction of the three automobiles in which the would-be abductors appeared, Mrs. Stewart rushed into their midst to aid her husband.

Men Believed Wounded.

Before she was struck by a bullet from the revolver of one of the men, she fired two shots from a pistol at close range. Two men were believed to have been wounded. One bullet entered Mrs. Stewart's arm and another, said to have been fired after she lay prostrate on the ground, was drilled into her back. Her body was thrown from the road to the sidewalk to make room for the three cars as they fled. Stewart recovered sufficiently to seize the pistol clenched in his wounded wife's hand and to fire two shots at the speeding cars.

Within half an hour after Mrs.

Georgia and Tech Meet on Gridiron November 14, 1925

Athletic Relations Between Old Rivals To Be Resumed Under Long-Term Contract.

COMMITTEE ISSUES JOINT STATEMENT

Other Southern Colleges Rearrange Schedules So as to Permit Resumption of Athletic Contests.

Georgia Tech and the University of Georgia will meet as opponents on the gridiron during the football season of 1925—on Saturday, November 14, according to an announcement loosed on an interested state Saturday night.

Not since 1916 have these two institutions met on a football field. Not since 1919 (during the baseball season) have they met in athletic combat, save when the drawings in southern basketball tournaments have thrown them together.

Articles Signed in 1923.

After a four-year period of separation, articles were signed last fall by Drs. T. B. Crenshaw and S. V. Sanford, athletic directors respectively of Georgia and Georgia Tech, that athletic relations were to be resumed, but no schedule of contests was announced.

Georgia, as a state, is greatly interested in the resumption of amicable hostilities between teams of the two institutions, since the friendly spirit of partisanship between Georgia and Tech is one of the most pronounced sentiments that Georgia enjoys. Since the fracture of relations in 1919 alumni of both institutions have worked incessantly toward a renewal of relations—but without avail, until the present definite announcement of the 1925 schedule.

Schedules Equally Arranged.

The schedules of the two teams as thus far arranged provide that Tech shall play Notre Dame October 31, with Georgia playing Vanderbilt the same day. November 14 finds Vanderbilt playing Auburn, while Georgia and Tech meet, with the November 7 schedule calling for Georgia against Auburn and Vandebrilt against Tech. Thanksgiving will be celebrated with Alabama against Georgia and Tech playing Auburn as now.

In making this rearrangement of schedules, it was necessary for Tech to drop Louisiana State university from its schedule for the time being.

The length of the contract was not announced other than it is "a long-term agreement." All games will be played at Grant field in Atlanta.

Last Game in 1916.

The last game of football between the two institutions was played in Athens in 1916, Tech winning. Baseball was continued until 1919, when that, too, was abandoned as far as the Yellow Jackets and Bulldogs were concerned. Friction developed over some incident in a baseball game at Athens, Tech demanding an apology from Georgia. The difficulty was satisfactorily arranged last spring when the negotiations for the football games just announced were begun.

The announcement of the successful consummation of the negotiations was made in a joint statement from Harold Hirsch, trustee of Georgia,

CONGRESS FLARES READY TO BLAZE WHEN GAVEL TAPS

Fireworks on Two Measures Will Start Promptly After Solons Reassemble on December 1.

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER.

Washington, November 15.—Fireworks will start promptly upon the reassembling of congress December 1. They will be set off by the attempts to enact two important pieces of legislation which are opposed by the administration—the Howell-Barkley bill to abolish the railroad labor board, and the postal employees pay increase bill. The La Follette insurgents, who will continue to hold the balance of power during the short session of the old congress, are behind both measures, although there also is general support from regulars of both parties.

The bill for an increase in postal employees' pay was passed in the senate by a vote of 73 to 3 and the house by 362 to 6. President Coolidge, however, vetoed the bill in the closing days of the last session, declaring that the increase would be an unjustified burden on the public treasury and that the labor market was such that plenty of help could be obtained at the wages now paid. Unless there is a sharp reversal of opinion, the measure will be easily passed over the presidential veto.

Fight on Rail Bill Looms.

Sentiment is not nearly so unanimous behind the Howell-Barkley railroad labor bill. It is sponsored in the senate by Senator Howell, republican national committeeman from Nebraska, one of the moderate progressive group who will hold the balance of power in the next congress, and in the house by Representative Barkley, of Kentucky, a democrat. The senate interstate commerce committee reported the measure favorably at the last session and it is now ready to be called up for a vote, though under the senate rules a vote may be postponed, and if necessary a filibuster might be resorted to in preventing action. In the house, the bill has been given preferred position on the calendar, though the house leaders have succeeded thus far in preventing a vote.

The bill would abolish the railroad labor board and substitute mediation machinery along principles incorporated in the old Newlands and Erd-

M'LEARY SLAYERS GRANTED RESPITE

Electrocution of King and Harrell Postponed to December 5; Testimony To Be Reviewed.

Columbia, S. C., November 15.—Mortimer N. King and Frank Harrell, who were scheduled to die by electrocution next Friday for the murder of Major Samuel H. McLeary, near Cheraw, S. C., last July, today were reprieved by Governor Thomas G. McLeod until Friday, December 5.

Three weeks' respite was granted, the governor stated, in order that he might review the testimony in the case upon his return from the conference of governors in Jacksonville, next week.

The two men were convicted of murder in Chesterfield county, and on September 23 were sentenced by Judge C. C. Featherstone to be electrocuted at the state penitentiary on November 21. Both have been in the death house at the penitentiary since.

Search was begun by the war department through the southeastern states after Major McLeary disappeared in the course of an automobile trip from Raleigh to Columbia.

With the arrest of King at his home near Canton, N. C., it was learned that the army officer had been slain near Cheraw, S. C., July 2, after he had given the two wayfarers a ride. The motive established at the trial was robbery.

WOMAN BREAKS UP HER OWN FUNERAL AS WAKE IS HELD

New York, November 15.—Mrs. Margaret Sheridan hurried home last night in time to postpone her funeral. She left home last Thursday evening to visit friends and had such a good time she stayed all night. In the meantime a woman who had been struck by a taxicab was taken to Bellevue hospital and died there, unidentified.

Patrick Sheridan and his sister, Mary, worried when their mother failed to come home that night. When they read of the woman killed by the taxi they hastened to the hospital.

The body was taken to Patrick's home and the relatives were summoned to the wake.

Then Mrs. Sheridan came home.

"A ghost" cried the grandchildren.

"A ghost, your grandmother," said Mrs. Sheridan.

The body was taken back to the morgue.

TRAFFIC IN OPIUM AND ITS CONTROL STIR UP DISCORD

Chinese Delegate to Geneva Parley Charges Great Powers With Laxity in Restrictions.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Geneva, November 15.—Charges and counter-charges embittered today's session of the international opium conference on the Far Eastern opium problems, and although the conference should have finished its work tonight, so that a report on its conclusions might be presented to the general conference to open Monday, it seemed as far from agreement as when the sessions began a fortnight ago.

China charged that if the great powers had not adopted effective measures to reduce opium smoking in the Far East, such as rationing and the registration of smokers, it was because they did not wish to do so.

England charged Japan with attacking the British government during the discussion over the Japanese proposal that countries exporting opium should recognize the import certificates issued by other countries, when the documents declare that the opium is for legitimate purposes.

Japs Sharp in Reply.

Sir Malcolm Delingne, speaking for Great Britain, disclosed that private negotiations concerning exportation and trans-shipment of opium have been going on between London and Tokio, and he expressed astonishment that Japanese should raise the question at Geneva.

Replying, the Japanese delegate indicated Japan had broken off these negotiations, preferring to bring the question before the conference. The debate became so heated it looked for a time as if the conference would be disrupted. M. Sugimura announced that Japan would never sign an opium convention unless it was built on good faith, and he refused to vote on the question whether the next meeting of the conference should be held tomorrow or Monday, saying:

Kip Rhinelander Has Negro Bride, Records Disclose

Threat To Sue Newspapers Blamed for Exposures Contained in Court Papers.

New York, November 15.—The pitiless glare of publicity was turned today upon the romance of young Leonard Kip Rhinelander, scion of one of New York's oldest and wealthiest families, and disclosed that his bride of a month is a daughter of a negro.

Seeking seclusion somewhere, the young man and his bride had no answer to the exposure of official records by newspapers which they had threatened to sue because of statements that the new Mrs. Rhinelander was not a white woman.

Records at the Westchester courthouse showed that George Jones, father of Alice Beatrice Jones who married Leonard Rhinelander October 14, had applied for naturalization papers in 1895, describing himself as a "colored man." A sister, Emily, described herself as "colored" in marrying a New Rochelle negro nine years ago.

Mrs. Rhinelander gave her color as "white" when she and Leonard were married.

A succinct statement from Philip Rhinelander, society leader and father of Leonard, said he had not met "the young lady," but was satisfied she "was of English descent." Further than that the father refused to comment.

At the time of the marriage, which took place at the city hall at New Rochelle, and was performed by the city clerk, young Rhinelander, who is 22, said his father "probably would disinherit me." He has a considerable fortune of his own.

After several newspapers had declared the bride "colored," both she and Leonard threatened to start libel suits. She is three years older than her husband, court records show, although she gave her age as 23 when obtaining the license.

For a time, the couple lived in a little clapboard house at New Rochelle with the bride's parents. Then came publicity.

HEROIC TRAINMAN PREVENTS DOUBLE DISASTER BY WITS

Pinned Beneath Dead Woman's Body, He Frees Self in Time to Flag Onrushing Freight.

Miami, Fla., November 15.—Heroism of an injured flagman prevented a rear-end collision of the Florida East Coast train, whose derailment already had taken a toll of four lives and injured 18.

A. R. Davis, of New Smyrna, Fla., flagman of the train, was pinned beneath the body of a dead woman passenger and was almost unconscious by the shock of his fall.

He extricated himself, however, and with barely ten minutes to spare lighted signal flares, ran the length of the train and flagged a southbound train which was bearing down upon the scene of the wreck. The derailment had occurred at Wabasso Friday night.

How the flagman's heroism averted a second tragedy and a possible greater toll of dead and injured is told by W. M. Clemens, managing editor of The Knoxville (Tenn.) Journal, a passenger on the Miami-bound train.

Remembers Fast Freight.

The flagman, who was standing on the rear of the train when the coach left the track, fell beneath a woman and the two were pinned under the debris of the wrecked car.

Stunned by the fall, his first thoughts were of the oncoming train, carrying perishables, which entitled it to run on passenger train time, and which at the last station had been reported ten minutes behind the passenger train.

It took the flagman six or seven minutes, he told Mr. Clemens, to collect his wits and extract himself from beneath the body of the dead woman. Then, with his flagman's equipment scattered somewhere beneath the wreck, it was necessary for him to run almost the length of the train to obtain other fuses with which to signal the onrushing freight train.

He dashed back, approximately 250 yards, lighted the fuse just in time to stop the coming train from crash-

3 JUDGES TO HEAR FERTILIZER CASE OF 29 RAILROADS

Temporary Injunction Prohibiting Enforcement of Freight Reduction Order Denied by Sibley.

EQUITY SUIT ORDERED BY COURT TO BE FILED

Hearing by Three Judges To Be Held at Early Date—Petition of Plaintiffs Is Approved.

Suit filed late Friday by 29 short-line railroads in Georgia, seeking to prohibit the Georgia public service commission from enforcing the freight order affecting fertilizer and fertilizer materials, which went into effect November 11 and materially lowered the former rates, will be heard before a federal three-judge tribunal at an early date on its merits, but Judge Samuel H. Sibley, of the United States district court, Saturday afternoon refused to issue a temporary injunction prohibiting enforcement of the freight reduction order.

The 29 plaintiff railroads were represented before Judge Sibley by the Atlanta law firm of Alston, Alston, Foster & Moise. The petition filed before the court was approved, except that portion calling for a temporary injunction in the enforcement of the fertilizer freight order. Judge Sibley ordered that the suit in equity be filed and stated that a three-judge hearing would be held at an early date.

Claim Violation of Rights.

The carriers claim in their suit that under the new rates they will be required to carry fertilizer and fertilizer materials at a loss, that this is in violation of their constitutional rights, being confiscation of their property without due process of law. It was upon this claim that the suit was filed in federal court.

Included in the allegations contained in the suit is the statement that the public service commission issued the freight reduction order without hearing evidence or facts in the case. The plaintiffs aver that a reduction in fertilizer and fertilizer-material rates, averaging from 20 to 26 per cent, was made without asking for the submission of any facts upon which to make the order.

The new order affects intra-state shipments of fertilizer and fertilizer materials, or shipments having their origin and destination within the state.

GILBERT DECISION STIRS UP FRANCE

Storm Gathers Fast When Agent-General of Reparations Renders First Important Ruling.

Paris, November 15.—By one of his first important decisions, Selmour Parker Gilbert, the young American who is virtual dictator of reparations, has aroused the hostility of French opinion and has brought to a test the question—to what extent may the Versailles treaty be supplanted by the Dawes plan.

Dispatches from Berlin report that Gilbert, in his role of agent-general of reparations under the Dawes program, has ruled that hereafter the 25 per cent tax on German importations into England and France will be paid from the general reparations fund, instead of by the German government. Gilbert's decision has created something of a sensation in France, where the press charges he is supporting the Germans in their attempt to replace one of the outgrowths of the treaty of Versailles by the Dawes plan. The French hold such a thesis is inadmissible.

Gilbert's decision undoubtedly will have considerable effect on the negotiations for a Franco-German treaty, as these negotiations are deadlocked at present over Germany's insistence that the 26 per cent tax be abolished.

TRAINER CLAWED: BITTEN BY BRUTE, IN SUDDEN RAGE

"Bruin" Becomes Victim of "Scatterbrain," Malady Common To Animals Long Confined.

ATTACK ON TRAINER IS CAUSE OF PANIC

Bear, Trained To Feign Assault and Then Fall Dead, Suddenly Goes on Rampage.

Lives of several hundred negroes in the audience of the S1 theater on Decatur street were endangered Saturday night when "Bruin," the feature attraction of comedy bear troupe of John Moss, famed negro bear trainer, went afoul in part of his act and turned on his master, biting and clawing him, while police officers, theater attaches and members of the audience fired a fusillade of bullets at the infuriated animal. The beast, after having wrought havoc in the establishment, was finally killed by bullets from the officers' guns.

It was part of Moss' act that the well-trained "Bruin" was to make a vicious attack on his master, who, feigning terror, was to fire two or three blank cartridges at the bear, which was trained to drop to the floor, apparently dead.

Makes Real Attack.

Saturday night, all went well until this stage of the performance was reached. The theater was filled to capacity and the tamer received pounds of applause. "Bruin" attacked his master, who fired at him, as was customary, but "Bruin" did not fall to the floor. Instead, he attacked the trainer, clawing and biting large bits of meat from his body. Pandemonium reigned in the audience.

A dozen pistols barked from the crowded seats. Policemen Carroll and McGarrity pushed, their way through the crowded aisles, amid a volley of shots, and reached the stage. Stepping over the prostrate form of the bear trainer, they opened fire on the vicious animal, plugging him in several places. Tom Bailey, white, owner of the theater, stepped on the stage and emptied two loads of shot from a shotgun into the bear's body.

Chases Theater Owner.

But "Bruin" was undismayed and chased savagely after Bailey. More volunteers arrived on the scene, including Mose Colbert, stage manager, and "Kid" Davis, house manager, but "Bruin" continued his reign of terror, finally lumbering off the stage and out into an ante-room, where he attacked Bill Home, janitor. Home, in post haste, dived through a convenient window.

Officers Carroll and McGarrity entered the room and emptied a volley of shots into the brain of the bear, which at last gave up the fight and dropped to the floor dead.

The other five bears, which participated in the act, were caged and

OPPORTUNITY'S KNOCK

The Working Present

The rewards are not always to the best equipped, nor the big jobs to the men of most natural ability. The barrier of hard work keeps many from success.

Achievement is as far from ability as a finished house is from the blue-prints. Half of the brilliant futures in the world never amount to anything more. The working present is the only thing that counts.

Invest your time and best efforts in today. Bank on each day's work instead of on your future. Build your success with your own hands!

Former Atlanta Minister Gets Magnificent Church

Of particular interest to Atlanta Methodists was news received in this city Saturday telling of dedication services of the new parish house of the Congregational church of Portland, Maine. Atlanta's connection with this lies in the fact that the present pastor of the Portland church is Rev. Henry Stiles Bradley, who at one time was pastor of Trinity Methodist church here.

Mr. Bradley, who served the Atlanta church for your years, almost 20 years ago, was one of the most popular ministers who ever served in this city, and his leaving to take up other charges was the occasion of deep regret, not only among Methodists, but among the citizens of all denominations, it is said.

The services held in Portland to dedicate the new parish house continued from November 9 to 11. The program for the service was marked by a magnificent musical arrangement and a special dedication service.

Rev. William E. Gilroy, D. D., editor of "The Congregationalist," preached the dedication sermon on Sunday, November 9. In the evening special services for dedication of the new organ were held, followed by an organ recital given by Selden T. Crafts, organist and director of music, assisted by the choir.

On the evening of Tuesday, November 11, an evening of reunion and memories was held. Dr. and Mrs. Bradley and the building committee of the new edifice, with their wives, held an informal reception in the men's lobby of the building, after which refreshments were served. An organ number and an anthem by the choir followed, with short addresses by a number of the leading divines of that section. After addresses the building was opened for inspection.

The new building which will center the labors of Dr. Bradley in his present home is one of the most magnificent and attractive of its type in the country, it is stated. There are 30 separate rooms in the building, including a chapel, pastor's study, ladies' parlor, dining room, men's lobby, kitchen, junior department, primary department, kindergarten, boy scout room, etc. The building is of brick construction, with an impressive two-and-a-half front, and was designed by Cram & Ferguson, of Boston, architects. Blackstone & Smith, of Portland, were contractors.

Bobcat Adds Hazard to Links

Near Peekshill, N. Y., the Sleepy Hollow country made famous by Washington Irving, there is a golf club that has a live hazard in the shape of a fierce bobcat which is about eight times as large as an ordinary cat. It is a manfighting animal and it frequents the golf grounds frequently enough to be considered a hazard.

FLORIDA TURNS BACK PAGES OF ITS HISTORY

Tallahassee, Fla., November 16.—Visitors to Florida's centennial paused long enough to turn back the pages of the state's history and live anew amongst the scenes of a hundred years ago, when Chief Tallahassee and his tribe were the rulers of this hilly section of the peninsula state. Material for the occasion was found in the exhibits arranged by the historical committee in the senate chamber of the state capitol, to be viewed by the throngs that began a steady flow early in the morning and kept it up until late in the day.

There they found volume after volume of unpublished documents bearing on the early history of the territory, describing the official acts of those in whose hands the territory's affairs were placed; published statements of both sides to arguments leading up to the many duels that played an important part in the early affairs of this section, and hundreds of other exhibits, including the heavy iron helmets of Spanish warriors, old Chief Tallahassee's favorite tomahawk, and a portrait and lock of hair of the Princess Murat, and the like.

In one case, that arranged by Mrs. Jane Brevard Darby, a granddaughter of Richard Keith Call, twice territorial governor of Florida, was found the original commission, signed by Secretary of State John Forsyth, appointing him governor of the territory; an original volume of Spanish laws, letters in the handwriting of Andrew Jackson, first territorial governor, and others.

There also was an original of the agreement for a duel on Friday, September 24, 1819, at Hickory Flats, Madison county, Alabama, between Colonel A Erwin and Major John H. Eaton, signed by R. K. Call and Boyd McNairy as friends of the principals; and Thomas Butler's certificate of membership in the Order of the Cincinnati, signed by its first president, George Washington.

Another exhibit contained the liquor case of the Eppes family, descendants of Thomas Jefferson, early settlers of this section, which was brought to Florida in 1827. Made of Flemish oak, the case contained six quart decanters, done in French gilt, handed through seven generations, which contained a placard with the suggestion that the present generation knows little of the use of such articles."

The original of General Lafayette's grand march, composed by Professor Gonneke, of Raleigh, N. C., and played for the great Frenchman by Miss Martha L. H. Branch, while he stood beside her 100 years ago, also was among the exhibits.

TO CHRISTEN Z-R 3 AS "LOS ANGELES" WITHIN 10 DAYS

Washington, November 16.—President Coolidge will christen the navy's giant dirigible, the ZR-3, and officially change its name to "Los Angeles" in a ceremony to be held here soon, Secretary of the Navy Wilbur announced Friday.

The ship will be brought here within the next ten days, when weather is favorable, Wilbur said. The christening will take place at Bolling field, the army air station near the capital, where President Coolidge welcomed the world fliers. Mrs. Coolidge will be official sponsor. Pigeons will be loosed from the bow of the ship as is customary in such christenings.

PRESIDENT CALLS U. S. TO OBSERVE EDUCATION WEEK

Washington, November 16.—President Coolidge has issued a proclamation setting aside the week, November 17 to 23, as American Education week, and calls upon the governors of states and all connected with educational work to cooperate. In his proclamation, the president stressed the need of education and presented his views upon certain types in this country.

"An educated fool is a sorry spectacle," he said, 'but he is not nearly so dangerous to society as a rich fool. We want neither in this country. We want the educated to know how to work and the rich to know how to think."

RUSSIAN GRAND DUKE CALLS CROWN COUNCIL

Paris, November 16.—"His majesty, Cyril I, emperor of Russia," has decided, according to a Russian newspaper published in Paris, to convoke a crown council at which all the grand dukes who have recognized him will be present.

Grand Duke Dimitri has been appointed "his majesty's" representative in Paris, with two counselors, one for military affairs and the other for civil affairs.

Grand Duke Cyril proclaimed himself "emperor of all Russia" in September last, in a manifesto made public at Coburg, Germany. His claim was disputed later by the former dowager empress, Maria Feodorovna, in a letter to Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholaievitch, whom she addressed as the "eldest member of the house of Romanoff."

Cyril's action, she declared, was premature, since she still hoped that the Russian royal family was not dead. She added that "our future emperor will be designated by our fundamental laws in union with the Orthodox church and the Russian people."

CALLES WILL NOT HOLD HAND OUT TO BRITAIN

Mexico City, November 16.—(By the Associated Press.)—Mexico's national dignity prevents her from taking action regarding resumption of Anglo-Mexican relations, President-elect Calles has declared in reply to a cabled query from a London newspaper. The paper, which is printing a demand that the British government negotiate for resumption of relations for the benefit of mutual commercial interests, asked General Calles' personal opinion of this step.

In reply the president-elect declared he approved every action tending toward resumption of diplomatic relations.

A London dispatch yesterday said one of the first acts of the new conservative government in England was expected to be the reopening of a complete investigation of relations between Great Britain and Mexico.

While it was considered improbable that any advances would be made by England, the investigation would enable the cabinet to take a definite stand on the question and be prepared for future developments.

World Encircled In Five Seconds By Radio 'Racers'

Washington, November 16.—(By the world in exactly five seconds!

This is the latest answer of science to the imagination of Jules Verne, who startled the world some fifty years ago by his book, "Around the World in Eighty Days."

The new record was made last week in a thrilling radio "race around the world" staged before thousands of spectators at the third annual national radio exposition.

Instantaneously at the drop of a flag at 8:15 p. m. two operators touched their keys in New York and two radio impulses were sent flashing in opposite directions. In great bounds, each thousands of miles in length, radio waves leaped into space, eastward from a station at Tuckerton, N. J., and westward from Marion, Mass.

Returns in Five Seconds.

From Marion on one wavelength the letter "C" was transmitted with relays, while on another wavelength the letter "S," made famous by Marconi in the first successful attempt to traverse the Atlantic by radio, went eastward with five relays from Tuckerton. In exactly five seconds the letter "S" had gone around the world and was received again in New York.

The other letter, with the additional human relay, arrived back in five and one-half seconds.

The dramatic race against time was followed by thousands who watched a huge world map hung in the exposition hall. As each signal was received and relayed from country to country lights flashed from these points with blinding speed and almost before it began the race was over.

Repeated by Relay Stations.

The westbound wave was intercepted at San Francisco and the eastbound wave at Paris, France. Upon receiving the first impulse of the arriving signal, the operators repeated the flash and another wave was sent flying into space.

Like a runner in a relay race, the operator at Saigon, French Indo-China, listening in for San Francisco, thousands of miles away, was prepared to follow the procedure of his co-operator.

As the letter reached his ear he closed the key of his transmitter and sent a fresh signal on its way to Paris, the longest overland radio route in the world.

Meanwhile the eastbound signal had passed through the French wireless station at Paris, had been received in Malabar, Java, crossed the westbound wave and was on its way to Honolulu.

The two waves were on the home stretch, speeding for their respective stations in America.

But a fraction of a minute had elapsed when the two, with but a half a second difference, arrived in America, having traversed over 40,000 miles in a few blinks of an eyelash.

The invention by the Japanese of a diving appliance which dispenses with the use of pumping promises to revolutionize the pearling industry. The new appliance consists of a small mask, with face glass and rubber edge, which covers the eyes and nose. The mask is connected to a cylinder about 16 pounds in weight, filled with compressed air, which is carried on the chest. The supply of air to the nose is regulated by the mouth, which controls an attachment to a tube connecting the cylinder with the mask.

In Wyoming the superintendents of schools in first-class counties will receive $800 a year more salary for acting as truant officers. This step is to carry into effect the law passed by that state requiring children to remain in school until they have finished the eighth grade, or until they are 16 years of age.

A young stenog who had lately gone to work in a lawyer's office was handed a paper by her employer. "I want you to go over to the court house," stated he, "and file this plea in abatement." She went over and wandered around the ground floor. Finally she had to ask for directions. "Where can I file legal papers?" "Clerk's office, floor above." "But my employer told me to file this plea in the basement."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

SURVEY OF WORLD SOON TO BE MADE

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, November 16.—A world economic survey designed to supplement the purposes of the Dawes plan and to stimulate production, revive industry and restore international trade was announced by President Willis H. Booth, of the international chamber of commerce.

Preparatory to the survey, the chamber's committee on economic restoration will be enlarged by the addition of more members from countries now represented and from other countries which figure in the international trade.

"The work has only begun," Mr. Booth said, "if we are to reap in full the fruits of the Dawes plan. The next step is to start production and the flow of currents of international trade. If a constructive program can be outlined which will meet the approval of the business interests of all countries to which international trade is a matter of vital importance, the progress of reconstruction will be measurably hastened."

The survey project was launched by the chamber's American committee, whose members include Owen D. Young, Henry M. Robinson, of Los Angeles; Julius H. Barnes, of New York; Joseph DeFrees, of Chicago, and John H. Fahey, of Boston.

TWO MEN ARRESTED IN EXTORTION PLOT

Chicago, November 15.—Two men were held and another was sought today as the alleged instigators of an extortion plot which threatened the lives of Mrs. Amanda Huehl, formerly prominent in the Order of the Eastern Star, and her 71-year-old mother, if they failed to pay $10,000 demanded.

A letter, modeled after that sent by Nathan Leopold, Jr., and Richard Loeb to obtain a ransom from the father of Robert Franks, was received November 1 by Mrs. Huehl.

The names of those arrested were not disclosed.

SPLIT-UPS OUTNUMBER MARRIAGES BY 11 PER CENT

Through Divorce Courts

New York, November 16.—Around the Associated Press.)—Divorces showed a more rapid rate of increase than marriages last year, census statistics announced today, showing the number of divorces were 11 per cent more than in 1922, while the number of marriages were only 8.4 per cent larger than the previous year.

Marriages numbered 1,223,825, as compared with 1,129,045 in 1922, while divorces granted numbered 165,139 against 148,815. Nebraska was the only state in which there was a marked decrease in marriages, it being about 25 per cent. Census bureau officials explained that was due, to some extent, to an amendment to the marriage law in 1923 requiring the posting of an application for marriage licenses for ten days before the license is issued.

The largest rate of increase in the number of divorces was in Washington, slightly more than 60 per cent, due, according to the census bureau officials, to a change in the divorce law, which caused a considerable decrease in the number of final decrees in 1922, the first year the new provision was in effect.

Decrease in the number of marriages was shown for Delaware, District of Columbia, Michigan and Nebraska. Decrease in the number of divorces was recorded for Arkansas, Delaware, District of Columbia, Georgia, Nebraska and New Jersey, while South Carolina had none, all laws permitting divorce there having been repealed in 1878.

BIG TOBACCO ACREAGE PLANNED IN DECATUR

Bainbridge, Ga., November 16.—(Special.)—Henry J. Bruton has been appointed chairman of a special board of trade committee to sign up Decatur county farmers on tobacco contracts. The body has begun work with the assistance of business men in Bainbridge and it is expected that more than 2,000 acres of tobacco will be contracted for before the end of the present week, and that approximately 3,000 acres will be planted in this immediate section and marketed in Bainbridge next season.

President W. B. Fleming, of the board of trade, appointed Mr. Bruton Monday night, after R. P. Bohannan, tobacco expert declared that the raising of tobacco in Decatur county should be profitable.

Mr. Bohannan told board of trade members that Decatur county lands for the most part, are ideal for tobacco culture. A warehouse will be constructed large enough to take care of several million pounds of tobacco. A deal will be closed in the next few days with a warehouseman, who likely will have charge of the house and the activities of demonstrators in the county. It is expected that Bainbridge will become one of the big tobacco markets of the state.

A tobacco display will be a feature at the Decatur County fair in the week of November 25, at Bainbridge, under the management of the board of trade. Tobacco demonstrators will assist Secretary Bush in presenting the subject to visitors.

NEGRO BANDIT GETS $40 FROM GROCERY

J. Herwitz, of 62 West Alexander street, who operates a grocery store at that address, was held up and robbed of $40 by an unidentifed negro man, who, late Saturday night, entered his establishment and rifled the cash drawer, while the proprietor was forced to hold his arms above his head.

After successfully staging the hold-up, the negro fled into the street and disappeared. Officers say that the bandit answers the description of a negro who has robbed other stores in this vicinity during the past few weeks.

STREET CAR KILLS ATLANTA TEACHER

Miss Kate Wood, 78, of 286 Rawson street, private instructress in French and German, was killed almost instantly Saturday when struck by an inbound Cooper street-Pine street street car, on Cooper street, between Woodward avenue and Rawson street. The car, No. 246, was driven by Motorman J. F. Clayton, an old employee of the Georgia Railway & Power company, and was in charge of Conductor W. F. Dukes. Motorman Clayton was released under a $2,000 bond on a charge of reckless driving.

The car was proceeding down Cooper street, which is very steep and narrow, when Miss Wood stepped into the path of the car, according to witnesses. Motorman Clayton tried in vain to stop the car, it is said.

Miss Wood is survived by a nephew, Carl W. Fort, and five nieces: Mrs. T. B. Norris, Mrs. F. J. Whiteside, Miss Mary Fort, Miss Katie Fort and Miss Estelle Fort, all of Atlanta. Funeral services will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock from the chapel of H. M. Patterson & Sons, funeral directors, and Dean Thomas H. Johnston, of the St. Philip's cathedral, will officiate. Interment will be in West View cemetery.

Psychologists To Meet.

A meeting declared to be of unusual interest along phychological lines will be held this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the mahogany room of the Ansley hotel. Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby, psychologist, will lecture on "Conscious Mind and Personality." The lecture is free.

O'Brien Predicts Food Show Will Prove Great Education

That the pure-food show held during the coming week in the city auditorium will be the biggest, finest, most entertaining and instructive exhibition of its nature ever held in this city, is the statement of Pat O'Brien, vice president of the Henard Mayonaise company and official of the pure-food exposition.

"We are confident that this is going to be an exhibition of great value to the companies taking part in the event and of great educational worth to the people of the city," continued Mr. O'Brien, "and we have used every effort to secure the cooperation of every one concerned to render it a success from every standpoint. In the words of the great Kipling, 'It's the everlastnig teamwork of the army as a whole' that is to be depended upon for victory, and I believe we can count upon the wholehearted cooperation of every one to give the people the finest show of this kind they have ever seen."

The doors of the pure-food show will open Monday evening at the city auditorium, where the various manufacturing concerns and makers of food products have prepared a number of high-class booths and other exhibitions for the inspection of the large crowds expected to attend. There is a spirit of enthusiastic cooperation, it was stated, which is evidenced by all those taking part, that promises to make this show more excellent in every way than any yet held in the south.

Pat O'Brien, who is taking such an enthusiastic part in the Atlanta Pure Food exposition, is well known as the vice president of the Henard Mayonnaise company, with offices in Atlanta, Nashville and Dallas. Mr. O'Brien is in active charge of the local plant and as general manager of this industry he supervises the manufacture and distribution of the famous products, "Henard's Mayonnaise," "Sandwich Relish" and "Thousand Island Dressing," over the entire southeast. This firm has been in the Atlanta market for only one year, it was pointed out, but in that time the company has won a high place in the public esteem through the excellence of its products and its efficient distribution methods.

STEWART AVENUE SCHOOL HIGHEST IN ATTENDANCE

Stewart Avenue school, with an attendance record of 98.4 per cent, led Atlanta schools for the week ending November 14, according to figures made public Saturday by M. E. Coleman, director of the census and attendance.

Three schools, Davis street, Peeples street and State street, were tied for second place with a percentage of 97.6. They were closely followed by the William A. Bass Junior High school, which registered 97.4 per cent for the week.

HARNER IN RECITAL HERE ON WEDNESDAY

Harold P. Harner, formerly of Americus and the Philadelphia Conservatories, will give an interpretive piano recital on "Drawing-Room Music of Yesterday" Wednesday afternoon at 3:15 o'clock, in the auditorium of Phillips & Crew Piano company. There will be no admission charge. Mr. Harner is now a member of the faculty of the Morgan-Stevens Conservatory of Music.

ANOTHER ARREST IN ARENDALE CASE

Watson Creed, negro, living at 275 East Cain street, was arrested Saturday by detectives investigating the murder last Saturday night of J. L. Arendale, aged night watchman, at the Patterson Lumber company.

Pearl Booth, negress, whom police say is directly involved in the brutal murder of Arendale, has declared that she had an altercation with Creed on Saturday, a few hours before the murder. The negress also told police that cuts and scratches she bore were received in the encounter with Creed.

Another link in the chain of circumstantial evidence was established Saturday when Plennie Miner, special investigator from Solicitor General Boykin's office, concluded measurements which disclosed that the hammer found in the Booth woman's rooms exactly fitted marks left by a hammer on the safe in the office of the lumber company where the night watchman was murdered.

Thirteen negroes now are under arrest in connection with the murder of Arendale, and the investigators are "weeding out" the suspects. Detectives believe that some of them are involved in the affair.

It was announced by Coroner Paul Donehoo that an inquest would be held Monday morning in the murder of Arendale.

Investigators from the solicitor general's office Saturday took to the laboratory of the state chemist a blood-stained coat found in the rooms of the Booth woman in order that a chemical test may be made to determine the character of the stains.

WBBF To Conduct Vote To Determine Station Announcer

Radio fans will determine who will be the regular announcer for station WBBF, radio broadcasting station of the Georgia School of Technology, in a contest to be conducted Monday night from 9 to 10 o'clock, according to announcement Saturday by officials of the school.

Station WBBF, until a few months ago, was station WGM, of The Constitution, recognized as one of the most powerful and popular stations in the air. Sometime ago the entire equipment was presented to Georgia Tech for use of a class in radio engineering, and it was redesignated as WBBF, and granted a new wave length.

Under rules of the contest Monday night a number of would-be announcers will give a short talk via the ether, and will be numbered as announcer A, B, and so on. Listeners will be asked to mail their selections and the announcer receiving the highest number of votes will be selected as the regular announcer for this school year, it is said.

The station now is operating on a wave length of 270 meters, broadcasting regular programs on Mondays from 9 to 10 o'clock, and on Thursdays from 7 to 8 o'clock.

Communications should be addressed to station WBBF, Georgia School of Technology, Atlanta, Ga.

K. C. CARNIVAL PLANS ARE WELL UNDER WAY

A carnival with all the gala features of the best road attractions, plus a number of new and novel entertainment additions which will please the public is the promise of members of the local Knights of Columbus committee, sponsoring a "K. C. Frolic" to be staged in Atlanta the week beginning December 1. A committee of women has joined hands with the K. C. committee and the city Auditorium annex is being attractively arranged for the occasion, it is said.

A corps of workmen and expert decorators will begin this week the plans for seating arrangements and decorations, according to J. A. LaHatte, chairman of the committee. "The best possible talent in entertaining circles will be used," he said, "and we promise the general public, all classes and denominations, a show at popular prices that will please everyone.

On opening night, Monday, December 1, the program will include a formal appearance of the fourth degree assembly in full regalia. Other features call for a novel vaudeville bill, presenting a professional "big time" quartet, several soloists, dancers and comedians.

Within the next few days carpenters will be at work constructing the booths which will surround the new Auditorium-Armory annex. In these booths a number of society girls and wives of local knights will hold forth, presiding over all the usual midway contrivances—many new even to midways such as Atlanta is accustomed to.

It has been announced by the committee that the women who are cooperating will meet in the next few days to take over complete management of a dining room service during the frolic and an attractive supper each night at popular prices will be an added feature.

Tuesday night, December 2, has been designated as "civic club night," and members of the Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions and Civitans clubs are expected to put in an appearance in a body, besides contributing several entertainment features to the program of that evening. Saturday afternoon will be set aside as "children's day," with the Camp Fire Girls and Boy Scouts as special guests and entertainers. The Marist College band has volunteered its services for that afternoon.

FRIEND OF COURT GIVEN STIFF FINE IN TRAFFIC CASE

The law must have its pound of flesh—even though the defendant be a good friend of the judge.

This fact was made unmistakably clear in recorder's court Saturday afternoon when Charles P. Tyson, of 108 Pulliam street, was haled into court on a charge of driving his automobile past a street car while it was discharging passengers.

Recorder Pro Tem. Murphy Holloway made a little unofficial speech in passing sentence on the offender. Said he: "Mr. Tyson is a very good friend of mine. I have ridden in his automobile on numerous occasions, and I know that he is a good driver and a law-abiding citizen, but the law has most assuredly been violated by him, and the court fines him $36."

On the petition of the arresting officers, Mr. Tyson was not bound over to the state court for his offense.

COOL, FAIR TODAY

No Indications of Rain or Frost for Week.

The cool weather, which the weatherman predicted would visit Atlanta Sunday, arrived a little ahead of time. The cold snap which put in its appearance early Saturday night sent Atlantans scurrying home for their topcoats.

The weather Sunday will be somewhat colder than the past week, but not chilly enough to be unpleasant. There is no indication of frost during the week, according to C. F. von Herrmann, in charge of the local weather bureau.

No rain is in sight and present indications are that November is going to be almost as dry as October, which came close to setting a new record for this season of the year.

UNITY CENTER MEETS ON SUNDAY AFTERNOON

The regular meeting of Unity Center will be held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in assembly room No. 2, chamber of commerce building.

First period: Musical program of vocal and instrumental selections under direction of Mrs. Lessie McMichael; second period: Mrs. A. G. Gregory will lecture. There will be a distribution of free Unity literature. Robert Bryan Harrison will preside.

YOUTH'S LEG BROKEN AS STAND COLLAPSES

During the Georgia Tech-Vanderbilt game Saturday afternoon, stands at the south end of Grant field collapsed, dumping about 40 young boys to the ground. A young boy, Robert Coleman, received a broken leg in the fall of the stands.

PLEA OF ABATEMENT CHECKS PEONAGE CASE

Pensacola, Fla., November 15.—Charging that the grand jury was illegally drawn and that one of the grand jurors had served as a petit juror within a year, the defense attorneys for Alfred and Charles Land and M. B. Davis, Calhoun county turpentine operators, and six others, filed a plea of abatement in federal court here today to the charges of peonage involving working of negro operatives against their will.

Unprepared to argue against the plea, District Attorney Fred Cubberly requested time in which to contest the defense claims. Judge William B. Sheppard set argument for Friday, November 21.

It now appears unlikely that the case will be tried at the present term of court even should the indictment be held legal.

Sheriff C. D. Clark, Judge W. T. Chafin and Deputy Sheriff T. E. Cason, of Calhoun county, were among those named in the indictment, which was returned following an exhaustive investigation by department of justice agents revealing what the government will contend was unmerciful treatment of negro turpentine workers.

...an acts but which were displaced by the present labor board in the Esch-Cummins law. All three parties have criticized the present labor board as unsatisfactory. The progressive platform indorsed the Howell-Barkley bill. The republican and democratic platforms made no flat commitment for any particular plan.

Stiff pressure will be brought to bear to delay action on this measure at the short session, as the opponents of the bill believe that its chances will be less in the next congress. The measure will die with the present congress, if it fails of enactment, and a fresh start will have to be made in the new congress.

The hot fights over these two measures will provide excitement in both houses pending the time when the appropriation bills begin to come out of committee for consideration on the floor.

TRAINMAN PREVENTS DOUBLE DISASTER

ing head-on into the derailed passenger train.

"The first thing that greeted my eyes when I stepped out of the coach was a girl's body, headless and mangled. One child was thrown from the car with such force that her body was almost entirely covered in the dirt. Another had lost both legs.

Injured Litter Ground.

"The cries and groans of suffering men and women, and of those searching in the darkness for their loved ones was inexpressibly horrible.

"The work of recovering the injured was started in total darkness which handicaped us severely.

"One man had a lantern and another, working on the inside of the overturned coach, had a flashlight, but it was very hard to get around the pieces of coach, the shattered seats, the broken glass and injured passengers lying all over the ground.

Whisky Serves Emergency.

"We built a fire with pieces of splintered wood from the coach, then the freight train arrived, and we worked in the light from the engine headlight.

"The train carried no sleepers and there was not a blanket aboard. We stripped the Pullman seats of covers, used towels, napkins and anything else we could get our hands on for aboard we had a small supply of whisky and I think if the vote had been taken on the eighteenth amendment that the entire train would have voted the wet ticket."

CORONER'S JURY BLAMES RAILROAD.

Miami, Fla., November 15.—The Florida East Coast Railway company was held to blame for the wreck at Wabasso last night in which four passengers were killed and 18 injured, by a coroner's jury which reported this afternoon at Fort Pierce.

Proper equipment was not provided, the verdict said.

Testimony given at the inquest, which first opened at Wabasso last night and which adjourned to Fort Pierce today, did not clearly bring out the cause, but indicated that a defective wheel on the ill-fated coach was responsible.

Witnesses testified that the car was an old wooden one and apparently too light to be at the end of a long train.

Railway employees who testified, stated that the coach had been through the shops recently and apparently was in good shape. Twelve witnesses were examined, including train crew and passengers.

INJURED TAKEN TO ST. AUGUSTINE.

Miami, Fla., November 15.—Alexander Lamarre, Detroit, injured in the Florida East Coast railway train wreck at Wabasso, Fla., last night, reported in advices from Lake Worth, Fla., to have died today in a hospital where he was taken.

St. Augustine, Fla., November 15. Reaching here about 7 o'clock this morning on a special train from the lower east coast, in charge of surgeons and nurses, were seven of the injured in the wreck on the Florida East Coast railway last night at Wabasso. They are Mrs. Catherine Lamarre, 65, Detroit, Mich.; Alexander Lamarre, 75, Detroit; John C. Underwood, 64, Columbus, Ohio; Mrs. Minnie Jessie Hethcoat, 36, Waycross, Ga., Jess Hethcoat, 44 Waycross; Harold Burham, 27, Old Orchard, Me., and Asa J. Benison, 52, Miami, Florida.

All are in a satisfactory condition, and surgeons state that no more fatalities are expected either here or at Fort Pierce, where others are in a hospital. Others are to be brought to the general hospital of the Florida East Coast railway, the East Coast hospital in this city, on train No. 38 tonight. Every care and consideration is being shown by officials of the company, and the injured are reported to be resting comfortably.

List of Dead.

The authentic list of the dead, secured from the headquarters of the Florida East Coast railway here, shows three women and one unidentified baby. They are:

Mrs. Elizabeth Foxton, of Alders, Mich.

Miss Ruby Stone, of Northfield, Vt., aged 35.

A woman thought to be Mrs. A Lanire, of Detroit.

A baby, under two years of age, thought to be the child of Mrs. Lanire.

The identity of both has not been definitely established as yet.

The train was not operating at an excessive rate of speed. It was the last car of the train, coach No. 33, and the thirteenth from the engine, which was derailed. The cause of the accident has not been determined, but officials here are making a very careful investigation.

The Injured.

The official list of injured as given out from railroad headquarters follows:

Mrs. Lica Miller, Blissfield, Mich., en route to Miami; back hurt and other injuries.

Harold Burnham, Old Orchard, Me., en route to Miami; both legs hurt and other injuries.

J. G. Hethcoat, Waycross, Ga., en route to Key West; slightly bruised.

Mrs. J. G. Hethcoat, Waycross, Ga., en route to Key West; slightly bruised.

Miss Blanche Stone, Northfield, Vt., en route to Delray; slightly bruised.

Mrs. H. Bolton, West Palm Beach, with Mrs. Foxton; left arm hurt.

Mrs. W. H. Chillcote, detrained at Fort Pierce; several flesh wounds.

Mrs. Robert Davis, Northfield, Va.; seriously injured.

Miss Helen Davis Northfield, Vt., en route to Delray; slightly injured.

J. C. Underwood, Columbus, Ohio, en route to Miami; slightly hurt.

A. J. Keneroon, Newport, N. H., en route to Miami; slightly injured.

Rev. Egling, Mammoth Beach, N. J., caught under car, but not hurt; went through to West Palm Beach on No. 29.

Mr. and Mrs. William C. Miller, Lonewood, Mich., en route to Stuart; Mr. Miller unhurt. Mrs. Miller's back sprained.

John J. Cavanaugh and wife, Passaic, N. J., en route to Miami; Mr. Cavanaugh seriously injured, Mrs. Cavanaugh bruised.

Miss Minnis, Litchfield, Mich., en route to West Palm Beach; back and ribs injured.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiscock and son, I. D. Hiscock, New Smyrna, Fla.; Mr. Hiscock was invalid at time of boarding train at New Smyrna, helpless; wife bruised; son uninjured and had left rear car at time of accident.

Alexander Lemarre, Detroit, en route to Lake Worth; slightly injured.

Mrs. Alexander Lemarre, en route to Lake Worth from Detroit; slightly injured.

Dr. R. B. Cochrane, Columbus, Ohio; slightly hurt but remained on train going to Lake Worth.

The train was put on a sidetrack and a baggage car taken to the wreck. All injured parties were picked up on cots secured from a boarding house at Wabasso, and the slightly injured were placed on cushions from the wrecked car and made as comfortable as possible. Doctors Hardie, Boothe and Clark from Fort Pierce; Dr. Rose from Sebastain, and Dr. Grossman from Vero, were in atendance, giving attention within a quarter of an hour after the accident, so quickly was relief rushed to the scene.

FIRST FATAL WRECK ON RAILROAD.

Miami, Fla., November 15.—E. P. McLain, superintendent here of the Florida East Coast railway, said this morning that the passengers killed in the wreck last night at Wabasso are the first to lose their lives in a wreck on this line in the history of the company.

Coaches on the wrecked train were brought into Miami on No. 85, arriving here at 3:30 a. m.

Mrs. A. Lanire, Detroit, Mich., and Miss Lizzie Foxton, Alpena, Mich., who were killed, were traveling together and both were coming to Miami to spend the winter.

GEORGIA AND TECH MEET ON GRIDIRON

and W. L. ("Chip") Robert, trustee of Tech.

The statement says:

Joint Statement Issued.

"All arrangements have been made and a long-term contract has been signed whereby the University of Georgia and Georgia Tech will meet in football on Grant field in Atlanta on a big November date, two Saturdays before Thanksgiving next year.

"The alumni, undergraduates and friends of both institutions have looked forward to the resumption of football relations, and it has been made possible for Georgia and Georgia Tech to start such relations in 1925 by the hearty cooperation of Vanderbilt, Auburn and several other representative conference teams in switching schedules accordingly.

"The first game will be played November 14, 1925, on Grant field, in Atlanta."

TRAFFIC IN OPIUM AND ITS CONTROL

"I shall not vote because I have said my last word."

Britain Not Trustful.

Sir Malcolm insisted Great Britain could never agree to unlimited shipments of opium on the mere strength of import certificates and referred to the case of one of the Far Eastern countries, where high officials were arrested for complicity in an opium scandal.

He questioned whether Great Britain could continue to have confidence concerning the export of opium under such conditions, maintaining it would be violation of The Hague opium convention.

That the country to which Sir Malcolm referred was Japan was made clear when M. Sugimura jumped to his feet and said that the guilty Japanese officials had been properly punished. He declared that Japan could produce evidence of crimes committed by officials of other governments in connection with the opium traffic, but would not do so at Geneva because it was bad kind of politics.

India Challenges Japan.

The Indian delegate declared that India as an opium exporting country would always reserve the right to refrain from exporting when it had no special agreement with other countries. He continued: "The Japanese representative has made a threat. If Japan possesses unfavorable information concerning the officials of other governments she should disclose it or should never have alluded to it."

M. Sugimura then charged that India's interest in the opium problem was "mainly economic" and insisted that the discussion was being carried to a low level. If Japan was to be suspected when she desired opium shipments for legitimate purposes then no accord reached at Geneva would be signed by Japan.

M. Sze, for China, smilingly said that all the trouble came from secrecy in the subcommittees, and that the conference might be saved if what went on in the subcommittee rooms could be known by all the delegates.

Amid great confusion, the conference adjourned until tomorrow morning.

MORE ARRESTS IN WOMAN'S SLAYING

Stewart had been wounded a posse of incensed residents of the county and surrounding sections had been aroused. They scoured the thickly wooded territory for miles around, the chase extending into Alabama. Gober was taken into custody on a charge of suspicion. All night Thursday and Friday divided posses covered all parts of the country.

But it was not until Saturday morning about 11 o'clock when the Bishop brothers were taken into custody near Drakestown. They were taken by deputies to Buchannon, and lodged in the county jail there.

Men Recognized.

Reports from Buchannon said that the posses, made up mostly of devoted followers of the raider-preacher, were still searching for other members of the band of men that ended Mrs. Stewart's life.

Stewart recognized five of his assailants and county authorities felt sure Saturday night that the other members of the party would be taken within 48 hours. Clews to the identity of the other men were in the hands of Sheriff George Richards, it was said, but they were being guarded with strictest secrecy.

Stewart, a Methodist preacher, has gained a wide reputation for his open warfare on liquor-runners and moonshiners in this section of the country. He has been responsible for countless arrests, and has personally cleaned out more than a score of stills and arrested their operators. He had been warned, it was said, to cease his activities, but refused.

MRS. MORGAN STILL IN CRITICAL STATE

Highland Falls, N. Y., November 15.—The condition of Mrs. Frances F. Morgan, Sr., widow of J. Pierpont Morgan, who is seriously ill at her country home here, remained unchanged this morning. Dr. Frederick Dillney, of New York, said she rested comfortably during the night.

Physicians reported Mrs. Morgan as unconscious with little hope held out for recovery last night. Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee, Mrs. Juliet Pierpont Hamilton and Miss Anne Morgan, daughters of Mrs. Morgan, were in attendance.

Ability To Carry His Liquor Saved Hill Is Claim

New York, November, 15.—If trial of Congressman Hill in Baltimore "proved anything positively, as against negatively, it is that Congressman Hill and his guests were 'tanks' and apparently didn't get drunk," Orville S. Poland, head of the legal department of the Anti-Saloon League of America, declared in a statement Friday.

"If this group of Baltimore hooch hounds did remain sober, it proves nothing as to anyone else and each case arising under this provision of law will have to stand on its own feet," Poland added.

Believing that there is nothing damaging to the cause of prohibition in the jury verdict in favor of Congressman John Philip Hill and his lightwine party to an odd thousand guests, the Anti-Saloon league legal leader boldly implied that the wine consumed was intoxicating and that all that saved the congressman from a jail sentence was his capacity for holding his liquor.

TO POSTPONE PROBE OF FATAL JOY RIDE

New Haven, Conn., November 15.—The hearing which was to be given to Miss Marjorie Schneider, driver of the automobile in which Charles C. G. Rogers, bond salesman, was fatally hurt on the night of November 1, will not be held at the town court in North Haven Monday, Ward Church, town prosecutor, stated today.

Mr. Church said that he did not know when the hearing would be held and that the warrant would not be served until the case was called in court. Mr. Church declined to give any explanation of the delay in the hearing.

Counsel for Miss Schneider denies the importance of allegations that his client said, in references to Rogers: "I pushed him and I'm afraid I've killed him."

"What if she said that?" the lawyer asked. "I don't know of any proof that she did, but if she did—what of it? Any one is apt to say something like that after a man is killed while riding in their car."

Coroner Eli Mix in his report on the death of Rogers said that there was testimony that Rogers had tried to kiss Miss Schneider and that she repulsed him with a push. The coroner expressed the belief, however, that such a push against the windshield would not account for Rogers' injuries.

Both the coroner and State's Attorney Alling reiterated that they consider the matter of Rogers' death closed so far as official investigation is concerned.

LAST SERVICES HELD FOR REV. W. M. WINN

Lawrenceville, Ga., November 15.—(Special.)—The body of Rev. W. M. Winn, 77, Confederate veteran and Methodist minister, who died suddenly at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. B. Sasser, at Decatur, Thursday night, was interred at the New cemetery here this afternoon at 3 o'clock, Lawrenceville lodge of Masons officiating.

He became a member of the Lawrenceville lodge over a half a century ago. He was the youngest son of the late Richard Winn, who was a prominent Gwinnett county politician. Rev. Mr. Winn entered service in the civil war at the age of 16, serving with distinction until the surrender, after which he entered the ministry, serving charges in Georgia and Alabama for nearly 50 years.

Besides many friends and relatives, Dr. Elam F. Dempsey and Rev. J. R. King accompanied the body to Lawrenceville.

Rev. Winn is survived by two sons, Rev. E. S. Winn, pastor of the First Presbyterian church at Fitzgerald, and W. A. Winn, of Decatur; a grandson, W. B. Sasser, of Decatur; a daughter, Mrs. H. B. Sasser, of Decatur; a brother, Colonel Thomas E. Winn, of Greensboro; five nephews, Colonel Courtland S. Winn, of Atlanta; W. J. Peeples, of Athens; R. L. Winn, of Atlanta; T. E. Peeples, of Gainesville, and Arch Peeples, of Atlanta, and three nieces, Mrs. A. P. Cain, of Cincinnati; Mrs. John W. Chipley, of Athens, and Miss Minnie Peeples, of Lawrenceville.

600 BELIEVED DEAD IN JAVA EARTHQUAKE

Batavia, Java, November 15—(By the Associated Press.)—The death toll in the earthquake which shook the central portion of the Islnad of Java last Wednesday is estimated in official circles at 300, although private reports indicate that as many as 600 persons may have perished.

Six villages are completely isolated by floods. The damage to private property at Wonosobo exceeds 300,000 guilders (normally $120,600).

The earth still is trembling from slight shocks. It is generally accepted here that the earthquake was not of a volcanic nature, but merely due to the shifting of earth layers.

Before You Invest, INVESTIGATE

Numerous inquiries and complaints have reached the Georgia Securities Commission relative to the Burnham Chemical Company, of Reno, Nevada, which for three years past has been flooding the mails with literature offering its stock at fifty cents per share. Repeatedly, we have called this company's attention to these complaints and urged them not to send this literature, which bears all the earmarks of a fraudulent promotion, into Georgia.

BURNHAM ONLY ONE OF MANY

If the representations made by this company were even approximately trustworthy, there would be no necessity of its continuing to offer fifty cent shares for so long a period. Complaints have been filed with the Post Office Department by the Georgia Securities Commission and nearly all the other securities departments. This company is only one of a great many using the mails to dispose of their stock when they know they could not pass the securities departments.

Do not buy paper of any kind from mail order houses until you ascertain their standing with us. All dealers in stocks and bonds having authority to sell securities in Georgia are licensed. The others have no license because they dare not apply.

Heart Attacks. Dropsy. Asthma. Smothering. Shortness of Breath.

Important Discovery of Scientist Proves That 95 Sufferers in a 100 of Fatal Heart Trouble, Hardened Arteries and Blood Pressure, Can Now be Relieved Successfully and Life Prolonged Without Drugs and Medicines.

Through His Discovery, Many, After Years of Suffering, Have Been Relieved Within 72 Hours, Without Drugs, of Dizzy, Fainting and Smothering Spells, Difficult Breath, Pains in Heart, Chest, Head, Arms, Palpitation, Dropsical Swellings, Etc.

Prof. Walden, a scientist, has made a most important scientific discovery for the relief of Heart Trouble, Hardening of Arteries and High Blood Pressure. This discovery was given the most severe test in fourteen different chronic cases of heart and other sufferers. Of these fully one-half had been considered incurable and hopeless, beyond the reach of human help, and were not expected to be able to live much longer. Among these were four chronic sufferers of ANGINA PECTORIS, five of VALVULAR HEART TROUBLE, several with ENLARGEMENT OF THE HEART—all pronounced incurable—NERVOUS, ASTHMATIC and FATTY HEARTS, etc. Dangerous complications, in themselves alone fatal, such as Dropsy, Kidney, Bright's Disease, Liver and Stomach affections, were connected with the heart complaints and increased the difficulties to be remedied.

It was believed that if Prof. Walden's Discovery could only accomplish a slight improvement in such hopeless cases, his treatment would be superior to any known treatment today, and if he could accomplish what was considered the impossible by relieving such chronic cases of many years' standing, he would, indeed, prove himself the acknowledged master and the greatest living authority on Heart Diseases, Hardening of Arteries and Blood Pressure, both in this country and in Europe.

In spite of the skepticism expressed on all sides, he applied his discoveries and methods, which were entirely different from from any ever used by any other scientific man, and to the astonishment of all the demonstration was even more successful than had been expected. The results produced in the case of every patient were pronounced nothing short of miraculous. The cramps and pains in heart, chest and arms, difficulty of breathing, smothering spells, insomnia, as well as all other distressful symptoms, so well known to heart sufferers, disappeared as if by magic during the first 24 to 72 hours, the dropsical swellings gradually left, and the patients were discharged in 20 to 60 days, a number resuming their occupations within 20 days after having been invalids for years.

Prof. Walden's Method is fully explained in an 88-page, copyrighted, illustrated book, which will be sent to sufferers, free, upon receipt of a description of their symptoms. Many lives have been saved and prolonged by the Walden Method, without drugs. Here are a few extracts from their own signed and sworn-to statements. Copies of these, and many other letters of responsible men relieved, will gladly be sent:

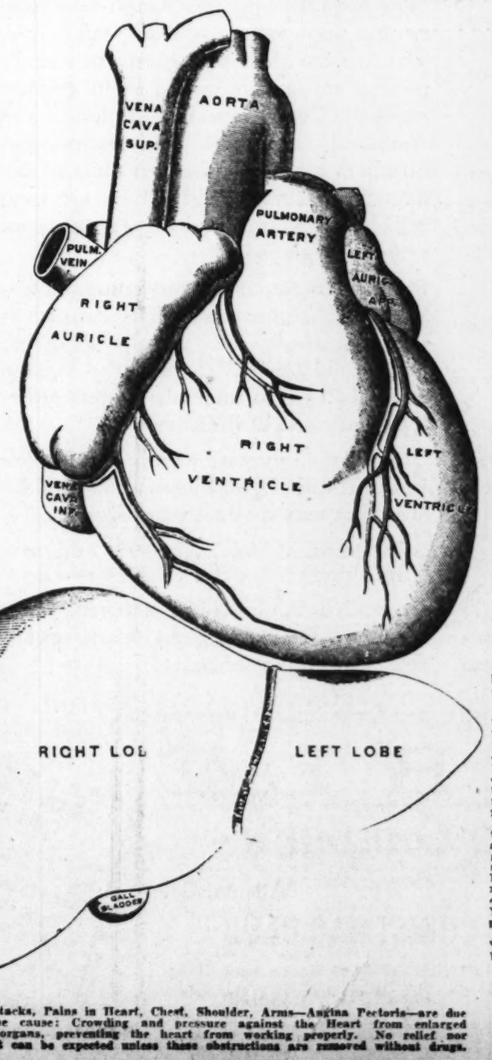

Mr. O. M., traveling man, writes: "I suffered of Heart Attacks, Angina Pectoris, Smothering and Sinking Spells, Difficult Breath, for eight years, being unable to work for three years. The best medical authorities I consulted prophesied I could not live beyond one year. I took up Prof. Walden's Method, discontinued all drugs, and was completely relieved of all my former suffering in twenty-four hours, and completely restored in six weeks, and returned to work."

Dr. W. P. G., a retired physician, graduate of Bellevue Medical College, New York, states: "Six and one-half years ago I retired from business at a great financial loss, upon the earnest advice of my physician. I had been treated by nine different physicians for Heart Trouble, Angina Pectoris, Hardening of the Arteries and Blood Pressure. I suffered with Shortness of Breath, Choking and Fullness in Chest, Sinking Sensation, Dizzy and Fainty Spells and Vertigo. The High Blood Pressure caused a Throbbing in my Head and Neck. Pains in back of Head and Heart. Could only walk half a block, exercise bringing on Spasms of my Heart. Under Prof. Walden's care the Heart Attacks of Angina Pectoris left me at once. In a week's time I walked two miles and all the other symptoms of many years' standing have never troubled me since, and I work hard now every day. My improvement has been wonderful and I feel that Prof. Walden has made me a well man again."

Mr. C. K., merchant, testifies: "For several years I had been afflicted with Valvular Heart Trouble, Angina Pectoris, Hardening of Arteries, High Blood Pressure—196 mm.—Nervous Prostration and Vertigo. I had not worked a day for six months and spent six weeks in a hospital. Several of the leading Heart Specialists examined me, and told my wife they might find me dead any time. I remained in bed for one and one-half months and stayed on my veranda awaiting the end. After four days of Prof. Walden's Treatment, without drugs, I walked several miles, and all my symptoms had disappeared. I now work all day long in my store and am perfectly well. I am indebted to Prof. Walden for having saved me from a premature death."

Prof. Walden extends a cordial invitation to those suffering of Heart and Kidney Troubles, Hardening of Arteries, High Blood Pressure or Threatened Paralysis, to visit him for a free personal consultation at his office of The Walden Institute, and he will take pleasure to explain the causes of their complaints to them, and advise them how same can be removed without the use of drugs, medicines, serums and operations.

He will be pleased to correspond with those who are unable to call in person and describe his Discovery to them, and give his candid opinion, free, if they will send him a description of their symptoms. He will forward, without expense, upon receipt of this description, his 88-page copyrighted, illustrated book on The Nature, Cause and Relief of these complaints, without the use of drugs.

Heart attacks, Pains in Heart, Chest, Shoulder, Arms—Angina Pectoris—are due only to one cause: Crowding and pressure against the Heart from enlarged abdominal organs, preventing the heart from working properly. No relief nor improvement can be expected unless these obstructions are removed without drugs.

Correspondence for this purpose should be addressed to Prof. R. V. Walden, Director The Walden Institute,

PROPOSE TO ABOLISH PLUMBING INSPECTOR

The office of city plumbing inspector will be abolished the first Monday of January if city council adopts an ordinance to be presented Monday by the special councilmanic committee headed by Councilman John A. White.

The committee, at a meeting Saturday afternoon, voted unanimously to ask council to abolish the plumbing inspector's office and to transfer his present powers and duties to the chief of construction.

Among other important ordinances recommended Saturday by the committee which will be presented for approval of general council Monday is one transferring the office space of city electrician and city warden; another, which places numbering of houses under supervision of the city planning commission, and a third, which requests changes in general council's order of business in regard to rules 6 and 17.

Under the ordinance concerning change in council's order of business, committee reports would be made in the order of their estimated importance, instead of in alphabetical order, as at present. The measure, which, members of the committee claim would greatly expedite all council proceedings, calls for reports of committees in the following order—finance, streets, sewer, water, police, fire, ordinance, parks, tax, sanitary, hospitals and charities, auditorium and convention, contested claims and litigations, petitions, resolutions and ordinances, charter revision, library, insurance, electric lights, electric and other railroads, benevolences and pensions, bridges, cemeteries, public schools, public improvements, purchasing, salaries, prisons, public buildings and grounds, traffic, municipal garage, printing, minutes, bureau of municipal research, freight rates and transportation and special committees.

Changes of location of the warden's and electrician's offices, and transfer of the house numbering department to the planning commission were recommended in the interest of improved public service, Mr. White stated. The electrician's office would be moved to the present location of the warden's office on the second floor, and would be directly across the hall from the construction department offices, while the warden's office would occupy the space on the third floor left vacant by transfer of the electrician's office.

Proposals to abolish the office of city marshal, and to consolidate and eliminate several councilmanic committees will be considered by the special committee during the next two weeks, and it was stated definitely that no report on either will be ready for council Monday.

VENERABLE SLAVE OF HOWELL FAMILY DIES AT AGE OF 85

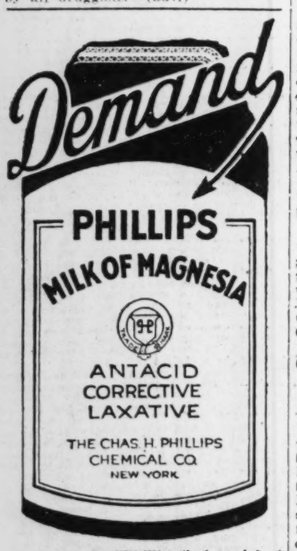

Molly Defoor, who for 85 years faithfully served three generations of the Howell family of Atlanta, died Saturday morning. She was a slave of the late Judge Clark Howell, Sr., one of the pioneer settlers of Fulton county, and after his death she had as her master Judge Howell's son, the late Evan P. Howell, father of Clark Howell, Sr., editor of The Constitution.

Judge Howell gave her 10 acres of land on the present De Foor road, where she lived until the time of her death. Five generations of Molly's family served the Howells and even now some of her kinsmen are serving members of the Howell family.

Advance Guard Prepares To Open U. D. C. Meet

Savannah, Ga., November 15.—The advance guard for the 31st annual convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy is arriving, and will get the preliminary work for the big meeting out of the way before the delegates arrive Monday and Tuesday. The opening session will be held Tuesday night.

Mrs. J. P. Higgins, of St. Louis, treasurer-general of the national organization, arrived this morning and Mrs. Frank Harrold, of Americus, president-general, is expected tonight.

Other members of the credential committee, who will arrive before the convention opens, are: Mrs. W. C. M. Merchant, of Chatham, Va.; chairman of the committee, who is expected tomorrow morning; Mrs. W. J. Woodcliff, of Muskogee, Okla., registrar-general; Mrs. L. B. Newell, of Charlotte, N. C.; Mrs. F. C. Coleman, of New Orleans; Mrs. Thomas Newbill, of Nashville, and Mrs. J. E. Aderholt, of Anniston, Ala.

Mrs. Higgins says that most of the organization's money is expended in the cause of education. The income from $73,000 worth of Liberty bonds which it owns goes to various scholarships which the U. D. C. gives to colleges throughout the country. One scholarship is at Harvard and students are being financed at Goucher, Vassar and other large colleges. There is a gift scholarship at Washington and Lee and a hero school fund of $50,000, the income of which supports a number of other students. Educational work in mountain and illiterate districts is being done, she says, by individual chapters all over the country, but the general society is spending most of its funds for college educational work.

The society has a large legacy from a union soldier who wished to perpetuate the names of Jefferson Davis, Robert E. Lee, Jubal Early and John B. Gordon, and four scholarships have been created to commemorate these names out of what is known as the Hector W. Church fund. Several loan scholarships, a university prize award, a fellowship at Peabody college, honoring S. A. Cunningham, founder of the Confederate veterans, and several other scholarships are included in the educational work done by the U. D. C.

MRS. LEE TO VISIT AT CONVENTION.

Americus, Ga., November 15.—(Special.)—Among distinguished visitors who will be at the Savannah convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy will be Mrs. Robert E. Lee, widow of the grandson of General Lee, commander-in-chief of the armies of the Confederacy. Mrs. Lee, who makes her home in Washington and Roanoke, Va., has just notified Mrs. Frank P. Harrold, president-general of the organization, of her intention to attend the Savannah meeting, and especial plans are being made to entertain her.

Mrs. Harrold, who expects the coming convention at Savannah to be one of the greatest in the history of the general organization, left Americus Saturday for that city in anticipation of the opening of the convention sessions Tuesday morning. Mrs. Harrold stated that already two invitations have been received from cities seeking the 1925 session of the convention general. These are from Los Angeles, Cal., and Hot Springs, Ark.

MONTEZUMA NAMES DELEGATES TO MEET.

Montezuma, Ga., November 15.—(Special.)—Montezuma U. D. C. delegates and alternates chosen for the general convention which will convene in Savannah Tuesday are Mrs. J. E. Hays and Mrs. Jule Felton; alternates, Mrs. R. P. Black and Mrs. Oscar McKenzie.

COUNTY WILL NOT HIRE ALIENISTS FOR M'COY

Los Angeles, November 15.—A motion that the county appoint and pay four alienists again to examine Kid McCoy, former pugilist awaiting trial for the alleged murder of Mrs. Theresa Mors here last August, was denied in superior court today. Counsel for the former boxer submitted several affidavits to show that his client is a pauper.

Judge C. S. Crail held that prosecution alienists had found McCoy sane, and that supplying him with defense alienists would be only a waste of county funds.

IMPRESSIVE SERVICES HELD FOR DR. EMERSON

Members of the Tech student body, faculty and alumni of the institution participated in the simple, but impressive, funeral services, for Dr. William Henry Emerson, late dean of the Georgia School of Technology, which were held Saturday morning from the chapel of the Tech Y. M. C. A.

The funeral cortege passed through two lines of students along North avenue from the Emerson home to the Y. M. C. A. chapel. The student council and presidents of the four classes constituted an honorary escort, together with the faculty and trustees of the institution.

Dr. Ben R. Lacy, Jr., pastor of the Central Presbyterian church, officiated at the services. Interment was in West View cemetery.

Between halves of the Tech-Vanderbilt football game Saturday afternoon the crowd of more than 15,000 stood with bare heads as a bugler, at the north end of Grant field, blew taps for Dr. Emerson.

Company To Develop Great Calcium Arsenate Deposit

In the very heart of the south, where the boll weevil rolls up an annual damage of from one to five million dollars a year, what is declared to be one of the most resourceful white arsenic deposits in the world has been discovered. It is located at Cragford, Ala., 115 miles from Atlanta. Contracts are now being arranged by the Southern Arsenic and Mineral Products company, of Delaware, for erection of a modern and fully equipped arsenic-producing plant.

While the proposed plant and quarries are located in Alabama, executive offices will be maintained in this city in the Forsyth building, it is stated by representatives of the company.

Plans for mining the large acreage at Cragford were announced here Saturday. The property consists of 1,454 acres, it is said, carrying extensive deposits of arseno-pyrite rock. Competent geologists and mining engineers, after prospecting are said to have declared it to be the largest and highest-content arsenic deposit known.

Doubly Valuable.

Discovery of the arsenic deposit in this section of the country is declared to be doubly valuable since it is in the heart of the south. D. Wight Pierce, some time ago in an issue of The Engineering and Mining Journal, deplored the "utter inadequacy of the United States arsenic supply," explaining its vital importance in preventing insect damage to crops. The Delaware company has issued a bulletin which shows that $733,552,000 is the annual estimated loss to crops on account of insects, of this amount cotton was damaged to the extent of $282,288,000.

Describing the property at Cragford, officials of the company stated that the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic railroad has lines running conveniently through it. High-tension power lines are also drawn across the proposed arsenic mine, affording ample power for the plant and other operations. Another feature of the location of the arsenic deposit is its close proximity to coal districts of Birmingham, enabling purchase of coal at lowest prices. Ample timber is available on the property for all purposes, and an abundant water supply for mill and plant operations is afforded by the Tallapoosa river and Crooked creek, both of which traverse the property.

"The properties have been prospected and approved by a number of well-known and competent geologists," representatives of the company stated Saturday, "and are known to contain a tremendous quantity of ore, which, by analytical tests, carries from 15 per cent to 55 per cent arsenic. Added to this, is an appreciable amount of lead and sulphur, all of which will be recovered by the plant. The principal product, however, will be white arsenic.

Heavy Potentiality.

"The properties are controlled by the Southern Arsenic and Mineral Products company and are capable of producing immense amounts of white arsenic for manufacture of calcium arsenate. Situated in the center of the cotton belt, with every necessary railroad and other facility for transportations to other sections of the belt, the properties are most advantageously placed by nature to furnish the supply of this much-needed and valuable product.

"With railroad passing through the property, a high-tension power line in close proximity, coal and coke easily and cheaply procurable, abundant water and timber supply—and in fact, every other consideration for economic recovery and reduction of high-grade ores, together with the increasing demand for calcium arsenate—development of these properties should prove highly profitable."

Calcium arsenate has been proven the deadliest weapon with which to combat the devastating boll weevil. Of this compound, 40 per cent is white arsenic, the remainder being lime or calcium. According to the company's formal statement, the plant will be able to handle from 200 to 500 tons of material a day. At present white arsenic is the basic material for the manufacture of calcium arsenate, quoted at around 8 cents a pound.

Executive offices of this large company will be opened in Atlanta at a date to be announced later, where the contemplated business will be handled in its entirety.

Mittens and other knit goods made in Austria are sold extensively in England nd the Netherlands.

SENATE TO PROBE PROHIBITION UNIT

Washington, November 15.—The special senate committee investigating the internal revenue bureau is expected to begin an inquiry into the prohibition unit as well as administration of the tax laws when the hearings are resumed November 19.

Senator Watson, republican, Indiana, a member of the committee said today a majority apparently favored a prohibition investigation, although he himself opposed it.

The opening up of that subject is expected to precipitate a wet and dry fight in the senate. Already industries interested in industrial alcohol are flooding senators with protests over the Cramton bill, passed in the house, which would take industrial alcohol out of the hands of the internal revenue and place it under the jurisdiction of a special board in the treasury department with additional restrictions placed on the issuance of alcohol permits.

that we have not said that these suits are "worth" so-and-so-much; or that they are of such-and-such "grade." We simply tell you the prices at which they were marked yesterday and the remarkably low prices at which they will be placed on sale tomorrow; you will find when you come in tomorrow that the price tag on each suit will show the actual reduction.

1005 finest quality Hart Schaffner & Marx and Daniels' Suits and Overcoats to be sacrificed

Here's why:

We planned at the beginning of the season to provide the people of Atlanta with the greatest stock of clothing procurable. But, as every man knows, the weather has been against us. November is well on its way, and thousands of men are still wearing light-weight spring and summer suits.

They are beginning to wonder if it will pay them to buy a new suit this year.

We have decided, therefore, to take drastic measures to move them now.

We have put prices on them that are bound to move them:

Our stocks show we have on hand about 500 more suits than we should have at this time of the year.

We claim no benevolent motive. We believe it to be good business to take our medicine now, and not carry these suits over, anyhow you'll profit by it.

And not only clothes---but shoes hats and furnishings cut too:

We haven't cut everything in the store, but to make it big for you we've doubled the number of suits, added a lot of overcoats which will be as good as gold if it ever turns cold, picked out special lots of fine furnishings, shoes and hats, and put prices on them absurdly out of keeping with their quality.

They're in our windows today---see them

SHELLY WINS OUT IN ALABAMA RACE

Montgomery, Ala., November 15.—Official returns from the general election of November 4, announced here today, disclosed that all 12 democratic presidential elector candidates were elected. Possibility that one of Alabama's votes might be cast for President Coolidge was expressed in some quarters several days ago as a result of a peculiar situation.

G. C. Bates died after his name had been printed on the ballot and was succeeded by H. I. Shelly. Probate judges were immediately informed of the change and instructed to tell the people to write the name of Shelly on the ticket. Many people neglected to do this and as a result Shelly received a small majority over the highest republican candidate, A. A. Bingham.

The official returns show that both Bates and Shelly received more votes than the highest republican. Bates was given 60,880, Shelly 51,654 and Bingham 45,005. All other democratic elector candidates received more than 112,000 votes.

DINNER ENDS REUNION OF 319 F. A. REGIMENT

With a dinner Saturday night at the Capital City club, members of the 319th Field Artillery closed a most successful one-day reunion. A luncheon earlier in the day at the Winecoff hotel had been a feature of the get-together meeting.

The unit was formed at Camp Gordon during the war and was transported overseas, where its members fought under Colonel D'Arcy Pearce. Many out-of-town members of the organization attended the reunion, as well as several Atlanta members.

18 GALLONS OF CORN FOUND IN GIRL'S TRUNK

Zola Mills, 27, of 166 1-2 Auburn avenue, was arrested early Saturday night by a raiding party headed by Acting Chief of Police E. L. Jett and Detective H. B. Lawson, and charged with violating the prohibition law when, the officers say, they found 18 gallons of corn whisky hidden in a trunk under the stairway at her home.

The young woman, when the officers first entered the house, vigorously denied that there was any liquor on the premises, but a thorough search disclosed the whisky carefully hidden in the trunk.

KILLING OF CONVICT REPORTED TO BOARD

Reports received at the offices of the state prison commission on Saturday disclosed that James Smith, negro convict serving sentence on the county chain gang, was shot and killed on Friday by H. S. Brooks, one of the guards at the camp. Affidavits enclosed with the report, together with a copy of the verdict of the coroner's jury, show that the negro was advancing on the guard with upraised shovel at the time of the killing, after he had been reprimanded for throwing rocks at another convict.

Jap Fishermen Lose Concessions On Mexican Coast

Mexicali, Lower California, Mex., November 10.—Governor Abelardo Rodriguez, of the northern district of Lower California, announced here today that he had canceled all of the extensive fishing concessions held by Japanese on the coasts of Lower California.

The governor explained his action by the statement that the Japanese had violated the terms of the concession, which now will be turned over to Mexican interests and the fish shipments diverted from Japan to other parts of Mexico and to the United States.

The principal Japanese interests in the fishing business of Gulf of California waters and on the Pacific coast of Lower California are headed by C. Kondo, who, it is reported, will appeal from the governor's action to federal authorities at Mexico City.

The concessions involved covered all fishing rights on the two coasts of the northern district of Lower California and had been extensively operated by the Japanese for a number of years.

Mexican organizations which will talk over the business have announced plans for the building of a number of fish packing houses south of Ensenada, Governor Rodriguez said.

ENDEAVORERS OPEN CARROLLTON MEET

Carrollton, Ga., November 15.—(Special)—More than 200 Presbyterian young people were present today at the opening of the annual convention of the northwest Georgia district, Christian Endeavor union, here. Ben Butler, president, is presiding. The convention will end tomorrow.

Dr. William Huck, of the Atlanta presbytery; Dr. C. F. Evans, all-south field secretary; Mrs. Butler, junior state superintendent, and Dr. Libbey, professor of mathematics at Oglethorpe university, Atlanta, and others spoke on programs during the day. A banquet tonight closed the day's activities.

All churches of Carrollton have joined in making the convention a success, out-of-town visitors being guests in homes here.

BUILD NEW SAWMILL ON SITE AT VALDOSTA

Valdosta, Ga., November 15.—(Special.)—The Jackson Lumber company, owner of a large saw mill at Ray City, have started construction of a big mill in this city. The new mill will be one of the largest and most modern in this section and will be prepared to cut and handle large quantities of hard wood as well as yellow pine. Most of the hard-wood logs will be brought to Valdosta from the Altamaha river swamp where there is an abundance of it. The new mill will be ready for operation within the next three months.

SHOTWELL PRAISES LEAGUE PROTOCOL

New York, November 15.—Calling the League of Nations protocol for compulsory arbitration between nations a revolutionary attempt to outlaw war, Professor James T. Shotwell, of Columbia university, one of the framers of a similar plan presented to the league by a group of Americans, said today that the proposal would ultimately bring the United States face to face with a decision as to its attitude.

"The protocol affects the foreign relations of the United States whether we accept it or not," he said, addressing the foreign policy associations. The rest of the world is preparing to abolish war, and thus raising an issue universal in its application. War is like slavery; the world cannot exist half free and half menacing that freedom."

Norman Angell, the English publicist, following Professor Shotwell, said European liberals had some misgivings about the protocol on the grounds that it might perpetuate existing conditions even when they were rooted in injustice. He said the owners might find themselves committed to maintaining the wrong against the right, and that then the arrangement would break down.

Cleveland Lawyer Nabbed as Forger Of U. S. War Stamps

Cleveland, Ohio, November 15.—J. V. Zottarelli, prominent attorney here, was arrested today by federal secret service agents on a warrant charging him with possessing, uttering and publishing counterfeited war savings stamps.

He has been the ring-leader, according to federal men of the Cleveland headquarters, in a notion-wide plot that was aimed to circulate millions of dollars' worth of the securities, so cleverly forged that even treasury department officials were misled for months.

Only 84 Students At Mercer University Not Church Members

Macon, Ga., November 15.—(Special.)—Only 84 out of the 857 students enrolled in Mercer university are not church members, a count made of the student body shows.

The record compiled showed also that despite the fact that Mercer is owned and operated by Georgia Baptists, more than 25 per cent of the students are of other denominations, there being seven represented.

The student distribution among denominations in the order in which they poll most follows: Baptists, 561; Baptist preference, 57; Methodists, 144; Methodist preference, 2; Presbyterians, 24; Presbyterian preference, 1; Christians, 8; Primitive Baptists, 1; Primitive Baptist preference, 2; Episcopalians, 10; Catholics, 8; Hebrew, 3.

Deacons To Aid Pastor Indicted On Rum Charge

Savannah, Ga., November 15.—The board of deacons of the Fourth Baptist church, of which Rev. R. H. Edmar, indicted in the federal court for having land he owned leased for the erection of a blind tiger still, is pastor, today issued a formal statement declaring their pastor innocent of the charge and pledging him their support and confidence.

"All the charges are malicious and untrue," the statement says.

PLANS FOR FINANCING PEACH CROP ARE MADE

Georgia's peach crop for 1925 will be financed by a federal intermediate bank, with a capital of $100,000. This was assured following a meeting at the Biltmore hotel of a committee of ten, appointed to organize the peach industry in the state.

The committee also decided to take immediate steps to insure the proper grading of the crop and standardization of packing, and to so modify the Georgia Peach Growers' Exchange as to make it a service to every grower in the state.

On a motion of C. B. Lewis, president of the Fourth National bank at Macon, W. B. Baker, chairman of the committee, was empowered to appoint seven men to act as a temporary board of directors of the proposed bank, the resolution making the provision that Mr. Baker himself and J. L. Benton, president of the Georgia Peach Growers' Exchange, serve as the directorate.

REPUBLICAN LEADERS MEET AT FRENCH LICK

French Lick, Ind., November 15.—Political interest shifted from democratic to republican leaders at French Lick today upon the arrival of Senator George H. Moses, of New Hampshire; William E. Hull, former congressman from Illinois, and Joseph Kealing, Indiana national committeeman.

An informal conference at which the selection of the republican leader in the senate was discussed, was held by the trio, it was understood. Friends of Senator James E. Watson, of Indiana, are known to be urging his selection, but it was said that Senator Charles Curtis, of Kansas, or Senator Wadsworth, of New York, had the inside track.

Senator Moses first came here several days ago, but returned east when Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts, died. Immediately after the funeral he returned to French Lick.

George Brennan, democratic political leader, of Chicago, and Walter S. Chambers, chairman of the Indiana central committee, have returned to their homes. Governor Al Smith, of New York, however, still is here.

Fascista Snatches Flag From Machine Of Red Ambassador

Rome, November 15.—For the third time within the past few months the red flag of the soviet embassy here today suffered an indignity at the hands of a Fascista. While the soviet ambassador, Dr. Constantine Youreneff, was driving in his automobile to the Chigi palace for an audience with Premier Mussolini, a Fascista of the name of Francesco Bespa, of Bologna, snatched the red emblem from the hood of the machine and threw it to the ground.

Vespa was arrested immediately and when Ambassador Youreneff, who was noticeably annoyed, arrived at the foreign ministry, Premier Mussolini expressed deep regret at the incident.

HAVERTY TO OPEN PIANO DEPARTMENT TO PUBLIC MONDAY

The Haverty Furniture company will present a handsome new piano department to the Atlanta public Monday in the large store at its corner, Edgewood avenue and Pryor street. Beautiful pianos and player-pianos, product of the George P. Bent company, will be shown in the display rooms adjoining the phonograph department. The entire output of this factory for the southeast has been made expressly for the Haverty company.

To celebrate this opening day of pianos, the Haverty company has secured "Warner's Seven Aces" to play in one-hour concerts at 12:30 and 3:30 o'clock. A fine program has been arranged by Byron Warner, violinist and director, including a new number by the Aces, the "Rock-a-Bye, My Baby Blue," and "Love Times," from the pen of an Atlanta composer, Forney Wyly.

A large order has been placed with local florists for roses, which will be given to all ladies attending the opening of the piano department.

LAST SERVICES SET FOR MRS. MATHEWS

Frostproof, Fla., November 15.—(Special.)—Funeral services for Mrs. R. P. Mathews, of Fairburn, Ga., who died here Saturday, will be conducted from her late residence at Fairburn Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Interment will be at Fairburn cemetery.

As the outgrowth of a plan sponsored by the American Legion to erect a monument over the grave of James Bethel Gresham, the first American to be killed in the world war, who is buried at Evansville, Ind., that city may become the site of an international shrine dedicated to the memory of the soldiers who gave their lives in the world war. The plan is to make the city's largest park a shrine. In the center of the park a monument would be erected to Gresham and surrounding it each state would be invited to erect a smaller memorial bearing the name of the first soldier of the state to die in battle. Each nation allied with America would also be asked to erect a monument to its first fallen. The shrine would be dedicated as a national park and camping site, with the world invited to visit and pay homage there.

A penny-in-the-slot automatic elevator has been invented.

W. C. T. U. PLANS FIGHT ON BOOTLEGGER RULE

Chicago, November 15.—Declaring that Uncle Sam and not the bootleggers "would run the country," Mrs. Ida Van Valkenburg, of New York, today told the national convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance union that if necessary a 50-year fight would be conducted to enforce prohibition.

"Who's going to run the country?" she asked. "Uncle Sam or the bootleggers? We say Uncle Sam. We fought 50 years to win prohibition and we'll fight 50 years more if necessary to have it enforced."

"The people of Massachusetts," said Mrs. Jeannette Mann, of that state, "have voted in a dry governor, two dry senators and an enforcement act. When I told a newsboy that they were going to adopt a law to do away with what he called that 'booze stuff,' he said, 'they ought to, lady; it's all to the bad.'"

Mrs. Mary Sibbett, of Kansas, recalling her experience as an organizer of the union in the mining communities of her state in the early days of the fight for state prohibition and law enforcement, said that at first no place seemed available for her speeches at Galena, Kas., except a billiard hall. Its proprietor did not know whether she would use his place, she said, but she readily accepted, although told that a "joint" was running in full blast just opposite.

"I asked the saloonkeeper opposite to close during the meetings and he did," she added. "I went at is for an hour at a stretch, holding meeting after meeting with large audiences. Then the churches invited me to hold meetings in their edifices, but I preferred the billiard hall."

SUN URGES COMMITTEE TO UNIFY GOVERNMENT

Aboard the Steamship Shinyo Maru, Approaching Shanghai, November 15.—(By the Associated Press.)—Dr. Sun Yat-Sen, military head of the government of South China, cruising from Canton to Tientsin, where he has been invited to sit at a conference which has for its object the unification of war-torn China, today discussed his aim with a correspondent of the Associated Press.

Dr. Sun declared he was in favor of the appointment of a national committee to bring about a strong unified government. Further than this he said, China's independence was in the hands of her people. He was accompanied by a large staff of military men and economic experts.

The party will leave the Shinyo Maru at Shanghai and transfer to another vessel Tientsin-bound.

Canton, Dr. Sun said, was recovering from the disorders which resulted from clashes between soldiers and merchants there last month. He said his provincial allied forces at Canton were faithful and that order was being restored.

"LOST VIGOR RESTORED IN 24 HOURS"

"Glands Awakened in One Day" Is the Amazing Statement of a 76-Year-Old Veteran.

Lost vigor, deadened glands and nerves, and that weak, worn-out, depressed and half-alive feeling need not be dreaded any longer since the discovery of a well known chemist. Now it is possible for those who feel "prematurely old" to become "rejuvenated" and regain the "vital force of youth," often in a day's time, with Mando Formula, is the amazing statement of one who has taken the treatment. This famous discovery is bringing "renewed youth" and "strength" to thousands where everything else had failed.

"I want to say that my 'lost vigor' was restored and 'glands renewed' in twenty-four hours," says D. B. Peake, of Kansas City, Mo. "Today I am 76, but I don't feel a day over 40. Before I started taking the treatment I felt I was an old, 'wornout' man; but now I am enjoying a remarkable 'gland restoration' and am convinced my 'rejuvenation' is complete and permanent. May God's blessing rest on the discoverer of such a boon to humanity."

This wonderful formula, prepared by one of the largest laboratories in the world and generally known as Mando, is easily used at home and seems to work like magic in its rapidity on people of all ages and sexes.

No matter how bad your condition, no matter what your age or occupation, no matter what you have tried, if you are lacking in "vigor" and the "vital force of youth" we are so confident Mando Formula will restore you that we offer to send a large $3.50 bottle for only $1.95 on 14 days' free trial. If the results are not satisfactory and you are not more than pleased in every way, it costs you nothing. Send no money—just your name and address to F. L. Carlin, 646 Baltimore Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., and the treatment will be mailed at once. Use it according to simple directions. If at the end of 14 days you are not showing "wonderful improvement" and "rejuvenation," just send it back and your money will be refunded without question. This offer is fully guaranteed, so write today and give this "remarkable formula" a trial.—(adv.)

COMB SAGE TEA IN FADED OR GRAY HAIR

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

Well-known druggists say everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.—(adv.)

LABOR CONVENTION WILL OPEN MONDAY

El Paso, Texas, November 15.—(By the Associated Press.)—An understanding between exponents of conflicting views on the future political activities of the American Federation of Labor stimulated final preparations today for the organization's 45th annual convention, beginning here next week.

Under a plan agreed to by virtually every group represented in this week's pre-convention gatherings and departmental meetings, a special report of the executive council of the federation on the election campaign will be presented to an early session of the convention. The report, which will be framed with a view to making it acceptable to the entire membership, likely will be approved by the convention without serious opposition from the floor, leaders said.

High officials of numerous affiliated bodies who have presented their views anticipate in the council's report an emphatic reaffirmation of the federation's policy of strict nonpartisanship, together with a recommendation that the way be left open, through special action by the executive council, to place before the membership in presidential campaigns detailed statements of the records of all candidates.

Reports of the harmonious political discussions lifted foreboding clouds from the convention horizon.

Colorful ceremonies have been planned for the opening of the convention Monday simultaneously with the annual gathering of the Mexican Confederation of Labor at Juarez, Mexico, across the Rio Grande. Elaborate formalities at the ends of the international bridge between El Paso and Juarez will symbolize the ties of friendship and good will between the two bodies.

Tentative plans have been made for two joint sessions of the Mexican and American conventions, one on each side of the Rio Grande.

After adjournment of the American convention, probably about November 30, a group of officials and delegates representing the entire labor movement of the United States will go by special train to Mexico City for the inauguration of President-elect Calles. The American group will also attend the convention of the Pan-American Federation of Labor, opening in the Mexican capital December 3. Samuel Gompers, president of the American federation, also is president of the Pan-American federation.

The concluding session of the union label trades department convention last night approved a national advertising campaign for the union label. Officers of the department estimated that upwards of $100,000 would be required for the plan outlined.

$30 IS OBTAINED BY NEGRO BANDIT IN STORE HOLD-UP

Entering the establishment alone, a young negro man late Saturday night held up three customers in the drygoods store at 164 Edgewood avenue, locked the proprietor, Jack Rosenburg, in a closet and rifled the cash drawer of $30 in cash, according to police.

The lone bandit made his appearance in the store with an automatic in each hand, both cocked, and ordered the four occupants of the establishment to hold their arms above their heads. Rosenburg was locked in a closet in the rear while the negro helped himself to the contents of the cash register and departed by the front door, leaving the bewildered customers to free the proprietor from the closet.

6 PERSONS ARRESTED IN ORLANDO RUM RAID

Orlando, Fla., November 15.—Six persons were taken to Tampa this morning by United States Marshal Price, following a liquor raid conducted in this city last night by three federal officers. The officers have been working in Orlando for some time, it is said, and started their cleanup campaign with the arrest of Bob Warren who was kept in the city jail, pending the arrival of the marshal.

Warrants were served on five others charging them with selling and possessing intoxicating liquors. It was said by Chief Eagerton, of the Orlando police department, that about 50 quarters were taken in the raid.

Those taken later and carried to Tampa by the marshal were Jess Warren and Sam Warren, who were taken in about 7:30 o'clock this morning; H. O. Mattox, Richard Collins and Ben Williams, the latter a negro.

HOLD RATE HEARING HERE DECEMBER 15

Washington, November 15.—A further hearing in the interstate commerce commission's southern class rate investigation will be held December 15 at Atlanta.

The hearing was called by the commission so that introduction could be made of the results of traffic tests conducted in April to give the carriers an opportunity to ascertain the effects upon their revenues of rates recommended in the proceeding.

Supplementary briefs on the results of the traffic test will be accepted by the commission up until January 5.

Oral argument in the proceedings was assigned for January 14 to 16, inclusive, at Washington before the commission.

The hearing in Atlanta on December 15 will be in the federal court rooms and will be a presentation of railroad reports as to the effects upon their revenues of the class rates previously recommended by the interstate commerce commission, according to local traffic officials. No definite action is expected to be taken for some time, they said.

Investigation of southern class rates was requested in 1922 by a joint resolution of southern shippers and the Southern railway and the tentative rates arrived at last March. Railroads asked six months and then some additional time to make a test of these rates upon their revenues and the hearing on December 15 is to be a report of the effect.

Turk Revolt Against French.

(Elizabeth Knowlton, traveler and author, in November Current History Magazine.

Nominally a protectorate under a Moslem bey, Tunisia is actually governed in all important matters by the French resident general. In Tunisia 1,891,000 Mohammedans, with their eyes on the east, and 84,000 Italians, active and rich traders, with their eyes on Mussolini and his reputed policy of "the Mediterranean an Italian lake," are governed by France with a settled population of only 54,000 Frenchmen. Various tactless acts have increased friction. Compulsory French in European schools has annoyed the Italian element. Another important and powerful part of the community, the Jews, are violently protesting against being tried by Moslem rather than European or Jewish courts. The French in Algeria write openly of the desirability of bringing Tunisia under the French flag. Some French residents in Tunisia hope for this change of status, and look on the proposed French North African Customs union as an entering wedge. The Moslems themselves, realizing that their native prince, the constant reminder of their vanished rule, is now only a figurehead under France, are in a continual state of irritation. This at least is true of the educated leaders, most of whom have absorbed their nationalism, along with other European ideas, in France or under French auspices in the Lycee Carnot at Tunis. The main thing that has helped France to maintain her rule so far is that the great mass of the common people are politically apathetic and indifferent to whom they pay their taxes. That it is possible, however, to rouse them from this state by agitation, was sufficiently shown by the outbreak that took place two years ago. Very little was ever known by the outside world of this rising and very little is said of it now in Tunisia.

There is no proper period except fall in which to plant peonies, which have come to rival the rose in beauty and popularity. Few flowers are easier to grow or are more permanent when once established. Some kinds are very expensive, but many of the best are cheap. Old clumps in the garden can readily be divided, but peonies do not require separation very often. The one point to remember when planting them is that the crowns should be just two inches below the surface of the ground, and that no manure should come in contact with the roots.

To cool an oven while baking, keep the door shut, put in the damper of the oven fine and if the oven is still too hot, remove one of the rings of the hot plate. This will reduce the temperature quickly without admitting cold air to the oven.

POLICE OF CHICAGO NAB 64 GANGSTERS

Chicago, November 15.—Police raids last night and today in response to Mayor Dever's demand to rid the city of gunmen yielded 64 arrests of alleged gangsters, many of them carrying revolvers. Only a few of the known underworld characters were caught in the raid, none of the more notorious gunmen being among those caught.

The mayor's order followed the assassination of Dion O'Bannion, florist and leader of gangsters, whose funeral yesterday was probably the greatest display of wealth and power the underworld of Chicago gave.

Police still complained today of lack of cooperation on the part of the courts in explanation of why gunmen have flourished here.

Chief Collins complained yesterday of what some of his men called "rubber stamp" judges ready to issue writs of habeas corpus if the police arrest anyone without placing a charge against him at once.

"Get after the killers anyhow," was Mayor Dever's reply.

WAR DEPARTMENT SENDS OUT PLEA FOR 'SOUVENIRS'

Washington, November 15.—The war department has issued an appeal to war-time officers, field clerks and enlisted men of the army in France, requesting that they forward to the department any papers they may have which would throw light upon the participation in the war of the units to which they were assigned.

"No war-time papers should be thrown away," the department declares. 'Even an informal note or a rough sketch may be the key to an important sitation."

The papers are desired in order that the historical section of the general staff may complete a series of monographs covering the participation of the American forces in the various operations of the world war and also that "all orders, reports, diaries, memorandums, maps, telegrams, messages, informal notes, etc., bearing upon activities or operations may be with the records of the proper units on file in the adjutant general's office."

EAST POINT PLANS FOR SPECIAL AFFAIR

Completion of organization plans, election and installation of officers and an old-fashioned oyster supper will feature a meeting Monday night of 200 East Point citizens, at the East Point Masonic temple, according to announcement Saturday by R. E. Leatherman, state commander of Georgia Maccabees. The occasion is formal organization of a Maccabee tent at East Point.

Prominent East Point citizens, high state officials of the organization and others will attend the East Point gathering, it is said. The crack drill team of Atlanta tent, No. 18, will have charge of ritual features and initiation ceremonies.

East Point citizens, representing all civic organizations in the city, and leading business men and city officials have joined in an effort to make the Maccabees the outstanding East Point club, it is said. Dr. J. A. Yeast is chairman of the arrangements committee, with Ed Humphrey, Howard Carmichael, Charles H. Livsy, Rev. W. S. Hamilton, Andrew J. McCoy, L. L. Phillips, C. W. Martin, D. W. F. Cross and others assisting in plans to make the evening an event of unusual interest.

The move to organize a Maccabee tent in East Point was sponsored and led without assistance of state officials of the order, it is said, and members, prospective members and others interested in the move have made all plans and affiliated of their own accord, it is pointed out.

State Commander Leatherman, M. D. Gleason, traffic manager for the southeast for the 1925 motorcade to the national convention, a number of state deputies and others high in Maccabee circles of the state have been invited and will attend, according to the announcement.

The meeting will start at 7 o'clock, under present plans, with conferring of degrees, election and formal installation of officers, and followed by an oyster supper, during which brief addresses will be made.

NINE FOUND GUILTY OF ROBBING MAILS

Quincy, Ills., November 15.—William P. Colbeck, St. Louis politician; David Robinson, Charles Smith, Oliver Daugherty and Steve Ryan, alleged gangsters of St. Louis, and Frank Eppelsheimer, Frank Hackethal, Charles Lanham, president of the Team Transfer union, of St. Louis, and Gus Dietmeyer were found guilty by a federal jury today of the robbery of $55,000 from the mail at Staunton, in 1923.

Colbeck, Robinson, Smith, Daugherty, Ryan, Eppelsheimer, Hackethal and Lanham were immediately sentenced to 39 years in prison and fined $4,000 each, while Dietmeyer was sentenced to 35 years in prison.

COUNCIL WILL ACT ON LANDING FIELD

With little other than routine business scheduled to come before city council Monday, an outstanding feature will be disposal of a special committee's recommendation on a site for Atlanta's municipal airplane landing field.

Other matters to be considered include several measures passed by council two weeks ago, which have been vetoed by Mayor Sims. It is expected attempts will be made to override at least two, and possibly more, of the chief executive's vetoes.

Dr. C. C. Aven, councilman from the third ward, chairman of the landing field committee, said Saturday that his committee has decided to recommend purchase of the Nichols property on Brown's Mill road for $65,000.

Propose Lease Plan.

As that amount is not available at present, it will be proposed that council lease the field for four years, paying one-fourth of the purchase price now and the remainder during the tenure of the four-year lease.

The committee reports that the field, which consists of 208 acres, is admirably suited for a landing field, as, in addition to its natural advantages, it has excellent railroad facilities. The site was been approved by Colonel Charles H. Danforth, head of the air forces of the Fourth Corps area.

Some opposition to selection of the Brown's Mill road site may develop, although it is thought that a sufficient number of council members favor the selection to insure its passage.

Try to Override Vetoes.

It is practically certain that attempts will be made to override vetoes on the bill providing for increase in size of several important committees to 12 members each, and also on the resolution asking the legislature to rescind its action authorizing council to call a referendum on the question of abolishing the present method of election of members of the board of education.

The ordinance asking increase of the number of members on certain committees, sponsored by Councilman R. F. Pennington, would have affected committees on police department, fire department, sanitary affairs, hospitals and charities, park department and waterworks.

With 12 members of council voting against the ordinance when it was adopted two weeks ago, and only 13 votes required to sustain a veto, it is extremely unlikely that the mayor's action will be reversed.

School Board Referendum.

However, a different situation is faced on the school board referendum resolution, and its backers claim enough votes to override the veto.

Council will be called on to decide a peculiar case Monday, as a divided report of the tax committee on a request of Foote & Davies, a well-known Atlanta printing concern, for reduction of taxes, means that council must render the decision. It is customary for council to adopt committee reports, but in this instance, the vote of the tax committee was two to two. Foote & Davies ask that the assessment on their machinery, now set at $105,000, be reduced to $50,000.

Several street paving bonds also will be presented for approval of council, and recommendations for award of several paving contracts will be taken up.

Egyptians Urge Premier Zaghoul Not to Withdraw

Cairo, Egypt, November 15.—(By The Associated Press.)—Demonstrations of sympathy by the populace of Cairo were held here today after the surprising news became known that Zaghoul Pasha, the Egyptian premier, had presented the resignation of his cabinet in the chamber of deputies.

The chamber had met to elect a president and other officers, and nobody expected anything unusual, but the premier, in a brief statement, announced he had informed the king he was too tired to continue in office and must tender his resignation. The premier added that he hoped to be happier as an ordinary member of parliament. With a wave of his hand he left the chamber, accompanied by his ministers.

The members appeared to be stunned, but soon adopted a vote of confidence in Zaghoul by an overwhelming majority, and then adjourned.

The premier and his ministers repaired to the senate, where a similar statement was made by Zaghoul.

Efforts are being made to induce the cabinet to withdraw its resignation.

To a number of deputies and senators who visited him tonight for this purpose, Zaghoul said: "I cannot work amid intrigues."

This was interpreted as showing that in addition to divergencies of opinion in the cabinet itself, there have been attempts to undermine Zaghoul's authority.

ASKS CHURCH AID IN PEACE EFFORT

Buffalo, November 16.—Entrance of the United States into the permanent court of justice, moral support of the protocol adopted by the assembly of the league of nations at Geneva, participation in a disarmament conference at Geneva in 1925, and recognition of the league of nations as a "going concern" were the four chief points of a program outlined last week by the Rev. Dr. William P. Merrill, of New York, to be urged on the United States by the religious forces of the nation.

Dr. Merrill delivered the keynote address at the opening session of the 116th annual peace congress of the American council of the world alliance for international friendship through the churches. He is president of the council and pastor of the Brick Presbyterian Church in New York City.

Urges Coolidge to Act.

Dr. Merrill's recommendations were:

"First, entrance of the United States into the permanent court of justice.

"The president has unequivocally and repeatedly put himself on record in favor of this action," he said. "The best thing about a silent man is that when he speaks that commits him, and Mr. Coolidge is conspicuous for the tenacity with which he pursues an objective until he reaches it. We should confidently and strongly call for the definite action.

"Second, we should call on the American government and people to give thoughtful consideration to the protocol recently adopted at Geneva. Whether America can or cannot join in its ratification, America should understand its provisions and give moral support to this most significant step ever taken courageously to cope with the menace of war.

Says U. S. Should Be There.

"Third, we should call on the government to accept heartily the invitation to participate in the conference on disarmament to be held in Geneva in June, 1925. If it is held, the United States should be there. Aside from all other considerations, it would be an everlasting disgrace to be put before the world as willing to take part in such a conference only when we call it, and only when it meets in our country.

"Fourth, we should call for a frank recognition of the league of nations as a going concern, and an important one; a body with which the United States feels honored to have dealings, and for the fullest possible cooperation with the league consistent with non-membership in it."

Early Doom of Rum Row Seen As New 'Dry' Funds Are Used

Increased Facilities for Coast Guard Mean Disaster to Runners, Says Treasury.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, November 16.—The administration is making every effort with the means at its command to break up the rum fleets stationed off American shores and believes it can end the "national disgrace," the treasury declared tonight in a formal statement embodying a report by the coast guard covering operations in October.

The statement announced that there was an increase in the number of seizures of rum-running boats last month and added that the coast guard was making satisfactory progress in combating the rum fleets. Plans of the guard, for which money was provided near the close of the last congress, are rapidly maturing, the treasury said, adding that with increased facilities which are supplied under the extra appropriations, the guard will serve as an effective weapon against illicit trade.

Many Norwegian Ships.

Special attention is given in the coast guard's reports to the part steamers flying Norwegian flags are taking in attempts to bring liquor into the United States. The coast guard said it was "surprising" to note the number, enumerating and naming ten of them as recently lined up in the rum fleet off New York and New Jersey.

"The administration is determined," the statement said, "to make every effort with the material it has to combat and, if possible, to break up the rum fleets which have become a national disgrace off the coasts. The completing routing of rum row will take time, but as increased facilities foreign ships that had been acting as are put into operation, the end of rum row is forecast."

The statement said that seven large supply ships for the rum fleet had been captured under the authority of the treaties ratified by the last congress.

Norway Is Dry.

"One of the largest seizures made during the month," it added, "was that of the Norwegian steamer Sagatind, with 38,000 cases of whisky aboard. This steamer had transferred part of its cargo to a motor boat having a speed of 40 miles an hour, before the coast guard seized her, 22 miles off the New Jersey coast.

"It is surprising to note the number of Norwegian vessels engaged in the liquor traffic. Ten vessels under the Norwegian flag recently have been noted in the rum fleets off the Atlantic coast.

"Prohibition is in force in Norway with respect to spirituous liquors. If 16 large American vessels were stationed off the coast of Norway, engaged in smuggling liquor into that country, Norwegians might have a different view of the situation. It would seem that steps might be taken by the two countries to stop this illicit traffic."

Seized Lists Are Useful.

Discussing problems faced by the coast guard, the report said that the "worst localities" were widely scattered and that thus far it had been impossible to attack the problem of stopping the inflow completely in all of them at once. But the coast guard has hopes that when its full complement of boats and men is available it will be able to send most of the rum runners away with their cargoes still aboard.

Coast guard officials regard as of great importance information gathered in confiscated papers taken with the rum boats. Disclosures in those documents gave, the report said, "a rather complete list of the persons actually financing and directing the smuggling operations." With this information, the coast guard has been able to lay its plans for campaigns against smuggling operations. All of this information is retained for those directing the fight against the smugglers, and its use to date was described as "extremely effective."

Names Worst Localities.

The report gave a detailed statement of the troublesome locations in which the smuggling operations have been largest, enumerating among them the New England coast, the numerous rivers, bays and channels of Massachusetts, Connecticut and Long Island and the long coast line of New Jersey, Delaware and Chesapeake bay. The rum fleet off New York, a fixture for three years, has utilized all of these in sporadic operations, it was asserted.

In the south Atlantic, the report mentioned the Bahama group of islands and the intricate network of Florida keys as providing fertile grounds for the bottle fishers, as well as providing ingress and egress for the small and fast motor boats carrying their cargoes of illicit goods.

The channels and bayous of Louisiana offer another source of trouble for the coast guard and a blessing for the "rummies," the report said, and it also named the rum fleet location off San Francisco as becoming a scene for greater trouble in checking incoming liquor.

American Scientist Attempts Transmutation of Mercury

:: TESTS GERMAN'S CLAIM OF ALCHEMY ::

New York, November 16.—The Scientific American announced last week that it would direct an attempt to convert quicksilves2into gold, during a series of experiments already in progress under Professor H. H. Sheldon, department of physics, New York university.

"We believe the effort will be successful," said E. E. Free, editor of the publication. "The experiments probably will take from two to four months."

He explained that Professor Sheldon's efforts would be directed toward confirming, by a different process, results said to have been achieved by Professor Adolph Miethe during the past year at Charlottenburg Technical college at Berlin. Meantime, a duplicate of the apparatus used by Professor Miethe is being sent here for study.

The apparatus now being set up at New York university consists of chiefly of a quartz lamp which incloses various tubes and electric paraphernalia. The lamp will hold about a half ounce of quicksilver vapor.

"Knock Off" One Electron.

The theory is that a current of electricity, of 170 votes and an amperage to be determined, will "crack" the atoms of the quicksilver, "knock off" the 80th planetary electron which differentiates quicksilver from gold and thus leave atoms with a planetary system of 79 electrons—pure gold.

The 80th electron will have to be knocked off from billions of atoms if the expirement with the half ounce of quicksilver is successful. For, as Mr. Free said, "in the gold it takes to plate the head of a pin there are atoms enough so each person in the world could have several thousand of them."

Professor Miethe's reputed discovery that quicksilver could be transformed into gold was an accident.

Using a quartz lamp and quicksilver vapor he was seeking to determine the effect of violet electric rays upon the vapor. After 200 hours of operation his apparatus became clogged. He took it apart and discovered its tubes were choked with pure gold.

A repetition of the experiment brought the same result, according to German scientists.

Mr. Free whose articles on the Bohr theory of atomic structure have been widely quoted by American scientific publications declined to predict what effect upon the financial structure of the nations the cheap manufacture of gold might have. In the industrial field, however, there certainly would be a "revolution," he said, "for gold would replace copper in the making of chemical stills, telegraph and telephone wires, instruments and machinery, in numerous instances."

"We believe our experiments will be successful," he continued. "Accurate records will be kept so that an estimate of the cost of producing gold may be made. We shall make the best possible estimate of the time—if ever—when the world will have to face the threat of cheap gold. The Scientific American's experiment will be, in a sense, a new attack on the chief problem of the ancient alchemists.

Said Cost Was Prohibitive.

"The extent to which artifical gold will be used in industry and in the arts will depend, in large measure, upon its cost. The object of our undertaking, therefore, is not merely to make gold but to discover what it will cost to make gold.

Berlin dispatches at the time of Professor Miethe's announcement of his discovery quoted him as saying that his method of changing quicksilver to gold could have no immeditae economic effect because of the prohibitive cost of the process. Two million dollars' worth of electric current would be needed to manufacture a pound of gold, he said, basing his estimate on the expense of his experiments with small quantities.

Opinions of scientists were divided at the time concerning the commercial importance of the discovery. Some held that the process could never become practicable, while others argued that with improved apparatus the cost of production could be lowered materially.

LEGION CHIEF URGES DRAFT OF EVERY MAN

Tallahassee, Fla., November 16.—The universal draft to bring every man into service, whether available for the fighting ranks or not, was advocated in a joint Armistice day-Florida centennial celebration speech here by Major James W. Morris, state commander of the American Legion. This step should be taken, Major Morris declared, in order to place every man under classification and thus eliminate the possibility of leaving the greedy behind to take advantage of war-time conditions to profiteer and grow wealthy by means of unfair and un-American practices.

The state commander's speech was one of the high spots in the day's centennial celebration, given over almost entirely to the local post of the legion. Soon after he had completed his address Major Morris hurried to St. Mark's in an automobile, where he was to board a seaplane for a flight of about 200 miles to Tampa, in order to reach that city in time for a legion celebration there tonight.

Referring to the purposes of the legion, Major Morris declared that it did not in any sense seek to glorify war, but was maintained rather to keep up the peace-time morale, in order that the country might be prepared in event of war. He expressed strong approval of the league of nations, and deplored what he termed a failure of the United States to adhere to the 5-5-3 naval agreement between this country, Great Britain and Japan. He also voiced approval of the defense act, now before congress.

The United States, the major believed, should adopt a strict immigration policy that would permit the taking in only of those races assimilable in this country.

Captured Forger Attempts Suicide In Jail at Miami

Miami, Fla., November 15.—William H. Harkins, "master forger," awaiting the arrival of officers from Fort Worth and Salt Lake City, attempted to commit suicide in his cell in the Miami city jail this afternoon.

He used his underwear for a rope and tied it to the upper part of the cell.

Discovery of the attempt was made by a detective who searched the cell while Harkins was conferring with his attorney in the office of the police station.

Admission was made to Chief of Police Quigg later by Harkins that he had tried to hang himself, but that the underwear would not sustain his weight.

He said he made the attempt in a fit of despondency because "everything seemed to be going against" him.

Harkins was arrested at a hotel here Wednesday.

CERAMICS BUILDING IS OPENED FORMALLY

Formal opening of the new ceramics building of the Georgia School of Technology was held Saturday at noon on the campus of the school. The address of the occasion was delivered by Dr. Arthur Watts, head of the ceramics department of Ohio State university. Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Tech, also made a short address.

Attending the formal opening were more than 75 spectators, who were especially-invited guests. They came from all quarters of the country and represented over a dozen different states, according to Dr. Brittain.

The exercises, which were to have been held at 11 o'clock, were postponed an hour on account of the funeral of Dr. W. H. Emerson, beloved member of the faculty of Tech since organization of the institution.

KLAN AND OPPONENTS CLASH IN COLUMBUS

Columbus, Ohio, November 15.—Two men were held in jail here today for investigation in connection with a disturbance between alleged klan and anti-klan forces in a local dance hall last night which resulted in two men being stabbed. One probably seriously.

Harry France, one of the two held for investigation, was stabbed in the abdomen when fighting broke out following eviction of an unknown man from the hall. Clarence McCammon, salesman for a Ku Klux Klan publication, is alleged to have caused the eviction of the man. McCammon is being held.

Arthur Bard, 23, was taken to a hospital with wounds in the head. Fighting was stopped only after four policemen had herded the crowd into the street.

Flurry of Snow Fails To Hinder Coolidge Cruise

Washington, November 15.—In the first snowstorm of the season, President and Mrs. Coolidge started down the Potomac river this afternoon aboard the yacht Mayflower for a week-end cruise.

The presidential party filed aboard the vessel by way of a covered gangplank to a lower deck and none had appeared on the slush-covered upper deck when the yacht nosed her way out of sight in the driving snow.

Mr. Coolidge has shown a liking for the river trips, and the sudden change in the weather made no change in his plans for the cruise. Despite the storm he intended to remain out until Monday morning.

Trainer Taken to Hospital.

Moss, whose fight with the furious "Bruin" probably saved the life of some of the occupants of the crowded theater, was carried to Grady hospital, where his injuries were treated. His condition is regarded as serious.

The trainer, in accounting for the unwonted attack of his bear, said that "Bruin," without his knowledge, had developed "scatterbrain," a malady common among wild animals when kept in captivity for a long time.

The carcass of the dead bear was carried to Johnson's market on Decatur street and will be cut up into bear steak.

Bed-Ridden Boys Organize Troop Of Boy Scouts

Every boy at some time craves mightily to become one among that vast army of Boy Scouts. He wants to master that snappy three-fingered salute. He wants to be prepared, and to swing a swell looking knife on his belt. He'd like mighty well to know all about building fires with sticks and everything.

Well, the smiling little fellows out at the Scottish Rite hospital are 100 per cent American boys, too. And that explains why 10 of them have made application to become members of a regular, bona fide, honest-to-goodness Boy Scout troop. They were accepted.

True that some of them are bed-ridden, unable to move from a prostrate position upon their backs. All of them are crippled. But they are boys and they know how to smile. Not only that, but they've been getting in a lot of extra practice tying "tenderfoot" knots.

These boys form troop No. 44, if anybody asks you. Joseph Oglesby has been named scout master. On November 22, at the big Boy Scout field review, troop No. 44 will be represented 100 per cent, it is announced. Some will be on crutches, and some in rolling chairs. But you should see these Scottish Rite scouts tie knots—and smile.

Political meetings out of doors have been found the best way to reach the people in England and ex-Premier Baldwin and Lord Birkenhead recently held open air meetings.

A Great Car Made Still Greater

When you think of the Chandler today, you naturally think in terms of the Traffic Transmission, inasmuch as its amazing advantages rank it as one of the great advances in automotive design.

Traffic Transmission
(Campbell Patent)

But even before the Traffic Transmission was perfected, the supremacy of Chandler performance and the soundness of Chandler values had been clearly established.

That the Traffic Transmission made it impossible to clash gears—

—that any driver could change instantly and silently from low to high or high to low, under all conditions was only another reason for becoming a Chandler owner—

—a reason, perhaps more spectacular but certainly no sounder, than the masterly performance of the Pikes Peak Motor, the smartness and comfort of fine Fisher bodies, and the rugged construction that has sent so many Chandlers far past the 100,000 mile mark.

Genuine super-size balloon tires are standard equipment on all Chandler models. Four-wheel brakes are optional at a moderate additional charge. Five open and five closed types—ranging in price from $1585 for the touring car to $2195 for the seven-passenger sedan, f. o. b. Cleveland.

Couzens To Search For Irregularities In Dry Department

Plans Publicity Crusade Into Doings of Enforcement Division—Prohibition Senators Object.

BOARD MAY TACKLE PROBLEM THIS WEEK

Wets in Senate Believe Probe Will Disclose Conditions "Seriously Discomforting" to Opponents.

Washington, November 15.—Senator James R. Couzens is on his way to Washington to plan an investigation of the internal revenue bureau, which ultimately will develop into a crusade of publicity into the conduct of the prohibition enforcement unit of the treasury.

Couzens is chairman of a committee appointed during the last session of congress with power to look into tax matters.

The senator interprets his mandate of investigation as authorization to probe the administration of prohibition enforcement since the Volstead law became effective, and his intention to do so will provide an opportunity for the first real fight between the senate wets and dries since the sale of alcoholic beverages became illegal.

Irregularities Suspected.

Couzens' committee will first investigate the income tax departments of the treasury, for which purpose the committee was specifically authorized by the senate. With that matter out of the way Couzens, himself a moderate wet who was reelected to the senate despite the opposition of the Anti-Saloon league in Michigan, will go after the enforcement officials.

Serious irregularities exist in the enforcement bureau, Couzens believes, and he proposes to expose them.

Politically dry senators have determined strenuously to resist an assault on the enforcement bureau.

Resumes Session Wednesday.

The Couzens committee resumes its sessions here Wednesday and is expected to get around to the liquor control question within a few days after convening.

Involved in the same squabble is the Crampton bill, passed last session by the house and now before the senate. This measure would more stringently regulate the manufacture and sale of industrial alcohol and is being opposed by all except the bone-dry clique.

Manufacturers of industrial alcohol have bombarded the senate office building with letters contending that the bill is opposed to the spirit of the Volstead act and that its passage would mark a reversal of the congressional policy to encourage the supervised distribution of industrial alcohol. The Cramton bill would drive them out out of business, the manufacturers say.

Ex-Chairman Hits Back.

Senator James Watson, of Indiana, who resigned the chairmanship of the committee now headed by Couz-

Game Woodsman Battles Grizzly But Loses Life

Body Crushed and Torn Tells Story of Grim Tussle in Forest.

Fort William, Ont., November 15. Evidence of a lone death struggle with a wounded grizzly bear was found today when trappers stumbled onto the body of A. Waino, French woodsman, in the wilds of northern Ontario.

Mangled, crushed and partly devoured by the bear or wolves, the body was discovered lying in a crumpled heap under a pine tree. Clenched in the trapper's hands were handfuls of black hair, evidently torn from the bear's hide in a last effort to free himself from the death hug.

His bones were crushed and flesh was torn to shreds.

Blood stains found on trees and dead leaves for 25 feet around told its tale to the trappers who made the discovery.

Waino left his cabin three days ago to set his winter traps. Search was started for him when woodsmen became alarmed at his failure to return. They found his body under a giant tree at the edge of a clearing where man and bear had fought to the death.

Waino was a big, powerful man, but not very experienced as a trapper. It is generally believed that he met the bear on the trail, wounded it with his shot, and was charged, before he had time to reload his gun.

Blood stains on a short woodman's ax testified that he had tried to fight off the infuriated beast.

UNCERTAIN STATUS BAR TO PROGRESS, FILIPINO ASSERTS

Resident Commissioner Tells Cornell Students American Duty Is to Settle Political Destiny.

Ithaca, N. Y., November 15.—The humanitarian duty of the American people is to settle, "once and for all," the political destiny of the Philippine islands, Pedro Guevara, resident commissioner for the islands at Washington, declared tonight in an address to members and guests of the Filipino society at Cornell university.

Mr. Guevara said if he were an American he would consider it a patriotic duty to oppose any plan purporting to make the islands a state of the union. If this were done, he added, it would impose a burden of responsibility upon the United States "without any historical aim," and also bar the islands from working out "their own salvation."

"Sacrifice With No Benefit."

To maintain the islands as a part of the union, he continued, would require a great amount "of sacrifice of life and resources with no positive benefit to the American people."

If the islands were situated on the borders of America, he said, they would seek to join the United States, but "conditions and circumstances are such that they cannot in justice to all concerned aspire to such a status." The islands, however, he added, want to be of service to America in "recognition of her unselfish leadership during their providential association."

"Filipinos want their country," he continued, "to be the bulwark of American institutions, ideals and principles; they want their country to be the outpost of the American civilization in the Far East; they will see to it that the Philippines will be the vigilant sentinel of American interests in those latitudes.

Hindered by Uncertainty.

"Such aims and purposes could only be accomplished through the building up of the islands as an independent nation; and with the prestige of the United States the world would be warned that their interests are common."

The uncertain political status of the islands, he concluded, has hindered economic progress, and a trade relationship with the United States "founded upon sympathetic cooperation" is the "supreme need of the hour."

NOT ON SCHEDULE FOR NEXT CONGRESS.

Washington, November 15.—Administration officials do not expect the question of Philippine independence to be sharply agitated during the coming short session of congress.

Secretary Weeks said today he had heard no intimation that the subject would be taken up during the session for consideration.

At the time of the visit of the Philippine independence commission to this country some months ago the commissioners were informed that the Coolidge administration would not favorably consider proposals for independence legislation unless it could be shown beyond question that the project put forward had the overwhelming backing of the Philippine people themselves.

So far the development of public opinion on the question in the islands has not reached a point, as it is understood here, where it is believed the Philippine leaders will be able to make any conclusive showing that the whole people favor the project.

Count Salm Fails To Get Meeting With Mrs. Rogers

Even Dines at Same Hotel in Paris; Both Keep Visit Quiet.

Paris, November 15.—Count Salm von Hoogerstraten, whose wife, the former Millicent Rogers, is in America, apparently is still attempting to meet his mother-in-law, Mrs. H. H. Rogers, who arrived in Paris two days ago and is stopping at the Ritz.

Hotel employees stated that the Austrian nobleman has not yet met Mrs. Rogers. Out of all the restaurants in Paris the count today picked the Ritz grillroom for luncheon. He tarried over his midday meal until nearly 4 o'clock and upon departing said:

"I refuse to discuss my matrimonial affairs."

Mrs. Rogers left the Ritz a few minutes after Salm arrived.

When the count's mother-in-law returned to the hotel at 6 o'clock she was asked if she cared to make a formal statement concerning reports of a settlement with her daughter's husband, the reports having arisen through the coincidence of her presence in Paris with that of the count's.

She also refused to discuss the matter.

MUSSOLINI POWER HURT AS GIOLITTI PROCLAIMS BREAK

Aged Dean of Italian Politicians Had Been Ardent Supporter of Fascist Premier.

VOTE OF CONFIDENCE TALLIED BY FASCISTI

Heavy Poll of Deputies Fails to Show Real Strength; Opposition Was Not in Chamber.

BY FRANCISCO REA.

Rome, November 15.—Premier Benito Mussolini's fascist government seems about to reap a harvest of hatred and distrust. The seeds were sown in two years of severe fascist rule, during which the stern premier has treated all opposition to himself and his policies as something verging on treason to the state. The fall of the fascist government and the emergence of democracy from a 24-month eclipse depends upon the ability of former Premiers Giolitti and Orlando to bring their own parliamentary cliques into a coalition that would attract other dissident parliamentary groups.

While liberal leaders struggled to get together, the fascist-bossed majority in the chamber voted confidence in Mussolini today, 345 to 6. All members of the opposition except communists were absent from the chamber when the vote was taken. The overwhelming expression of confidnece merely means that members of Mussolini's own party and the members who were elected with fascist support have confidence in the premier.

Giolitti Breaks Away.

Giolitti announced today that he no longer could support the government. Heretofore the aged dean of Italian politicians had faithfully upheld Mussolini. Giolitti's defection is certain to have a marked effect upon the situation in the chamber. Its potential importance, owing to the affection in which the old man is held in Italy, can not be estimated until the liberal elements of the country have an opportunity to fully orient themselves to the new situation.

All but the communists of the opposition parties refused to attend the fascist-bossed chamber, which convened Wednesday. Giolitti is seeking to persuade the absent groups to return to the chamber and carry their fight against fascismo to the floor.

Press Decree Causes Split.

Giolitti's formal announcement that he had withdrawn his support from Mussolini was the outstanding event of a week full of political turbulence. Rumors of minor riots, hurried troop and naval movements and general fear on the part of the fascists that some sort of an armed

PROPERTY VALUES OF NEGROES DROP

Decrease of About $2,000,000 to $46,223,248 Shown in Tax Reports Made to State.

Property valued at $46,223,248 has been returned for taxation this year by negroes in Georgia, according to statistics in the office of Comptroller General William A. Wright. The return this year makes a decrease of approximately $2,000,000 from 1923.

Practically every classification of property showed a decrease from 1923, although in one or two instances there was a small increase.

There are 231 negro professional men in Georgia, according to the records, divided as follows: Lawyers, 11; doctors, 154; dentists, 31; embalmers 35. These pay a professional tax.

Negroes to the number of 81,351 paid poll taxes this year in Georgia, a number slightly less than last year.

Exodus of many negroes to other states and reductions, traceable to boll weevil damage, account for the general shrinkage in property values, it is believed.

Hollomon To Speak At Good Roads Meet At Houston, Texas

Houston, Texas, November 15.—(Special.)—The local committee on program received today from James A. Hollomon, of Atlanta, Ga., acceptance of an invitation to deliver one of the principal addresses at the joint national conventions of the United States Good Roads association and the Bankhead National Highway association, to be held in this city in April.

Mr. Hollomon, who is associate editor of The Atlanta Constitution, is also vice president of the Bankhead National Highway association.

German "Skull Breakers"

:: BROKEN HEADS EFFICACIOUS AS BALLOTS ::

Drill for Election Day

BY ERIC KEYSER.

Berlin, November 14.—Three political organizations composed of fighting Germans, dedicated to the proposition that broken heads are almost as efficacious on polling day as ballots, are squaring away for the German campaign with a grim sort of determination that promises plenty of rough stuff before the last vote is cast.

The latest entrant in the political lists is the impressively christened "Roter Frontkaemferbund," which may be translated as the "Red Front Battlers' association." For fighting purposes it calls itself simply "RFB."

Before the battlers appeared across the political horizon, the German fascisti and the "Republican Banner Schwarz Rot Gold" were in a class by themselves as fighting campaigners. The "Schwarz Rot Gold" merely signifies the republican colors, black, red and gold.

Youngsters Mobilize Too.

As a subsidiary to the "RFB" has been organized a corps of juvenile shock troops called "Der Rote Jungsturm." Literally, that is "The Red Youth Storm," and they will have a chance to prove their claim to the title in election and campaign squabbles.

The "red" organization is a relic of the forbidden communist organizations which flourished several months ago in platoons of 100 men who were drilled in the science of smacking their conservative political opponents on the head and shins with whatever happened to be handy.

The "reds" intend to do most of their fighting against the "black, red and gold" republicans, whom they derisively call the "paid servants of J. P. Morgan."

Terrorist tactics, it is intimated in the "red" fighters' manifestoes, will be employed to "shake off the slave chains of the Dawes plan, and to escape the yoke of compulsory labor duty which has been substituted for compulsory military duty."

"Shall the proletarian youths of Berlin furnish troops to protect the republican gold sacks," the manifesto asks.

Expect Conflicts Later.

The government is not perturbed by the hostile expressions. Officially, there is a strong conviction that communism is no longer a real factor in German politics. The threatened terrorist tactics have merely caused police precautions to be taken to quell any outbreak.

So far only a few minor campaign riots have occurred. Late in November, when the electioneering fever has risen a few more degrees, sharp conflicts probably will take place.

Trouble from the communist party is inevitable since it is effectively prevented from ordinary campaigning by the warrants which the police hold for all of its leaders. These men and women are either abroad or hiding in Germany. The rage of the communists at this situation will result in organized and casual fighting.

TRAIN ROBBERY DETAILS ARE TOLD BY POSTAL CLERK

$2,000,000 Mail Robbery at Rondout Carried Out With Bombs and Gunplay.

Chicago, November 15.—The first detailed testimony of the $2,000,000 mail train robbery at Rondout, Ill., last June was given today in the trial of William Fahy, former postoffice inspector; James Murray and Walter McComb, by Roy R. Roche, of Watertown, Wis., a mail clerk on the train. He identified Willis Newton and Herbert Holliday, two of the six robbers who have pleaded guilty.

The shooting, after the train stopped when the robbers threw bombs and opened fire at the first resistance, he thought was torpedoes exploding, Roche said. Then there were loud voices outside, but he and his fellow clerks went on with their work. Two other clerks entered his car as he walked to the door and just then there was a flash.

"There was a sudden flash in front of me," Roche testified. "I heard a report and the glass in the door crashed. We three ducked and went to the center of the car.

Covered With Pistols.

"Then there was a rapping on the west door with some hard object. Totten opened and some one said: 'Come on out, you fellows, and keep on coming.' We piled out. There was a man on each side of the door and each had a revolver. One asked for the clerk in charge.

"Phillips said, 'I am he.' The robber took him into the car and said: 'Where is your registered mail. We are out after the money and we are going to get it. You boys are behaving sensibly. I am sorry I had to shoot one of your buddies. He got off with a shotgun and we had to shoot him.'"

Shot "Ally" by Mistake.

The bandit quoted by Roche apparently referred to Willie Newton, one of four Newton brothers who have pleaded guilty with Brent Glasscock and Herbert Holliday. Willis Newton was shot by one of the train robbers by mistake, according to government agents.

Roche said he heard the robber ask Phillips, the mail clerk in charge, where the Milwaukee, Minneapolis and St. Paul reserve bank shipments were. Asked where he was at the time, Roche answered: "I was standing outside with my face against the side

ELABORATE ARRAY OF FOOD EXHIBITS MARKS 1924 SHOW

Auditorium Doors Will Swing Open Monday Afternoon on South's Greatest Food Show.

With the most pretentious line of exhibits ever arranged for display in the south, the 1924 Atlanta Food show will open Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the city auditorium.

The show, as in the past, is being staged under supervision of the Atlanta Retail Food Dealers' association and is designed to make the ultimate consumer better acquainted with the food problem in all its stages, it is said.

The show will be in operation throughout the week, ending Saturday, and will open daily at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, closing at 10 o'clock at night.

One hundred thousand free admission tickets were given last week to members of the association and by them were distributed among customers. Hundreds are expected to purchase the 100,000 tickets which will be offered at the box office at 25 cents each.

Elaborate Preparations.

Plans for the show have been worked out by a local committee of the Retail Food Dealers' association and no pains have been spared in the effort to make the show the greatest success in the history of the south, it is said.

Preparations of the auditorium for the show got under way last week and on Saturday work had been completed. The walls of the arena and the ceiling have been draped for the occasion, a well-known local interior decorating concern having spent several days on the job.

Most of the work of arranging the exhibits also was completed Saturday. Seventy-five retail and wholesale food dealers and food manufacturers have contracted for exhibit space and during the past few days have had special workers arranging displays.

Although all exhibits were not in place Saturday, everything will be in readiness when the doors of the show are thrown open on Monday, according to R. V. Bergen, manager of the show and secretary of the Atlanta Retail Food Dealers' association.

Inasmuch as Thursday afternoon is "off day" for the cooks, officials of the show have set aside Thursday aft-

'Little Miss Georgia' Queen Of All Dolls, Is Offered Free

Attention, every little girl and boy whose heart beats high at thought of the approaching Christmas season!

"Little Miss Georgia" is here—ready to make the Yuletide a time of unusual happiness for you.

"Little Miss Georgia" is the most gorgeously beautiful doll you ever saw; 24 inches high; worth more than $12.50 in a toy store—and she's yours absolutely free of charge.

If you want a dolly of your own—one that the richest little girl in all this broad land would delight to call her own—or if you would like to earn "little sister" a magnificent Christmas present, don't fail to read "Little Miss Georgia's" Christmas plans for you and all other little girls and boys.

In this edition of The Constitution you'll find a full page ad giving full particulars of the "Little Miss Georgia" offer, the most sensational of its kind ever made.

"Little Miss Georgia" is such a dolly as you have never seen or even dreamed of before. She talks; she walks, she sleeps, she winks, she rolls her eyes, she has an elaborate trousseau, she's the last word in the art of making cuddly "mamma" dolls—in short, there never was such a wonderful dolly as "Little Miss Georgia."

The task you must perform in order to win "Little Miss Georgia" is an easy and pleasant one, in view of the fact that it deals with a paper so universally known and desired as The Constitution, "The South's Standard Newspaper."

Don't fail to turn to the full page ad in this issue immediately, and lay your plans to win a "Little Miss Georgia" doll for yourself or little sister, starting early this week.

COMMUNITY CHEST CAMPAIGN PAUSES AT $587,579 MARK

Goal of $795,000 for 40 Atlanta Charities Will Be Reached, Chairman Black Says.

SPECIAL COMMITTEES TO CONTINUE DRIVE

Beautiful Silver Cup Presented to Black in Token of His Inspiring Leadership.

Atlanta's second milestone of Community Chest charity was passed Saturday night at the Kimball house, and Atlanta's campaigners for those who cannot help themselves were seasoned by another year of service, when, with sentiment and fun and seriousness all mixed in together, the Community Chest campaign for $795,000 to maintain 40 charities through 1925 paused at $587,579.

"We are going to complete this fund," said Eugene R. Black, general chairman of the campaign. "Tonight we release you with the thanks of these helpless people in these homes for it is they you have been working to save. But tomorrow, Sunday morning, Sherrard Kennedy's committee will get right back on the job, to stay there and finish its work. And on Monday four teams of picked men from among your number will get back into action along new lines.

Raised More Than in 1923.

"Perhaps you did not realize it," Mr. Black continued, "but we have raised more money this year for the Community Chest than we raised last year. Our machinery got all balled up then, and when we got through and made accurate count of everything and threw out all the duplications, we found we had raised $560,000, and not $600,000. A whole lot more came in later, just as much more is coming in after this. But we had raised only $560,000 in the open campaign. This year we have raised $27,000 more than that. It is the first time that thing ever happened among Community Chest cities in America—to raise actually more the second year than was raised the first."

A beautiful silver cup was presented to Mr. Black in behalf of the ranks, the speech of presentation being made by Roy LeCraw, commander of Section C in the campaign.

Appreciative of Cup.

"If all the money in Atlanta were piled right there, and I could choose between it and the expression you men have offered me," said Mr. Black, "they could take their money. I treasure your regard above all things, and I shall keep this as its token."

After the reports of the day were in Mr. Black turned the meeting into an informal jollification, calling on first one and then another to speak.

W. W. Orr, commander of the big groups division, was first. Mr. Orr responded with an eloquent tribute to his workers and their commanders, H. E. Choate and T. C. Dunham.

"After all, the finest thing that God ever made is a noble man or woman burning with the desire to do something for mankind," said Mr. Orr. "I believe the day will come when

FOUR ARE INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENTS

2-Year-Old Girl's Leg Broken by Automobile of Neighbor—Egan Park Man Also Hit by Car.

Mildred Wilbur, 2-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Wilbur, of 99 Krogg street, had her leg broken and received several severe bruises and lacerations when she was run down near her parents' home Saturday afternoon by an automobile driven by S. B. Bishop, of 59 Krogg street, according to police. No case was made against Mr. Bishop.

T. A. Cato, 50, of Egan Park, was rendered unconscious Saturday morning when struck down by an automobile at the corner of Bellwood avenue and Marietta street. The driver of the machine did not stop after he had hit Mr. Cato, police said. The injured man was carried to Grady hospital, where physicians pronounced his injuries severe.

Mrs. B. E. Walton, 33 Virginia circle, was caught under her car at Vedado way and North Jackson street Saturday when her automobile was struck by a truck driven by George P. Walt, of 120 Currier street. Although Mrs. Walton said she was not injured, the driver of the truck was placed under $100 bond.

While roller-skating across North Moreland avenue, near Alta avenue, Fred Pew, 15-year-old boy of 72 Alta avenue, Saturday afternoon was struck by an automobile driven by Herman Sorrow, of 134 Clifton street, and was slightly cut and bruised. The boy was taken to Grady hospital and his injuries treated. No case was made against the driver of the machine which struck young Pew.

Methodists Open Annual Meeting Here Wednesday

WARTIME DRAFTS OF MONEY AND MEN URGED BY BISHOPS

Conscription of Wealth and Labor As Well As of Soldiers Asked in Report to College.

Atlantic City, November 15.—Conscription in wartime of wealth and labor as well as human life is demanded in a report submitted here today to the board of bishops of the Methodist Episcopal church by the commission which was appointed at the general conference in Des Moines last May to formulate plans for world peace.

"Methodism is set to place as great an odium on war profiteers as is placed upon slackers," the report states. "We hold the cause of peace dearer than party allegiance and shall tolerate no dilatory or evasive attitudes on the part of those who represent us in legislative halls. Methodism calls upon all her people to support for public office only those who are pledged to secure the outlawry of war.

Calls for Enforcement.

"The bishops are determined to make effective Methodism's creed on peace, which declares that war is not inevitable; it is the supreme enemy of mankind and its continuance is the suicide of civilization. Methodism is grimly determined to outlaw the whole war system. They dare to remind the governments which ignore the Christian conscience of men in time of peace, that they cannot justly claim the lives of men in time of war. Methodism has set herself to create both the will to peace and the conditions of peace. Methodism declarse that selfish nationalism, economic imperialism and militarism must cease."

Favors Arms Parley.

Bishop Thomas Henderson, of Cincinnati, asserted that the board of bishops is in favor of calling an international conference looking toward the limitation of armaments and world peace.

"We will give united support to such a conference," said Bishop Henderson, "under whatever auspices it might be called."

"Bishop McDowell, chairman of the commission on world peace appointed by the last general conference, reported that the commission was in correspondence with representative leaders of other churches seeking suggestions on a proposed peace conference of all the Christian forces of America and the rest of the world. Such a world conference was authorized by the last general conference when the commission on world peace was appointed under the instruction that it consider the best plans and methods for making the compact of the world-wide religious sentiment against the evils of war.

Assignments of bishops were made for the spring conferences, and the dates set. These included:

Atlanta conference, Rome, Ga., December 3, Bishop E. G. Richardson.

Florida conference, Jacksonville, June 28, Bishop E. G. Richardson.

Gulf conference, Welsh, La., December 3, Bishop Ernest L. Waldorf.

Ban Book on Sociology.

The board tonight banned from seminaries a book entitled "An Outline of Sociology," written by Professor Hayes, of the University of Illinois. A committee protested that this and about six other textbooks were "ultra-liberal."

Speaking for the board, Bishop Henderson said that tolerance exercised by church leaders on such subjects as textbook selection had prevented the fundamentalist-modernist controversy from waging in the Methodist Episcopal church as it had in other sects. He said there was no such division in his church, and if anything the church leaned toward fundamentalism.

Final Officer Of the Merrimac Dies at Capital

Captain Henry Marmaduke Was Colorful Figure Around Washington.

Washington, November 15.—(Special.)—Captain Henry H. Marmaduke, 83 years of age, only known survivor of the officers of the historic Confederate ironclad, Merrimac, and a resident of Washington for 42 years, died here today. Captain Marmaduke was a native of Missouri and was known as one of the most colorful personalities of Civil war days in Washington.

Despite his years he was keen in mind up to the time of his death, and was hale and robust until a few years ago. He vividly recalled the scenes of the battle between the Monitor and Merrimac after the Merrimac had wreaked havoc among wooden vessels of the Union fleet.

When the Merrimac steamed out of the Norfolk navy yard March 8, 1862, with a crew of 375 officers and men, destined to mark the opening of a new era in fighting at sea, Captain Marmaduke was a midshipman and wondered how the experiment of coating a ship with steel plates would result.

Unification Question Expected To Come Up as Leaders Prepare for Fifty-Eighth Session.

DR. ARTHUR L. MOORE CONFERENCE PREACHER

North Georgia Methodists Lease New Henry Grady Hotel for Quarters During Sessions Here.

BY DR. THOMAS M. ELLIOTT.

The North Georgia Methodist conference, which meets at Wesley Memorial church on Wednesday morning for its fifty-eighth annual session, will be characterized by numerous outstanding and interesting developments, among which are appointments of preachers for the coming year, hearing a series of addresses and sermons by Dr. Arthur J. Moore, of San Antonio, the possible presentation of the Methodist unification question, formulating definite plans for furthering the work of the missionary centenary, Christian education, superannuate endowment fund, church hospitalization work, as well as many items of routine conference procedure. Bishop U. V. W. Darlington, of West Virginia, will preside over conference deliberations.

For the first time in the history of the conference the entire body will be entertained under one roof and in the same building. The latest addition to Atlanta's long list of excellent hotels, the Henry Grady, will be official headquarters, and all conference members will be housed there during the entire week. The committee on conference entertainment leased the hotel for its first opening to the transient public and has arranged for all out-of-town conference attendants to eat and sleep at the Henry Grady.

This feature of conference entertainment will likely meet with the heartiest approval of ministers and laymen alike, for the comradeship of Christian workers in such large numbers constitutes one of the lasting joys of a conference occasion.

Many Changes Expected.

It is generally understood that the matter of making the preachers' appointments presents a very complex and difficult problem at this coming session, due to various phases that enter into the situation. Last year's session was a record-breaker in the matter of changes among the preachers. This session probably will witness more changes than the session of a year ago.

Phases that go to make the appointments difficult this year, and which indicate numerous changes, are the expiration of five presiding elders' tenures of office on their present districts; the withdrawal and deaths of several men; the transfer of some to other conferences, and the transfer from other conferences to this one of some; the superannuation of a small number of aged men; the removal of many men who have served three or four years at their present charges, and the incoming of a class of young preachers on trial.

The five presiding elders whose four years are expiring on their districts are, Dr. W. H. LaPrade, Jr., of the North Atlanta district; Dr.

Surprise Party Given Governor And His Family

Over 300 Persons in Ansley Park Welcome Walkers to Community.

BY RALPH T. JONES.

It isn't every day in the year that the residents of a community are given the opportunity of participating in the opening of a new governor's mansion for one of the principal of these 48 states. That being the case, when the opportunity knocked on the door of the citizens whose home are located in Ansley Park, Atlanta, they quickly seized it, with the result that Saturday night witnessed one of the most unique and delightful house-warming surprise parties at 205 The Prado, the new home of Governor Clifford Walker and his family.

The governor and the governor's family have been busy moving into their new home during the week just closed. They had chosen the house themselves. The state is without a permanent gubernatorial mansion at present, the old property on Peachtree street having been leased, with the new Henry Grady hotel almost completed on the site. There is a special committee of the legislature authorized to investigate and make recommendations, when the assembly meets next summer, regarding the acquisition of a permanent home for the future chief executives of this Empire state.

Leased for Three Years.

So, in the meantime, the present governor has leased for his own use

STECK TO CONTEST BROOKHART'S SEAT

Des Moines, Iowa, November 15.—Daniel F. Steck, democratic candidate for the senate against Senator Smith W. Brookhart in the recent election, today announced a contest for the seat would be made on the ground that sufficient votes were cast for him to overcome the senator's small majority, but apparently had not been counted by election judges.

Senator Brookhart today was leading Steck by 750 votes with the official county canvass completed in all but one county.

The votes Steck charges were not counted for him were thrown out he declares, in numerous counties. Their acceptance by the senate privileges and election committee, he believes, would overcome the Brookhart majority by several hundred.

"At the election held November 4," said the statement, "there were cast in Iowa about 950,000 votes and according to reports of the various election boards, less than 900,000 for United States senator. Reports from many localities in the state show that a great many ballots in which the voter attempted to exercise the choice for United States senator, were not counted by the local election boards. Also, reports show that in many instances votes which should have been legally counted for myself for United States senator, were, through a mistaken view of the law by election boards, counted for my opponent. These two classes of votes aggregated many thousands, more than sufficient to change the result on the returns as made.

"Believing as I do that it was the intention of a majority of the voters of Iowa to express, or undertake to express, their view upon the subject that I should be elected to that office, it becomes not a matter of my desire to hold the office, but a desire to see that the will of the electorate of Iowa is carried out.

"By reason of these things, and on the advice of my friends, a contest over the office will be instituted. The contest will, of course be decided by the United States senate itself, the constitution making that body the sole judge of the election and qualification of its members."

SENATOR BROOKHART HAS NO COMMENT.

Washington, Iowa, November 15.—Senator Smith W. Brookhart had no comment to make today when informed that his election was to be contested by Daniel F. Steck, democrat, other than to state he has information that several thousand votes were not credited to him because election judges failed to count straight republican ballots in certain counties.

ELABORATE ARRAY MARKS 1924 SHOW

ernoon from 2 until 7 o'clock for negroes of the city. Realizing that the colored populace of Atlanta is a vital factor in the retail merchandising business, merchants have made every arrangement to make Thursday afternoon one of the feature periods of the event, officias assert.

Designation In Error.

Through a misunderstanding with the printing firm that printed the tickets, Tuesday afternoon was designated instead of Thursday. This, however, was a mistake and Thursday is the day when the negroes will have the privilege of attending the show.

The show will not be without its entertainment in a musical way. The 12-piece orchestra of Oglethorpe university, under direction of John T. Lee, will play daily from 2:30 until 4:30 and from 7:30 until 9:30 o'clock. The repertoire of the band includes many of the popular song hits and it is expected to prove a major attraction.

Mr. Bergen has supervised the arranging of the three exhibits sponsored by the Retail Food Dealers' association, which are expected to attract great attention. These exhibits will show work of the home economics department of the Atlanta public schools; what becomes of every dollar the consumer spends for food, and how to arrange a model kitchen.

List of Exhibitors.

Other exhibits, by dealers and manufacturers, will include displays by the following:

NuGrape Bottling company, Walker Brothers, Shredded Wheat, Loeb-Apte company, Swift & Co., Mrs. B. M. Curray, William H. Baker, Georgia State School of Agriculture, Southern Bell Telephone company, Duke Mayonnaise company, Vermont Maple Sugar company, H. L. Sanger, T. H. Brooke, Schlesinger-Meyer Baking company, George A. Hormel, Calumet Baking Powder company, National Biscuit company, Southern Cotton Oil company, Pillsbury Flour Mills company, American Bakeries company, Check-Neal Coffee company, McCormick & Co., White Provision company, Ballard & Ballard, Grand Traverse Packing company, H. H. Claussens company, Hennard Mayonnaise company, F. G. Stone Baking company, Maddox Coffee company, Fleischmann Yeast, Nuco-Nut Margerine, Bell Brothers, Kellogg Company, Gold Medal Mayonnaise company, Ewing Butter company, Atlanta Milling company, Libby, McNeil & Libby, Washburn-Crosby, Coca-Cola Company, Loose-Wiles Biscuit company, New Orleans Coffee company, Morning Joy Coffee and others.

of the car. One robber was guarding us.

"Then the robber inside the car started throwing out mail pouches. Several times the robber threatened Phillips, accusing him of withholding information about the mail," Roche said.

After the bandit had stopped throwing out pouches the robbers ordered the mail clerks to the robbers' automobiles, the clerks marching along with their hands raised.

Robbers Wanted to Kill.

"What will we do with them?" somebody said, according to Roche, and another answered:

"Kill them!"

But the leader of the robbers said, "No," ordered the clerks to load the automobiles with the mail sacks and then directed them to march up the track ahead of the engine and to "step lively."

"And we did," Roche said.

Willis Newton was the man who first entered the mail car with Phillips, Roche said. Another robber who entered the car, he added, was Herbert Holliday.

COMMUNITY CHEST CAMPAIGN PAUSES

the great heart of Atlanta will open its treasure box and out of it gold will pour into the Community Chest—a million of dollars—for charity!"

Can Raise Full Amount.

J. S. Kennedy, chairman of the special gifts committee, responded with similar appreciation. "There are thousands of people in Atlanta who haven't been given the opportunity to subscribe to the Community Chest," he said, declaring "we must keep on, we can raise the full amount."

"What Sherrard Kennedy has done in the past three weeks never will be forgotten by the people of Atlanta," said Mr. Black.

R. L. Foreman, commander of the four sections led by Fred Gould, Charles N. Walker, Roy LeCraw and Julian Boehm, praised the work of his commanders and their captains and team members, saying each of the section commanders will select ten of his best men to work exclusively in the downtown section.

"Our shortage is there," said Mr. Foreman. "Our work in the residence sections has been more than perfect, as the figures show."

Could Have Given More.

Declaring he did not care whether he was quoted or not, W. R. C. Smith asserted that "there are a lot of men in Atlanta, and a lot of women, who could afford to give away beyond what they have given to the Community Chest." Mr. Smith represented the foreign corporations' committee.

F. A. Wilson-Lawrenson, publisher of the Atlanta Georgian, followed Mr. Smith, saying, "The fact that we haven't $800,000 complete tonight is not the fault of the working people of Atlanta. It is because the men who have the means have not seen the vision."

Chairman Black, a few moments later, did not agree entirely with these views, for he said: "It is not the fault of the rich men, boys. They have given according to their lights. We've just got to change their lights, that's all. They've got their dimmers on, and there's no dimmer ordinance in this campaign. It's our fault for not having made them see this thing as we see it. If we can get them interested in the campaign next year, before the campaign, they will work in the campaign; and if they work, they will see what we are doing, and then they will give."

Praises Spirit of Workers.

J. M. B. Hoxsey, vice president of the chest, responding next, said:

"The thought has been growing on me that if these meetings are a cross section of Atlanta, then thank God for the privilege of living in such a city! Nothing that has ever been done here stirs the spirit of civic consciousness among us more than the work you have been doing."

Mr. Hoxsey referred to "the peculiar fact that the second Community Chest campaign is always harder than the first and harder than any that follows after."

"In the first place, you haven't the novelty of the first campaign," said he. "And, in the second, you have an institution with all its responsibilities, but not yet strong enough to meet every criticism.

"I believe this particular campaign is going over for the full amount," he continued.

Mr. Hoxsey called on Roy LeCraw to express what the workers think of Mr. Black, "who has been bullying them for ten days," as Mr. Hoxsey expressed it.

Black Is Applauded.

"I want to hear some applause to show just what you fellows think of Eugene R. Black," Mr. LeCraw began. The applause started and grew into an uproar of cheering and hand-clapping that lasted almost two minutes.

"Mr. Black, you have our pledge that we will stick with you until you have delivered to the charitable works of Atlanta $800,000," said Mr. LeCraw. "We have not finished that amount, but already you have delivered to Atlanta 700 uplifted and inspired men—men who are fired with the zeal of unselfish service."

Mr. LeCraw's conclusion was the presentation of the cup to Mr. Black.

The inscription, read aloud, was "Eugene R. Black, chairman Community Chest campaign, 1924. He fought a good fight."

Mr. Black's response kept his hearers intent for minute after minute.

Faith to Reach Goal.

"St. Paul said that," he began. "He went further. He said 'I have fought a good fight. I have kept the faith. I have finished the course.' I haven't exactly finished the course yet, but I'm going to keep on till I do. I have the faith inside me that Atlanta is going to take care of her own."

Mr. Black said he wanted each captain to see that the name of every worker was sent to the Community Chest office.

"We've got a Community Chest here in Atlanta. I want a community spirit, and I want that roll of names to be its foundation, so that your sons some day may say, when Community Chest charity is established and supported generously, 'my father had a part in the beginning of this.'"

Saturday's reports showed the following results:

Team Reports Saturday.

Section A—Team leader, Wing, with $690; total for the section, $1,263.

Section B—Team leader, Broyles, with $802; total for the section, $3,874, giving section B the honors of the day.

Section C—Team leader, Meyers, with $1,151; total for the section, $1,708.

Section F—Team leader, Sandwich, with $437; total for the section, $586.

Colored division, $1,800.

Special gifts' committee, $2,365.

S. W. Walker, general chairman of the colored division, entered the meeting to report in person for that division, and was welcomed by Chairman Black.

"We realize the great advantage of the Community Chest," said Chairman Walker, speaking for his division. "Nothing else would have done as much good as it has done. While the results from our division look small, we are encouraged because we know the good will be great."

"I want you to take back to your meeting this message," said Chairman Black. "Tell them how proud we are of the reports they have been sending in every day. Tell them how much we appreciate their cooperation. We are standing right with you in the effort to uplift all the people of Atlanta."

revolt was being planned against them have been leaking out of Italy for the past two days.

"The new press decree (a stringent fascist order designed to muzzle opposition newspapers) and the proposal to reform the constitution left no course for me but to join the opposition," Giolitti declared.

"This decree is a clear-cut violation of the constitution and we must oppose it.

Sounds Call for Rally.

"The deputies," Giolitti said in urging the absent members to return to parliament, "have been elected by the nation for the purpose of carrying on its parliamentary work, and there is no more suitable place to criticise the administration than in the chamber."

Former Foreign Minister Salandra is a likely candidate for the premiership if Mussolini is forced from office. The position of the Napoleonic fascist leader has become almost untenable, although he still controls a majority of the chamber. The fact that all members of the majority are not fascists is the weakness that may prove fatal. If the non-fascist elements can be enticed away from Mussolini the black-shirt sun will begin to sink. It would be possible for Mussolini to continue in power without a majority if he were willing to govern without parliament, but the time that Italy would permit him to do that would be short.

METHODISTS OPEN MEET WEDNESDAY

J. W. Quillian, of the Augusta district; Rev. W. T. Hamby, of the Gainesville district; Rev. S. R. England, of the Marietta district, and Rev. W. T. Irvine, of the Rome district. Whether these five presiding elders will be appointed to other districts, or returned to the pastorate, has not yet been determined. Should they be returned to the pastorate, five pastors will be chosen their successors, which would thus bring about ten changes. In adjusting the ten changes referred to fifty other men might become involved.

New Members Expected.

It is known that some transfers from other conferences to this one will be made. Rev. John S. Jenkins, formerly a member of this conference, will come back to the North Georgia at this session, having spent several years in the Western Virginia conference. Mr. Jenkins is well known in Georgia, having served several of the more prominent charges. During the year six conference members have died, four of whom were pastors. These thus passing away were Rev. C. B. Barton, of Rome; Rev. C. T. Ivey, of Gray; Rev. A. E. Sansburne, of Greensboro; Rev. J. M. Sewell, of Eatonton; Rev. A. W. Conway, of Flowery Branch, and Dr. John D. Hammond, a superannuate, of New York. Some of these passed away during recent months, and their successors are to be named.

Associated with Bishop Darlington in making the appointments for the coming year will be a cabinet of twelve presiding elders, who supervise the churches in their various districts. The presiding elders thus to cooperate with the bishop are as follows: Rev. W. S. Robison, of the Athens district; Dr. W. H. LaPrade, Jr., of the North Atlanta district; Dr. W. T. Hunnicutt, of the South Atlanta district; Dr. J. W. Quillian, of the Augusta district; Rev. S. A. Harris, of the Dalton district; Rev. H. S. Smith, of the Elberton district; Rev. W. T. Hamby, of the Gainesville district; Dr. J. H. Eakes, of the Griffin district; Rev. Wallace Rogers, of the LaGrange disrict; Rev. S. R. England, of the Marietta district; Rev. W. G. Crawley, of the Oxford district; Rev. W. T. Irvine, of the Rome district. The bishop with the cabinet will have daily meetings during conference to arrange the appointments, which will be announced the last thing before final adjaurnment of the annual session.

Moore Is Powerful.

Great Interest this year centers about the coming of Dr. Arthur J. Moore, pastor of the Travis Park Methodist church, of San Antonio, Texas, who will be here to deliver two sermons daily during the conference. Dr. Moore is a former Georgian, having been a member of the South Georgia conference until four years ago, when he was appointed pastor of the Texas church. His work is Texas has been highly successful, more than 2,400 members having joined his church during the four years of his pastorate, and his church has come to be one of the most prominent in the entire connection.

Early in his ministerial career Dr. Moore manifested rare gifts and powers as an evangelist, and was appointed one of the thirty general evangelists of the denomination. In that work he labored in nearly every state in the union, winning some 40,000 converts, more than 10,000 of whom united with the Methodist Episcopal church, South.

This year he has been engaged at several annual conferences as conference preacher, delivering evangelistic sermons that have been heartily received everywhere, and highly fruitful and satisfactory in every way. Recently he was conference preacher at St. Louis and Southwest Missouri conferences, and will go to the Florida conference for a similar purpose after the adjournment of this conference in Atlanta.

Is Widely Known.

Reports reaching here regarding his preaching have awakened great interest in his coming here. It is stated that preachers and laymen alike were eager to hear Dr. Moore in the Missouri conferences, and that scores of ministers from other churches availed themselves of the opportunity to hear the noted Texan. His visits are said to be spiritual refreshings, and his sermons are declared to be dominant factors in the spiritual fervor of the gatherings. The expectancy and heart hunger of all who heard him were realized, and his ministry at the conferences is said to be as dew upon mown meadows and a precious reviving again.

During the North Georgia conference session Dr. Moore will speak twice daily, each afternoon and night. The general public will be cordially invited to hear him.

It is generally expected that the question of Methodist unification will be presented at some time during the conference session. Th tim st apart to consider and vote upon the question is for a year later. However, so intense is the interest in the matter, and so firmly convinced are adherents of both sides of the debate, it is more than probable that it will be introduced in some way. Just how or when or by whom has not as yet been learned.

Unification Fight Looms.

The uninitiated may be easily led into misapprehension as to the real status of the unification situation just at this time. The debate is not on the matter of unification, per se; but upon adopting or rejecting the plan of unification that has been presented by the unification commission made up of representatives of the Methodist Episcopal church and the Methodist Episcopal church, south, and approved by the called session of the general conference at Chattanooga last July.

BISHOP U. V. W. DARLINGTON, Of Barboursville, W. Va.

As the matter now stands, the one consideration before the annual conferences of both branches of American Methodism is acceptance or rejection of the proposed plan. Should the plan be approved by the requisite majorities in both churches, then unification will be effected in a called general conference.

Multitudes of Methodists who are in favor of unification are opposed to the proposed plan; while yet many others who have opposed previous plans, are favorable toward this one. Sentiment and opinion in the matter are quite pronounced and good men and loyal are found on opposite sides of the question.

The attitude of the North Georgia conference towards unification will be watched with interest, and the decision of this conference, one of the largest in the connection, will be powerful in shaping sentiment elsewhere. In this section the debate is waxing warm and promises to become more so as the months pass.

Division on Intent.

Opponents of the proposed plan assert that the plan submitted does not unify at all; that it divests the constituted authorities of inalienable powers and rights; that it gives an unfair advantage to the northern branch of Methodism; that it deprives the southern branch of the opportunity of expansion and that it threatens negro domination.

Proponents of the plan deny emphatically that the plan will work such effects as feared. They assert that the plan equalizes the two divisions of Methodism, giving to neither the advantage over the other, but opens a way for a more rapid and stronger growth; that it will prevent wastage of men and money, developing a religious power such as the world has not yet known and that negro dominance is not threatened in any degree.

No thorough poll has been made in this conference up to date. Private investigations made by this writer during recent weeks indicate that the majority of preachers are opposed to the plan, while the vast majority of laymen are against it. The final vote to decide the issue in this conference is not to come till next year. No one can foresee what developments may come within a twelvemonth.

Some conferences have already voted on the question. The Holston conference, a few weeks ago, cast its vote overwhelmingly in favor of the proposed plan. Sentiment in some other conferences is said to be practically unanimous among the conference members.

Leaders Lay Plans.

As the weeks and months pass the forces for and against the plan are mobilizing, promising an active campaign during the coming year. Bishop E. D. Mouzon, of Nashville, is chief spokesman for the adoption of the plan, while Bishop W. A. Candler, of Atlanta, is leader of the opposition. Proponents of the plan seem to be better organized at this date than the opponents. "Friends of Unification" is the title of the organization in Nashville that is fostering the movement and sending out quantities of literature. In Atlanta is a local laymen's committee that is functioning in this immediate territory, disseminating information in opposition to the plan.

The final vote on the question rests with the preachers and laymen who will be members of the annual conferences next year. It is expected that preachers will present the proposal in all its details to their congregations and then vote pursuant to their congregations' expressions. The question of whether or not the preachers will be bound to vote in accordance with the views of their congregations is now being discussed. Opponents of the plan argue that they will.

DR. ARTHUR J. MOORE.

An eminent feature of this session of the conference, it is expected, will pertain to the effect to coordinate the activities of the church in the great campaigns recently launched and so successfully carried through the years to date. Activities to be correlated are the missionary centenary movement, the Christian education movement, hospitalization work and the superannuate endowment fund.

Church Has Advanced.

The past five years have witnessed among Southern Methodists an activity and advancement hitherto unapproached. During that time the Southern Methodist church has paid out in special campaigns and in the usual enterprises of church undertaking the vast sum of more than $230,000,000.

All of this huge sum has been expended for benevolence alone, none of it being applied to pastors' salaries or local expenses. Not only has an immense amount of money been raised and expended, but every form of church endeavor has been proportionately increased. The five years just closing constitute an era in Southern Methodist history unparalleled since the day of Pentecost.

That the great movements may not be allowed to lag, and that the advance movement shall be continued, attention will now be given to devising plans and forces to keep in operation the powers that have been brought into play in the larger movements.

The conference session formally begins next Wednesday morning. On Tuesday night before, the conference members will assemble for the first time to attend a meeting of the Widows and Orphans' Aid association, of which Rev. A. J. Sears is president, and Dr. W. T. Hunnicutt secretary-treasurer.

Although the bulk of the conference members will not arrive till Tuesday afternoon, it is expected that a large portion of the members will reach the city late Monday, or early Tuesday, as there are numerous board and committee meetings to be held during that day, for the purpose of making out reports to be submitted later in the week. Also, on Tuesday, all applicants for admission into the conference, and all undergraduates are to appear before their respective examining committees.

Twelfth Session Here.

This session of the conference will be the twelfth to be held in Atlanta since the division of the Georgia conference held here was in 1867, with Bishop George F. Pierce as president, and Dr. Atticus G. Haygood as secretary.

Other Georgia cities that have entertained the conference are Griffin, Rome, Augusta, Athens, Newnan, Cartersville, Sparta, Gainesville, Marietta LaGrange, Dalton, Milledgeville, Cedartown, Washington, Madison, Elberton and Carrollton. Nearly all these cities have entertained the conference more than one time. So large has the conference membership become that it is now quite difficult for any but the larger cities to care for it as they should wish.

The hospitality of Atlanta towards the conference has ever been most delightful and the "Capital City" may rest assured that the conference members deeply appreciate the many, many courtesies and kindnesses. Some of the preacher members of the conference have even intimated that they would be content to remain in Atlanta after the adjournment of the session.

Conference Growth.

Since 1867, when the North Georgia conference met here the first time, there has been a good healthy growth of north Georgia Methodism. Then there were nine presiding elders' districts, while now there are twelve. Fulton county then had four Methodists preachers furnished by this conference, while now there are forty. Then the conference had 539 churches, 42 parsonages, 44,896 members, 471 Sunday schools, 23,819 Sunday school scholars, while the reports for last year show that the conference now has 829 churches, 248 parsonages, 140,204 members, 843 Sunday schools, 100,892 Sunday school scholars.

The above figures do not relate anything relative to hospitals, orphanages, welfare homes, schools, universities and other institutions. Nor do the figures given indicate anything with and general development of the idea and power of religious life and conviction, or to the growth of Methodist influence and power in the commonwealth.

SURPRISE PARTY GIVEN GOVERNOR

the mansion at 205 The Prado and, at least during the almost three years which he has still to serve, that will be the official home of the head of the state government.

Over 300 persons, men, women, boys and girls, residents of Ansley Park, and members of the Ansley Park Civic league descended upon the Walkers in their new home Saturday night. The boys and girls were included in the party because Governor and Mrs. Walker have two young sons of their own, Harold and Sanders, somewhere around 10 or 12 years of age. The youngsters of the Ansley Park neighborhood welcomed the two boys in their own way and made them feel, right from the jump, that they had a host of new buddies among their neighbors, while the older folk showed their parents that, governor or plain mister, first lady in the state or just a good neighbor, they welcomed the Walkers to their midst.

Refreshments Served.

A committee of ladies of the community had arranged with a caterer for refreshments, so that when the crowd of over 300 descended on the Walkers in their new home there was no lack of supplies. Music was also provided by the committee, Mr. and Mrs. Ed McConnell rendering a number of delightful songs, while the Kulo Kilolu Hawaiian orchestra played during the evening.

The party was a surprise to the governor and his family. The secret had been well kept, so that when the hosts of welcoming neighbors began to arrive the pleasure of the occasion was doubly enhanced for the principals.

A reception committee had been selected in advance to join with Governor and Mrs. Walker in making the guests feel at ease. On this committee were: Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Higgins, Mr. and Mrs. George Watts, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Harrington, Judge and Mrs. A. E. Calhoun, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Connor, Mr. and Mrs. William Dunlop, Rev. and Mrs. Ben R. Lacy, Mr. and Mrs. J. Hope Tigner and Mr. and Mrs. D. F. McClatchey.

Hoffman Welcomes Walkers.

W. D. Hoffman, who is president of the Ansley Park Civic league, made a short speech of welcome to the new residents in that community, which was responded to by Governor Walker. In addition to Mr. Hoffman, officers of the league are T. N. Hutchinson, vice president, and J. Hope Tigner secretary-treasurer.

The event was one of the most unique of its kind in many years, and it is doubtful if, when the state finally selects a permanent governor's mansion, the then governor and his family can be welcomed to their home with any greater cordiality or sincerity than that evidenced be the Ansley Park people last night as they extended the right hand of neighborliness to the newcomers among them.

COLLEGES TO COMBAT SPREAD OF MODERNISM

Chicago, Ill., November 16.—Representatives of 21 orthodox Protestant colleges in various sections of the United States, who are in convention here at the Moody Bible Institute, have effected an organization for the purpose of banding together other institutions in the fight against the spread of modernism in religious teaching.

"Growing out of the present-day fundamentalist movement is a new alignment of the colleges," explained the Rev. Widmeyer, of California. "It is felt that the colleges have been responsible for a departure, in some quarter, from the Christian faith, and that those institutions which still hold to Christian orthodoxy should organize for aggressive effort to secure a return to an evangelical Christianity."

SPANIARDS REPORTED GATHERING FIREARMS

Perpignan, France, November 16. French customs and grendarmerie posts along the Spanish border have been strengthened and the Spanish police are exercising the utmost vigilance in view of confirmed reports that groups have been gathering in the Pyreenean regions and that a number of automobiles have been going back and forth with passengers, arms and ammunition.

General Jose Rodriguez, one of the two Spaniards arrested after having received four of 50 large cases of arms and ammunition for which they are negotiating, is said by the police to have admitted that the explosives were destined for an anarchist committee at Paris. He insisted, however, that he dealt through an intermediary Spaniard of the name Fernandez.

The meals of yesteryear

—what have they done to your teeth and your gums?

THE FOOD we eat has a great effect upon the condition of our teeth. But it is even more definitely responsible for the trouble that some of us have with our gums.

For this soft, creamy food of civilization, eaten over a long period of time, and eaten too often in haste, has robbed our gums of the stimulation which coarse food and slow mastication should give.

As a result, we are experiencing trouble with our gums. Even teeth which have been well preserved by good care and frequent cleaning are not immune from troubles due to a weakened gum structure.

Does your toothbrush "show pink"?

Many people find that their gums are tender. They report to their dentists that their gums have a tendency to bleed. And the dentist will tell them that this appearance of "pink toothbrush" is a sign that their gums need stimulation and exercise.

How Ipana Tooth Paste stimulates your gums

More than three thousand dentists, in cases of this kind, now recommend Ipana Tooth Paste and prescribe it to their patients. In stubborn cases of bleeding gums, many dentists direct a gum massage with Ipana after the regular cleaning with the brush.

For one of the important ingredients of Ipana is ziratol—an antiseptic and hemostatic well known to the profession the country over. It is used to allay the bleeding of the wound after extraction, and to help restore to the gums their normal tonicity. The presence of ziratol gives Ipana the power to aid in the healing of bleeding gums, and to help to build firm, sound, healthy gum tissue.

Try a tube of Ipana today

If your gums are tender, if they have a tendency to be soft or to bleed, go to the drug store today and buy your first tube of Ipana. Before you have finished using it you cannot fail to note the difference. You will be delighted with its grit-free consistency, its delicious flavor and its clean taste.

HUNGER FOR FAITH REASON COOLIDGE WON SAYS ANALYST

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

Washington, November 15. — In 1920, as part of the plan made in that year by some of Mr. Coolidge's friends to get him the presidential nomination—a plan which was interrupted and ended by a prohibitory direction from Coolidge himself—in that year there was published a collection of Coolidge's speeches, which had for its title the sentence, "Have Faith in Massachusetts."

To any one who tries to look beneath the surface of the spectacular quality of the recent election, one deduction is that the American people have determined, apparently, to have faith in somebody, and, since Coolidge was in the white house and otherwise without impediments, to have faith in Calvin Coolidge.

This turning to a personality, this visualizing by the people of what they want in a man is characteristic. It is more than characteristic. It is, in America, almost inevitable. And under the circumstances it is wholesome.

People Seek Common Symbol.

The people want to have faith. They want to have faith in some abstractions, some of our accepted institutions, like party government and the constitution. But even more they want to have faith in personalities; want some man to be the symbol of their faith, to be one who happens to share the oulk of their common beliefs, and at the same time has the gift and aptitude for expressing, in his words and actions, the faiths that are common to masses of men.

We have just passed through, in America, a period of lack of dominant personalities; and much of the chaos in our politics during the last five years, much that was doleful, was caused by this lack of leadership, by the absence of this thing which, seen even at its lowest appraisal of value, is more or less of value, is more or less an indispensable mechanism of our government.

Three Men Dominant 25 Years.

For 25 years, for practically the entire life, except the five years immediately past, of the present generation of Americans, we had three dominating personalities.

From 1896 until 1919 we had Roosevelt, Wilson and Bryan. I group them only on the basis of their contemporaneousness. Decidedly I do not undertake to group them on any other basis.

They had political preeminence during the same period. But I do not undertake to venture further in asserting whatever else they had or had not in common.

Any one who knows the men will smile to think how suspiciously Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson would have looked upon any placing of them in the same group except, perhaps, as regards their contemporaneousness in time.

Roosevelt, publicly, called Wilson a "Byzantine logothete." Privately his emotions about Wilson were expressed in words less classic and less urbane, more short and more ugly. Wilson, on his part, did not give himself the luxury of any public expression of the emotions he entertained about Roosevelt. To express it more accurately, Wilson gave himself the luxury of not talking about Roosevelt publicly at all, of ignoring Roosevelt. He did so because he thought that was the best way to manage his end of the controversy which his great rival tried rather steadily to force upon him; and also because, undoubtedly, he felt that to be silent, to have the air of gazing at the starry spaces over Roosevelt's head, was, the course most apt to bring exasperation to his rival.

Bryan in Glory Longest.

More seriously, it should be said that in all respects, and even as regards their common political contemporaneousness, Bryan was in a class a little apart from, and a little below, the other two. Bryan, it is true, was more successful in dominating his party for a somewhat longer period, in getting his party's nomination more often than the other two; but in the leadership of ideas, Bryan was inferior to them.

However, all that is meant to be said for the purposes of this article is that during these 25 years, the American people had, in these three, accepted leaders, personalities in whom great groups visualized their ideas, personalities to whom the people attached themselves emotionally.

In all of the five presidential elections from 1896 to 1916, inclusive, one or the other of these was one of the candidates. In 1900 two of them were candidates. Bryan for president and Roosevelt for vice president. In 1912 again two of them were candidates for president, Wilson and Roosevelt. In three of the campaigns, 1896, 1900 and 1908, Bryan was a candidate.

All Passed Together.

And even in the campaigns when one or the other was not a candidate he was usually a dominating factor in determining who else should be a candidate, and in framing the issues.

Then, in a single year, all three passed off the boards in one way or another.

In 1919 Roosevelt died; Wilson became incapacitated; and Bryan, one may say without stretching the facts too much to get the advantage of a coincidence—one may say that Bryan became shopworn, arrived at the point where he had been too long on the shelf, having been offered for sale too many times unsuccessfully.

This disappearance in a single year of the three personalities through whom the American people had been accustomed for a generation to express themselves is a definite fact of our recent political history. Much that happened afterward flowed from this fact. The chaos into which our foreign relations were thrown would not have happened if Wilson had survived. Probably it would not have happened if both Wilson and Roosevelt had survived, although most certainly Roosevelt would have taken issue with Wilson. Probably it would not have happened if Roosevelt had survived and Wilson disappeared; for Roosevelt would have found some way to formulate and make popular some kind of definite and affirmative foreign policy.

Picked "Lower Type" in 1920.

As one incident of the disappearance of these three, we had to step down to a different, and it will not generally be denied a lower, level to search for our presidential candidates. Hardly anyone will try to maintain that the two men who ran for president in 1920, Harding and Cox, were the equals of these other three.

We need not debate whether or not Harding and Cox were the equals of the other three in stature.

It is certain—it has been proved—that they were not equaled in their adaptation to become the accepted leaders of great masses of the American people, because, in fact, they did not so become.

One day during the campaign of 1920 I was talking with one of these two candidates. For the purposes of this story it does not matter which one. Our talk took much the turn that this article has. In the course of it, one of these two men said: "You must remember, brother, that in 1920 both of the parties had to go to the bush league for their candidates."

Has Chance to Prove Self.

It may be, indeed the facts of the recent election seem to prove, that a considerable mass of the American people have determined to take up Calvin Coolidge as the spokesman and symbol of their ideas and aspirations. We need not assert that Coolidge is the peer of the other three. If he should be, he has now the opportunity to show it. The fact is, the American people want a personality, want to visualize their ideas in some individual. They want that some man shall at once provide them with leadership from his own store of ideas and principles; and at the same time be the symbol of ideas, principles, prejudices and emotions widely held by average Americans. The people want such a symbol and they prefer that this symbol shall be, if possible, in the white house, and have the background of that position, the leverage of that high pulpit, for his spokesmanship.

It may be merely Coolidge's accidental presence in the white house that gave him this position, or enabled him to achieve it.

But it may be also that Coolidge's store of ideas, his point of view about matters of common interest, is just the one the people want. As to that we shall see during the coming administration.

Democrat Would Fare Same.

It may be that the republican party, and the people who think broadly in terms of republican principles—conservative folks generally have had the luck to find their symbol merely through the fact that there was an acceptable man in the white house. It may be that there is a more certain basis for this adaptation of Coolidge to the position of symbolic leadership.

In any event, the fact is that the democratic party, for the present, has no equivalent for Coolidge.

It may be that if some democrat had been in the white house instead of Coolidge, he might have arrived by that adventitious circumstance at the position of leadership that Coolidge has. However, what may be the fact, is that the democrats and all that mass of voters who do not see as republicans see, have no symbol, no spokesman, no leader.

Head-on Collision.

In the democratic party now there are two factions. One is personified in Governor Smith, of New York; the other in William G. McAdoo. The mere fact of the existence of two, and two so diverse, so opposed, so much in the position of head-on collision with each other as respects principles, ideas and prejudices—the mere fact that there are two, makes it inevitable that neither can become the one. Just in proportion as they contend with each other for dominance, will each destroy the capacity of the other for achieving the position that Coolidge has in the republican party.

Furthermore, the fact is that the groups behind each of these two are opposed in their ideas, points of view and prejudices as the two principals are.

Democrats Are Two Parties.

There is a deep, fundamental cleavage between the democrats of the big cities in the north and east, and the democrats of the south and west. And even between the democrats of the south and the democrats of the west, there is a minor cleavage. For the democratic party in the south is prevailingly conservative; whereas in the west it is prevailingly of the color of the two Bryans.

Other than these two, Smith and McAdoo, who have aspired for their party's presidential nomination—and I think I do not need to put the word "aspired" in the past tense—other than these two, there are three living men who have held, temporarily, the position of titular head of the party; who have been at one time or another their party's candidate for the president.

The first, in time, is Alton B. Parker, who was the candidate as long ago as 1904. That he is not a party leader in the sense in which I am speaking, and has not the qualifications to be, is sufficiently proved by the fact that to a considerable number of my readers the mere fact that he is still living will come as a surprise, and his name will merely stir a vague recollection in the elder generation of voters.

The second is James M. Cox, who was the candidate in 1920. If he had the qualifications for leadership in the sense and under the conditions under which Coolidge had leadership of the republican party—if that were true, Cox would have been again the candidate in 1924. Certainly he would have had a more dominating part in the present campaign and in his party's recenty years of history than in fact he has had. It hardly needs further amplification to show that Cox is not likely to be the man to stand face to face to Coolidge in the sense in which Roosevelt, when his party was out of power, stood face to face with Wilson; or, before that, Bryan to Roosevelt.

Davis' Defeat Obstacle.

The third of the men who have had the democratic party's nomination for the presidency is John W. Davis. It is conceivable, but not likely, that he could fill the need. The fact that he suffered a defeat, and a defeat as disastrous as either that of Cox or Parker is a handicap. Many politicians would say it is an insuperable obstacle. In fact, it is not necessarily insuperable. Nevertheless, for other circumstances, it is unlikely that Davis will be the man to become the democratic equivalent of Coolidge, to be the kind of symbol, spokesman and leader that Wilson, Roosevelt and Bryan were, and that Coolidge is now apparently about to be.

It is conceivable for Davis to devote himself to political life, to think and function in terms of political ideas, to set up policies alternative to Coolidge's to take advantage of republican mistakes—to be, in short, the leader of the opposition, the spokesman of that mass of voters, however large it may be from time to time, who will not agree with what the republican party does. It is conceivable for Davis to do this. But observers think it is unlikely he will. It is anticipated as more likely that Davis will regard his running for the presidency as an episode, will more or less retire from politics; and will resume the practice of law, under circumstances so exacting of hard work and devotion as to leave him without the necessary time and energy to function as a great political leader.

If this happens, the Democrats must look elsewhere for some symbol and spokesman to be the equivalent of what Coolidge is about to be for the republican party, and the more conservative elements of the population.

When Run-down or Recovering from a Prostrating Illness, Here's Good Advice

Atlanta, Ga.—"During a time of the 'flu' epidemic, in a mining town in Tennessee, I found it necessary to close my store, that I might act as nurse. There were a great many cases there at that time. We found Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to be the best tonic for convalescent patients. They all gained strength rapidly on this treatment.

"My own case was no exception. The 'Golden Medical Discovery' gave tone to the digestive organs and enriched the blood, with the result of restoring me to a general healthy condition."—J. M. Kitchersid, 154 Whitehall St.

WASH YOUR KIDNEYS BY DRINKING WATER

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids, to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.—(adv.)

Butcher Rejoices Over Wife's Recovery

"My wife suffered for five years and practically lived on toast and hot water. Doctors said she would have to be operated for gall stones. A lady advised her to try Mayr's Wonderful Remedy and after taking 4 bottles over two years ago, she has been entirely well ever since." It removes the catarrhal mucous from the intestinal tract, and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded at Jacobs' Pharmacy and druggists everywhere. —(adv.)

Hold-Up Frustrated By Owner of Grocery; Negro Youth Is Held

An attempt by J. B. Elder, 21, a negro of 195 Lambert street, to hold up M. Welch, proprietor of a grocery store at 44 Kennedy street, was cleverly frustrated by Mr. Welch early Saturday night when he picked up his pistol from under the counter and fired twice on the would-be intruder.

The negro entered the grocery establishment and ordered the proprietor to throw up his hands. Mr. Welch instead reached for his pistol and fired on the negro, who fled into the street, where he turned and fired back at Mr. Welch.

On information from persons who knew the negro by description, Call Officers Johnson and Cartwright went to his home and arrested him. He was held at police station on a charge of highway robbery.

COUZENS TO SEARCH FOR IRREGULARITIES

PLANS TO CAPTURE SLAYERS DELAYED

An air of mystery pervaded prohibition headquarters Saturday as plans for sending a picked posse into the north Georgia mountains in search for Guy Anderson and Glenn House, alleged slayers of Special Officer A. J. Webb, of Milton county, were held in abeyance pending further developments in the murder case.

There were numerous and conflicting rumors in the case. One report, unofficial, was that federal and state officers grouped in Atlanta were awaiting further information from other officers in the hill country before setting out on the man-hunt expedition. This report included information that a special corps of deputies had already invaded Dawson and adjoining counties in search for the two fugitives, and that they would notify Atlanta officers in event they located Anderson, House or "Guinea" Ransom, the latter of whom is wanted on a warrant charging him as an accessory to the slaying.

"Ambassadors" Sent?

Another rumor was that "ambassadors" representing the fugitives had sent reports to prohibition headquarters and that at least one of the three men had expressed a desire to surrender. This report could not be confirmed.

"We are waiting for further developments in the case," was the only statement made from the office of Prohibition Director Fred D. Dismuke, who has guided the investigation that led to murder warrants for Anderson and House.

George Baker, whose signed confession Wednesday afternoon led to the three warrants, remained in the Fulton county jail Saturday. Baker is said to have admitted that he participated in the liquor-running plot that led to the slaying of Officer Webb and the beating of his companion, County Policeman Verd Eison, but the actual murder was charged to Anderson and House.

Clue Developed Monday.

Investigators struck a blank situation as they started their search for the slayers. Nothing definite in the way of a clue was developed until Monday afternoon, when a mysterious tip told one of the investigators that an inspection of House's high-powered car would reveal facts desired in the case.

Federal Officers A. C. Sowell, Lon Adair and Joe Goode and City Officer Lon Evans launched a search for the designated car. They found it in a local garage and it bore marks of mutilation, leading the officers to believe that desperate means had been employed to erase blood stains from the upholstering.

A garage employee finally admitted he washed blood from the car under direction of Baker, whose arrest followed immediately. The latter broke down and signed a statement after being grilled for two days. He implicated Ransom in the rum-running plot and accused Anderson and House as the actual slayers.

Warrants Are Issued.

Warrants were issued in Gwinnett county for the accused men and a posse went to Dawson county in search for Anderson, House and Ransom, the officers believing that the three men had fled to haunts long familiar to Anderson. The posse visited the home of Ben Anderson, father of one of the accused men. The elder Anderson said that his son had not been at home for several days.

Residents of the community, however, told officers that Anderson was there on the day before they arrived and that his face and head bore marks of an accident or furious battle. He is believed by the officers to have been joined by House and Ransom and to have gone farther into the fastness of the north Georgia mountains.

Col. W. G. Edens Praises Results Of Highway Meet

Colonel William G. Edens, of Chicago, vice president of the Federal Trust Company of Illinois, and a director of the Dixie Highway association from Chicago and Illinois, arrived in Atlanta Saturday night en route to his home from Rome, Ga., where he attended the semi-annual meeting of the Dixie Highway association in session Friday and Saturday.

Colonel Edens came south especially to attend the highway association meeting and expects to remain in Atlanta two or three days. He is well known in this city and intends spending his brief stay here in seeing his friends again.

Colonel Edens was well pleased with the results of the Dixie Highway association meeting in Rome, at which time it was announced that the association would open the entire distance from Detroit, Mich., to its terminus at Miami, Fla.

Colonel Edens is prominent in banking circles and has for some time taken an active interest in highway work. The Federal Trust company, of which he is vice president, was founded by Charles G. Dawes, vice president-elect of the United States, who is now chairman of the board.

Highway improvement work in Illinois has taken on a new impetus in the past few years, Colonel Edens said upon his arrival here, and so pleased were the people of the state over the result of the expenditure of the $60,000,000 bond issue voted by the people in 1918, that at the general election of November 4 the people voted another bond issue of $100,000,000 for highway improvement work. The state of Illinois, with the 1918 bond issue money, has built 4,000 miles of concrete highway in the state, and expects soon to have about 9,000 miles of hard-surfaced roads, Colonel Edens stated.

Bond Salesmen of G. L. Miller Company Who Visited Atlanta on Inspection Trip

The above picture shows members of the northern and eastern sales force of G. L. Miller & Company, who were entertained here last week during an inspection trip. The trip was a reward to 18 salesmen for highest sales of Miller bonds in their districts during the first nine months of 1924.

That the people of the north and east are not prepared for the extensive commercial and industrial development to be found in the southeastern section around Atlanta is the opinion of a group of prize bond salesmen of the nation-wide sales organization of G. L. Miller & Co., Atlanta bond house, who visited Atlanta last week on a short tour of inspection.

Letters received by local officials of the company since the return of the visitors to their homes are filled with enthusiastic comment on the great development which was encountered in this city and the surrounding section, for which they were not prepared.

The trip had been arranged by the company as a reward for the highest volume of bond sales recorded in each sales district during the three-quarters period of the year. Eighteen men made the trip in a special car from New York.

Visitors Banqueted.

On their arrival in Atlanta they were met by officials of the local office, who had prepared a welcoming banquet of ample proportions in their honor. Bolling H. Jones, chairman of the board of the Fulton National bank, and Ivan Allen, of the Ivan Allen-Marshall company, were speakers, each paying a hearty tribute to the part which the Miller organization is playing in bringing in outside capital to the south for the erection of needed structures.

During their stay in the city, they were given a comprehensive view of the principal points of interest. The second day was given over entirely to sightseeing in a big Dixie coach. They first were shown over the northside residential district, then inspected the Exposition Cotton Mills, and were given a fried chicken luncheon at the Pershing Point apartments.

Received by Borglum.

In the afternoon they went to Stone Mountain where Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor, received them on the face of the mountain where the work of carving the statues is in progress. After being shown how the carving is done and the rock blasted from the mountainside, the group was photographed by Lee's head, with Josephus Daniels, former secretary of the navy, as one of the party. Dinner that evening was a Georgia barbecue served at Verner's lodge, with native negro entertainment provided.

The final day of the visit brought trips to the cyclorama, an inspection of the federal prison and a careful survey of the Henry Grady hotel, one of the largest financing operations handled by the company in Atlanta. Luncheon followed at the Capital City club, with Paul T. Arnold, secretary of the company, as host.

Those Who Made the Trip.

The men who made the trip included E. K. Pletcher, Philadelphia; H. W. Miller, Baltimore; Jean L. Reed and R. A. Dewey, Buffalo; P. W. Taylor, Utica; C. G. Hunter and Robert K. Tomlinson, Pittsburg; H. P. Keller and E. A. Engelke, St. Louis; E. T. Boles, Columbus, Ohio; W. J. Galloway, Memphis; W. J. Fay, Jr., A. D. Smith, John de Persia, Hamilton C. Platt and C. D. Hunter, of New York headquarters. Frank C. Eastman, Jr., of the Atlanta office, southern sales manager, headed the local entertainment committee.

8 Nabbed in War Begun on 'Drugs' In Macon Raids

Macon, Ga., November 15.—Federal officers and city detectives began one of the biggest raids for violation of the Harrison narcotic act ever staged here tonight. Before 10 o'clock eight persons had been taken into custody and it was said that they were not half through with the cleanup.

Those caught thus far are alleged to be peddlers of the drug.

MRS. HARDING SHOWS CHANGE FOR BETTER

Marion, Ohio, November 15.—Mrs. Warren G. Harding, reported near death at White Oaks, farm home of Dr. Carl Sawyer, was somewhat better shortly before noon today according to a bulletin issued at 11:15 a. m., by Dr. Sawyer. Mrs. Harding is suffering from kidney trouble. The bulletin follows:

"Mrs. Harding has had a slight change for the better. Her pulse is stronger and she has been holding her own, gaining a little. She took a little nourishment this morning and has been sleeping since 7:15 a. m."

New Lamp Has No Wick or Chimney

Most Brilliant Home Light Known—Cost One Cent a Night.

A new lamp which has no wick or chimney, yet, according to experts, gives the most powerful home light in the world, is the latest achievement of W. C. Fowler, 559 Factory building, Kansas City, Mo. This remarkable new lamp beats gas or electricity—gives more light than 300 candles, 18 ordinary lamps or 10 brilliant electric lights, and costs only one cent a night. A blessing to every home, especially on farm or in small town. It is absolutely safe, and gives universal satisfaction. No dirt, no smoke, no odor. A child can carry it. It is the ambition of Mr. Fowler to have every home, store, hall or church enjoy the increased comfort of this powerful, pleasing, brilliant white light, and he will send one of his new lamps on free trial to any reader of The Constitution who writes him. He wants one person to whom he can refer new customers. Take advantage of his free offer. Agents wanted. Write him today.—(adv.)

CAUSE AND EFFECT

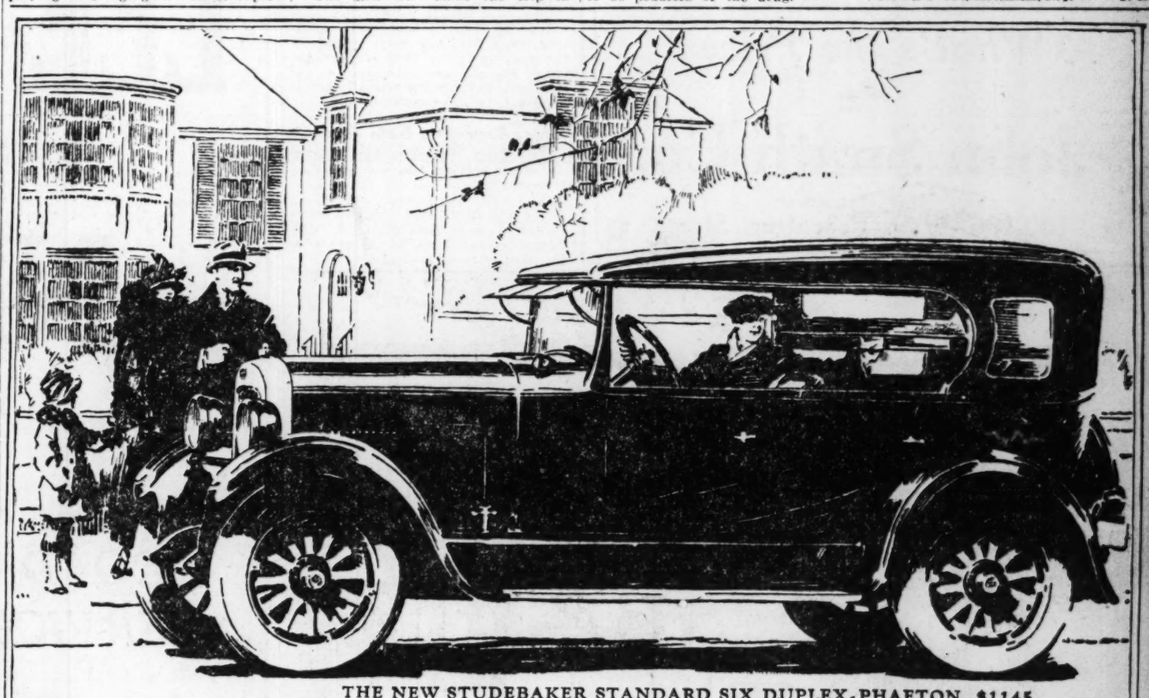

Coughs, colds or similar ailments don't just happen, they are the effect of a weakened system. The truth is that resistance is broken and you have failed to keep your body efficient.

Scott's Emulsion

is a form of nourishment that is a great help in building up the body to that degree of efficiency that coughs and colds do not seriously trouble.

If your resistance is broken down, build it up with Scott's Emulsion.

DAD has always wanted an open car. He likes freedom. He wants speed—and flexibility. He loves to open 'er up on a smooth country road and feel the wind whiz past his face.

But Mother . . . . she wants comfort and protection—she's thinking of that rainy day when the youngsters have to go to school.

And here at last is a new-type car to meet this old-time family problem.

It's a glorious — joyous — free, airy open car when you want it.

Then when it storms it may be changed to a comfortable, weather-tight enclosed car with complete protection from wind and rain.

Thirty seconds is all it takes—simply lower the roller side enclosures, without even leaving your seat. You've never seen anything like it before.

The Duplex body is framed and shaped in steel. Upper and lower sections are integral. Thus its construction is substantial and its beauty lasting.

It banishes once and for all the trouble of attaching the old-type curtains—makeshift at best.

No more hurried efforts hunting for the right curtain while the storm beats in.

No more exposure, through holes torn in them, while trying to obtain for the emergency, the protection given by a closed car.

To the man unwilling to sacrifice the thrill of open car motoring — to the woman who wants closed car protection right at her finger tips — this car offers a wonderful new adventure — it marks a new era in fine car possession.

In justice to yourself — see the new Duplex now, Only Studebaker makes it.

AUTO DEALERS' BIG ANNUAL MEET SET FOR DECEMBER 8

Nominating Committee Preparing List for Electing at Capital City Club Meeting.

T. K. Johnson, general chairman of the committee appointed to make arrangements for the annual meeting of the Atlanta Automobile association, set for Monday evening, December 8, at 6:30, Capital City club, reports that everything is in shape for the largest annual meeting ever held by the association. In spite of the many ups and downs in the automotive industry during the past year, says Mr. Johnson, we have increased the membership of our association to 175 representative dealers, the largest membership recorded in its history. One complimentary ticket to the annual meeting will be mailed out to every member. On account of the limited capacity of the banquet hall of the Capital City club, only 100 extra tickets, at the price of $5 each, will be available for purchase by those members who wish to bring others connected with their various organizations.

The nominating committee, consisting of the past presidents of the association, headed by D. C. Black, chairman, are now considering the names of various members of the association for officers for 1925. The recommendations of the nominating committee will be submitted at a business session of the association, which will be held at 6:30 p. m., just preceding the annual banquet, on December 8, and undoubtedly the list as presented by the nominating committee will be unanimously elected.

Fat Elrod, of the Reed Oil company, who has handled during the year many enjoyable entertainment features at membership meetings of the association, has charge of the entertainment features for the annual meeting. "Fat" says that he is going to stage an entertainment that will surpass anything ever put on by the association at these annual meetings. The banquet will be served promptly at 7 p. m., following the adjournment of the business session, and the celebration to be staged during the banquet will be entitled "A Night in Bohemia."

The annual report of President Samuel C. Porter, and Executive Secretary C. V. Hohenstein to be at the meeting, will touch on a number of splendid accomplishments during 1924, the details of which will be submitted at a later date.

MODERN PLUMBING IN MILLER BUILDING

In order that every unit in the new Miller building should be up to the highest possible standard, the Landers Plumbing and Heating company, who were the contractors for the plumbing of the building, furnished and installed the most modern equipment to be had.

Aside from the new Miller building, this popular plumbing concern is furnishing and installing in some of the largest mills now under construction in this vicinity all plumbing equipment, and in every case their promptness in delivery and efficient service in installing this equipment make them one of the most sought-after concerns in this line of business.

Mr. Landers, who is one of Atlanta's pioneers in the plumbing business, states "that we are equipped and prepared at all times to take care of any kind of plumbing or heating work and our large warehouse facilities enables us to keep a most complete stock."

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD FOR STURDEVANT

Savannah, Ga., November 15.—Funeral services for W. B. Sturdevant, 82, who died yesterday, were held this afternoon from the Independent Presbyterian church. He is survived by his widow; a daughter, Mrs. Leigh White, of Savannah, and a son in Waycross. He was prominent in business and church activities.

MYSTERY SURROUNDS MARMON ACTIVITIES

There is a deep, dark air of mystery clustering around the vicinity of the salesroom of the Marmon Atlanta company, local Marmon dealers.

The salesroom has undergone a complete renovation, as have all other departments of the building. A general appearance of being spic-and-span is manifested, and elaborate preparations are under way for something or other.

The entire sales force, usually bubbling over with willingness to talk, especially about the Marmon, are keeping discreetly silent. When the curious along the row mention the car the Marmonites seem particularly interested in the aspects of the weather and the football scores.

C. S. Thompson, of the local company, would make no statements in answer to questions put to him. He seemed as secretive and baffling as the magician who has nothing up his sleeve. The only statement he would make was:

"Wait!"

A general consensus of opinion gathered from dealers along the row seems to indicate that Marmon is on the verge of introducing a new model car—yet there are many rumors rife to the contrary.

Marmon has concentrated for the past ten years on the development of a single type of chassis and engine and rumors of a "small Marmon" have been officially denied.

It is generally maintained, however, that the increased manufacturing program at the Marmon factory must certainly involve some new public announcement of considerable consequence.

Nordyke & Marmon is nearing its seventy-fourth anniversary, and it is also contended that the traces of elaborate preparations which are under way are the setting for anniversary week.

Mr. Thompson would neither affirm nor deny the rumors concerning a new model Marmon, nor those of an anniversary celebration. Again he merely said: "Wait."

HENRY GRADY SCHOOL SEEKS ATHLETIC FUND

An active campaign having as its aim the raising of at least $2,500 for construction of bleachers and a fence at the athletic field under process of completion at Henry W. Grady senior high school for boys will be begun early this week. Materials for construction of the fence and bleachers also will be asked.

George M. Obear, Jr., chairman of the athletic committee of the Tech High school Parent-Teacher association, which inaugurated the movement for an athletic field, is to direct the drive. The fence and bleachers will be constructed by students of Tech High, which with Boys' High school is under the same roof at the Grady High school.

The two schools are in dire need of a field on which to hold their athletic contests, a field now being rented for the purpose. The field already has been graded, and construction of bleachers and the fence is all that is necessary to its completion.

Mrs. Aspregen Gets Estate.

New York, November 15.—The entire estate of John Aspregen, who died November 8, is left to the widow, Mrs. Lucilla B. Aspregen, according to the will filed today. The estate is valued at more than $150,000. Mr. Aspregen was head of Aspregen & Co., dealers in cottonseed oil.

Lee Tire Service Boys Now in New Spring St. Home

L. NEAL SMITH — H. F. WEBB — T. D. SIMS

The Lee tire service, formerly the 328 Tire company, local distributors of Lee tires, are now in their new home on the corner of Spring and Pine streets. Their new home was designed especially for their use and is one of the best-arranged drive-in tire-service stores in Atlanta.

In addition to Lee tires and tubes they handle gasoline and oil. A fleet of service trucks provides Lee users prompt service whenever needed. This firm handles a large volume of commercial business on both solid and pneumatic tires.

The firm is composed of L. Neal Smith, T. D. Sims and H. F. Webb, all of whom are young men. Their success as Lee distributors has been remarkable, according to E. H. Priest, district manager for the Lee factory.

Mr. Smith is a native of Columbus, but has been in Atlanta and continuously connected with Lee for the past five years. He has served the Atlanta branch in their office, as a road man and as distributor.

T. D. Sims had the good fortune to come to Atlanta at an earlier age from the state of Michigan. Since entering business he has been connected with the tire business and was for sometime connected with the Lee branch here.

H. F. Webb is a native of Atlanta and has been connected with the automotive business since leaving school. Much of this time was spent with the motor truck industry and his associates say that this experience has fitted into their truck tire department admirably.

These boys, operating under a partnership agreement, have been in business about a year. Their success is being watched by their friends and by the local automobile fraternity with a great deal of interest and pride.

11TH VICTIM DIES OF POISONED CIDER

Lynchburg, Va., November 15.—W. C. Baker, retired railroad man of Auburn N. Y., died last night from the effects of poisoned cider served last Monday to the aged residents of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks national home at Bedford. His death brought the list of those who succumbed to the cider, which had been put into a barrel, which previously contained a plant-spraying poison to eleven. Charles Mosby, superintendent of the home, said today that three aged Elks are in precarious condition, but the other 14 now ill from the poison were much improved.

Funeral arrangements for Mr. Baker will be held in abeyance pending the arrival here from Perry, Iowa, of his widow.

CHRISTMAS PUBLICITY OF AUTO MEN READY

During the past week, the general steering committee, of which Sam E. Levy is chairman, appointed by the Atlanta Automobile association to prepare plans for a cooperative Christmas advertising campaign by the dealers, to increase the sale of cars, accessories and automotive equipment during the Christmas holidays, completed their final schedule of newspaper advertising to be run in the three big Atlanta daily newspapers, beginning the latter part of November and running up to Christmas Eve.

The general purpose of the campaign is to acquaint the Atlanta public with the desirability of cars and automotive equipment as acceptable Christmas presents. "The association," says Mr. Levy, general chairman, "feels that it is rendering a real service in calling attention of the Atlanta public to the value and necessity of investing their Christmas money in items of a permanent, useful nature, instead of spending it on many items of a temporary character."

Practically every member of the association has contributed financially towards the putting on of the campaign, and within the next week it is expected that those who have not yet subscribed will send in their subscriptions to the executive secretary's office, 412 Gould building. It is the consensus of opinion that this is the most valuable cooperative movement ever undertaken by the association for the benefit of its members, and those interested in purchasing automotive equipment. The campaign has been well considered and carefully analyzed, the preparation of the copy being in the hands of an expert advertising agency, specializing in this class of advertising, and every item run will be thoroughly censored and approved by a special committee appointed for the purpose.

Virginia Mining Resumes.

Bristol, Tenn., November 15.—Mine operators of the southwest Virginia fields have resumed operations on a large scale, according to information received here today, and 75 per cent of the miners who have been idle for the past months have returned to the pits.

SOCIAL HYGIENE WEEK TO BE OBSERVED HERE

The American Social Hygiene association, in cooperation with a number of local organizations, will put on a week's institute on social hygiene, beginning Monday, November 24, and running through that week with the exception of Thursday, "Thanksgiving day."

The purpose of the institute is to discuss the scope and program of social hygiene and the need for cooperative community effort in dealing with its problems, the announcement says.

Representatives from the American Social Hygiene association will present the subject from the angle of respective departments as follows: Dr. Newell W. Edson, department of educational measures; Valeria H. Parker, M. D., department of protective measures; George E. Worthington, department legal measures, and Walter H. Brunet, M. D., department medical measures.

Dr. Edson and Dr. Galloway, of the American Social Hygiene association, conducted a one-day conference in Atlanta last April and those who attended were impressed with the soundness of treatment of the subject, and with the need for further study together, it is said.

Sessions of the institute will be held in the Central Congregational church and the program also will include a number of reels of motion pictures dealing with various phases of the subject as presented by the association speakers. These film showings will be given through the courtesy of the management at the Rialto theater.

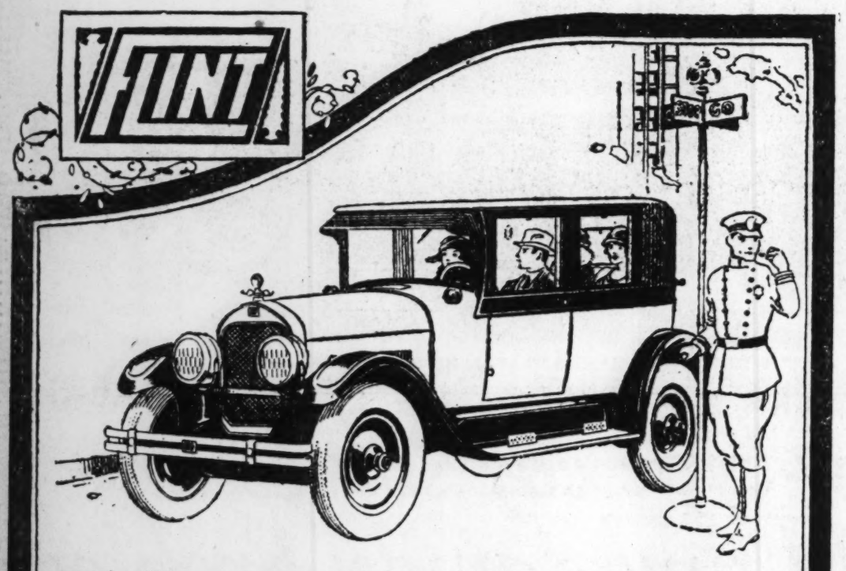

COTTONSEED PRODUCTS SHIPPED FROM GEORGIA

Savannah, Ga., November 15.—(Special.)—The first of five steamers to clear Savannah with large cargoes of cottonseed cake and cottonseed meal and hulls left last night. The Argalia is now en route to Liverpool.

This is the biggest movement of this product from Savannah in 1924. The Eldrid, Niagristan, Sabatowar and Bragg are in port loading for Glasgow and Liverpool.

Hotels of Switzerland make a feature of their gardens.

A. M. E. MEETING BROUGHT TO CLOSE

The Atlanta conference of the A. M. E. church brought its business session to a close Saturday afternoon and Saturday night was given over to a program arranged by the Atlanta Normal and Industrial institute, with Dr. J. A. Hadley presiding. The conference will end this afternoon.

Various phases of industrial training were touched on by the speakers Saturday night. Richard D. Stinson, principal of the institute, spoke of the founding and object of the school and pointed out the relation it bears in shaping the life and character of the negro youth to cope with the industrial problems of the south.

Other speakers included Dr. H. D. Canady, L. A. Townsley, W. J. Williams and J. T. Wilkerson.

Financial Report Read.

The financial report of the conference, giving an itemized account of the financial status of the various districts and of the W. H. and F. M. society, was presented. Florence L. Hadley, head of the W. H. and F. M. society, made a report to the conference in which she explained the scope of the work being done by the organization. She told how much can be done to make the life, conduct and habits of the negro girl and woman what they should be.

Bishop Flipper heartily commended the women's department. The educational rally for Morris Brown college and the denominational schools resulted in the collection of $638.

Dr. John Harmon, head of the Monticello district, told the convention that the A. M. E. church in Georgia needs $150,000 in the next ten years and declared the full amount can and will be raised by the convention membership. Most of the speakers were optimistic in their expressions regarding collection of the amount needed.

Ten Deacons Ordained.

The convention ordained ten deacons and eight elders. Several important changes in the assignment of pastors are expected and three or four preachers will be transferred to Texas and to different parts of the state.

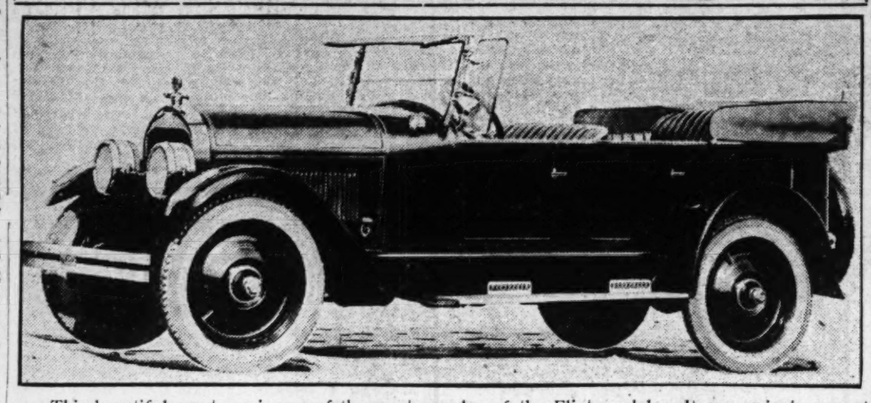

Dr. A. A. Duncan, pastor of the Turner Memorial church, of Atlanta, told the conference that the church, which is being erected, would be considered a monument to the late Bishop Henry M. Turner. He asked the cooperation of the convention members.

VICTIMS OF SMASH-UP IN KENTUCKY RECOVER

Cincinnati, Ohio, November 15.—C. M. Mitchell and two other persons, who were brought to a Cincinnati hospital to receive treatment for injuries when a loaded coal train backed into a motor rail car, have so far recovered that they are expected to leave the hospital in a few days, it was said today.

The accident occurred on the Kentucky and Tennessee railway at Barthell, Ky., last Saturday and not on the Southern Railway system as reported in previous dispatches.

New Flint Six Sport Touring

This beautiful sport car is one of the most popular of the Flint models. It comes in two sport colors, blue and maroon, and can be seen in the showrooms of the local branch, 236 Peachtree street.

TERRELL NEW MANAGER OF EXPRESS COMPANY

Appointment of W. F. Terrell as general manager of the Southeastern Express company, with headquarters in Atlanta, has been announced by J. E. Skaggs, who recently was elected president of the concern, succeeding the late J. B. Hockaday.

Mr. Terrell succeeded to the position held by Mr. Skaggs prior to the latter's elevation.

Other appointments announced were:

E. H. Goodrich, superintendent in charge of division No. 1, Charlotte, North Carolina.

J. J. West, superintendent division No. 4, Meridian, Miss.

Mr. Terrell was born at Orange, Ga., and entered service of the Southern Express company at Gainesville as clerk and wagon driver in 1891. Subsequently was agent at Gainesville and held various positions in the Southern Express until 1917, when he was promoted to the post of superintendent of the Southern Express at Charlotte, N. C., which position he held with the advent of the Southeastern Express company in 1921.

Mr. Terrell has announced his intention of shortly moving his family from Charlotte to Atlanta to take up his permanent residence in this city.

Brazilians Denied Amnesty.

Rio Janeiro, November 15.—President Bernardes today issued a manifesto to the Brazilian people upon the occasion of the fulfillment of the second year of his presidential term, stating that the government was firm in its determination to maintain order and sustain the people of legally-constituted authority. The president declared he would not resign and that amnesty would not be granted to those who have participated in revolutionary attempts.

Request To Abandon 4 Street Car Lines To Be Heard Monday

Requests of the Georgia Railway & Power company to abandon service and remove tracks on four lines will be considered Monday morning by the city council committee of electric and other railroads. The meeting originally was set for Saturday, but was postponed because several members of the committee were absent from the city.

The power company, claiming that receipts are not sufficient to maintain the lines, and stating that all service abandoned will be fully supplemented on nearby routes, asks permission to remove tracks on Mill street, between Orme and Luckie streets; Hill street, from Fair street to Woodward avenue, and Woodward avenue from Hill street to Cherokee avenue; Fraser street from Fair to Hunter streets, and Ashby street from Gordon to Mathews streets.

MERCHANTS TO HONOR 6 PAST PRESIDENTS

With the idea of enabling members to improve their service to the retail buying public of Atlanta, a most unusual program has been prepared by the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association for its final 1924 general membership meeting to be held next Thursday November 20, at 6 o'clock, at supper, chamber of commerce building.

At this time each of the six past presidents of the association will deliver a short talk of not more than 10 minutes, covering "The Most Helpful Idea to Be Offered a Retailer for the Development and Growth of His Business During 1925." Past presidents are: T. H. Latham, Samuel Rothberg, Ivan E. Allen, J. P. Allen, W. W. Orr and F. J. Paxon. The meeting is in the nature of a general reception to the past presidents.

Every effort is being made to secure the largest attendance of the year, invitations being sent out, not only to executives and department heads, but to employees in general.

During the service of the supper a special musical program has been arranged. The newly-elected song leader for the association, Forrest Taylor, of the Cable Piano company, will be present to lead the meeting in a number of community songs.

This meeting will terminate the membership meeting activities of the present administration, and no further meetings will be held until the annual meeting of the association, scheduled for the latter part of January, 1925, it is said.

The membership of the association is now over 300 which, in addition to the membership of the Atlanta Automobile association, makes the total strength of retail businesses represented in their executive offices nearly 500.

MERCER GLEE CLUB TO APPEAR MONDAY

More than 40 Mercer university students, touring the state singing in the institution's 18th annual glee club tour, will appear Monday night at the Atlanta Woman's Club in "A Glee Club in Turkey." The present tour, including 10 cities, is being billed as the pre-Thanksgiving tour.

A chorus of 20 voices, four end men, an orchestra, "The Kings of Rhythm," and several vaudeville features have been combined into the comedy skit written by Roy L. Hurst, formerly with Al G. Field's minstrels.

Chorus members are: G. Davis, T. D. Wells, Joe Lawrence and J. T. McGlothlin, first tenors; E. A. Crudup, Clay Olbon, Riley McKoy and E. K. Cargile, second tenors; E. B. Alford, Robert Brewster, J. L. Drake, Lonnie Fleming, Jack Murray, baritones; Ralph Johnson, Julius Johnson, Chalmers Chapman, R. C. Young, W. J. Carswell and W. A. Bootle, bassos.

Members of the orchestra are Dan Davis, director; Monk McAllister, James Dudley, Jimmie McClothlin, Ralph Tabor, Ralph Johnson, Edward Benton, Russell Burke, Roy Parker and Robert Lee.

The Mercer Glee club, while in Atlanta, is being sponsored by the George Washington Council, No. 1, Knights of America.

Accessory Men Elect.

Chicago, November 15.—W. T. Morris, of Bridgeport, Conn., today was elected president of the Automotive Equipment association at a meeting held here. Field Osburne, of Memphis, was chosen vice president.

RAPS PASTEURIZATION PLAN AT BIRMINGHAM

Milk pasteurization in Birmingham has not been a decided success, and drawing conclusions from conditions in that city, pasteurization laws for Georgia will not be recommended by him, it was said Saturday by J. W. Key, who, with two other representatives of the Georgia Pure Milk league, returned Friday night from a three-day inspection tour of the Alabama metropolis.

Mr. Key, with his brother, W. T. Key, and P. A. Wade, were appointed by the Georgia Pure Milk league to visit Birmingham as a result of an address by Leo Frank, milk pasteurization expert of the United States public health service, who told of the benefits of pasteurization, and urged Georgia milk producers to urge passage of pasteurization laws in this state.

"Only bad milk is pasteurized in Birmingham, the same as in Atlanta," Mr. Key said, "and practically the only result has been a decrease in prices of milk, which has led to opposition to the plan by a large percentage of the city's dairymen.

"According to regulations in Birmingham, milk containing more than 30,000 bacteria must be pasteurized. When the law first was passed, the bacteria limit was 50,000, but it was reduced this year.

"There are three pasteurization plants in the city, one of which is operated by dairymen on a cooperative plan. However, we were informed that as soon as contracts expire, a large number of the dealers intend to abandon the project and to return to the sale of raw milk."

MARIONETTE RATS TO OFFER BURLESQUE

"Sneezer Et Cleopatrick," a comic historical burlesque, will be presented by the freshman Marionette players of Georgia Tech at two performances, the first performance of which will be presented Friday evening, November 21, at Egleston hall, under the auspices of the Y. W. C. A. business girl's league. The following evening a performance will be given at Washington Seminary, sponsored by members of the Phi Pi sorority. In these performances the freshman Marionette players are making their debut.

"Sneezer Et Cleopatrick" was written by Harry Ellerbe, author of "The Seventh Veil," successful Marionette production of last spring, and is directed by W. Fulmer Wells. As an added attraction, the Marionette orchestra will play for the performance.

C. H. Campbell, as Cleopatrick, the sinful lily of the Nile, has proved himself an abel impersonator and Ed Bruce and Harold Warnell, playing Chulius Victrola Sneezer and Asparagae Brutus respectively, are doing excellent work. Others in the cast are J. W. Crouch as Helena Cuticura; H. C. Allen, as the Witch of the Seehorn; Charles Gladwin, as Hezebella Poops; Robert Benier, as Gus Gastrectus; Julian Harris, as Little Stella Shreddedsoup; J. W. Powell and G. R. Bynum as Youvabite and Ivanitch, two maidens.

The club has planned several week-end trips for the play during the winter season and arrangements have been made for performances at Griffin, Carrollton, Macon and other neighboring towns.

'FAUNTLEROY' AUTHOR LEFT $150,000 ESTATE

New York, November 15.—The will of Mrs. Frances Eliza Townsend, better known as Frances Hodgson Burnett, author of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," who died October 26 at Plandome, Long Island, was filed for probate in Mineola today. The document disposes of $100,000 in real and $50,000 in personal property.

A sister, Miss Mary Jordan, of Plandome, receives the contents of Mrs. Townsend's home at Bermuda and all clothing belonging to Mrs. Townsend.

The will was made March 3, 1915. The residuary estate, constituting the bulk of the property, is left to a son, Vivan Burnett, "to use during his life as he may see fit." The son is also named executor.

Other officers of the association remain the same. Mr. Morris is vice president and general manager of the American Chain company.

PRESBYTERIANS BEGIN TRAINING SCHOOL HERE

The Atlanta Presbyterian Training school for workers in religious education, under the auspices of the field division of Sunday school and Young People's work of the Presbyterian church, will begin sessions at the Central Presbyterian church, opposite the capitol, Sunday, November 16, and continue through Saturday, November 21.

George White is chairman of the committee on preparation for the school, and Miss Linnora Harvey, of the First Presbyterian church, has been engaged as enrollment secretary. Rev. W. L. Lathem, pastor of the church is chairman of publicity.

The school is being conducted for the purpose of teaching ministers and church workers interested in religious education and who desire best plans and methods; for Sunday school superintendents, officers and teachers who are willing to study their work more effectively; for prospective teachers and officers and all who are eager to learn how to make their service in any capacity more effective and for adults and young people interested in the study of the Bible.

No morning classes will be held unless there are sufficient applications in advance so that additional teachers may be secured. Classes will be held every evening at 7 o'clock and will continue for 50 minutes, followed by a recess and another 50-minute period.

Supper will be served every evening at 6:50 o'clock by ladies of the Central Presbyterian church, in order that those who are engaged in business during the day and have not time to secure a meal may take advantage of the church supper, and classes will not be delayed.

The necessary books are to be furnished by the local secretary until the opening date. After that time they may be purchased at the Central Presbyterian church.

The faculty for the daily sessions of the school is unexcelled, states Rev. Lathem, all of the instructors having taught in training schools heretofore.

Courses will be taught in: Principles of teaching, Bible, (a study of the life of Christ); Bible, (Genesis); missionary education in the church school, beginner pupil, primary pupil, junior pupil, intermediate-senior materials, young people's agencies; study of adult life, and the problems of Sunday school management.

GENERAL WOOD CITED FOR BRAVERY IN CUBA

Washington, November 15.—Secretar Weeks announced today approval of two citations for gallantry in action, carrying with them silver stars, awarded by an army board to Major General Leonard Wood, retired, because of incidents in Cuba when he was colonel of the 1st volunteer cavalry (the Rough Riders). The specific dates and places mentioned in the citations are Las Guasiamas June 24, 1898, and Santiago, July 1, 1898.

105, Takes Third Wife.

Mexico City, November 15.—Nicolas Martinez, 105, was married here today to Francisca Quintera, 80. It is Martinez' third marriage. His first wife lived with him almost 70 years and presented him with seven sons. He lived with his second wife 14 years before her death and she bore him two more sons.

PARIS POLICE SEIZE TONS OF OBSCENITY

Paris, November 15.—Acting on numerous complaints from foreign diplomats and section of the League of Nations dealing with the suppression of pornography the Paris police have succeeded in locating one of the principal centers from which obscene literature and pictures have been shipped all over Europe and the Americas.

Two brothers, Georges and Robert Briffaut, are under bail for trial on a technical charge of outraging public decency. The police declare their inquiry shows that the Briffauts made nearly a million francs annually from their business and only recently purchased a fine country estate.

Ten tons of books were seized at a bindery, and several thousand photographs also were found. The books were concealed under false titles, often accompanied by the names of famous and reputable publishers, which made detection dificult, the more so as they were mostly supplied through the mails.

TRAFFIC CLUB LUNCH TO BE HELD MONDAY

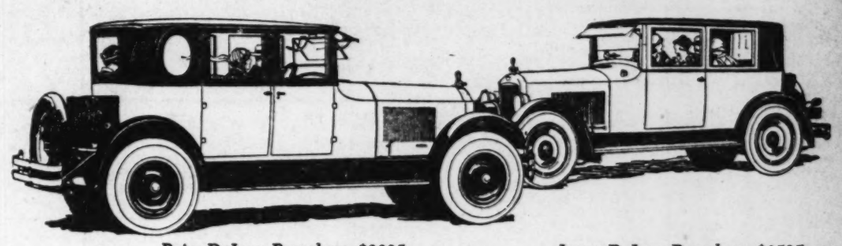

The Traffic club of Atlanta will hold its regular semi-monthly luncheon at noon Monday morning in the rainbow room of the Ansley hotel, it was announced Saturday.

A novel entertainment program has been arranged, and a speaker of note has been secured to address the meeting.

RESPITE GRANTED CONDEMNED BOYS

Gervis Bloodworth and Willie Jones, Taylor county youths who were convicted of the murder of Howard F. Underwood in December, 1923, and sentenced to pay the penalty of death on November 28, Saturday were granted a respite until Friday, January 9, 1925, by Governor Walker. They are now lodged in the Muscogee county jail at Columbus.

Governor Walker's action in staying the execution of the youths followed receipt of a petition presented to the chief executive by attorneys for the defense, in which it was revealed that Homer Beeland, chief council for the youths, is ill and has been unable to work on the case the past ten days. The petition further sets out that the defense wishes time to secure additional material for the petition now before the Georgia prison commission, which petition reviews the case and asks that the death sentences be commuted to life imprisonment.

A sworn statement by Dr. J. E. Mangham, made to a notary public of Columbus, confirms the statement in the petition concerning the illness of Attorney Beeland.

The case of Bloodworth and Jones has created considerable interest in the state. The youths were arrested shortly after the death of Underwood, a medicine salesman, in Taylor county. On December 10 they were jointly indicted and on December 17 went on trial in Taylor superior court, being found guilty of first degree murder.

A new trial for the youths was denied by the trial court, and the case was carried to the state supreme court which tribunal affirmed the action of the lower court. On October 31 the two defendants were resentenced by Judge George P. Munroe to pay the death penalty on November 28.

LOSES IN ATTEMPT TO PREVENT SALE OF DENVER ROAD

Denver, November 15.—Federal Judge J. Foster Symes today denied a petition in intervention filed by Howard Palmer, minority bondholder of the Denver and Rio Grande railroad.

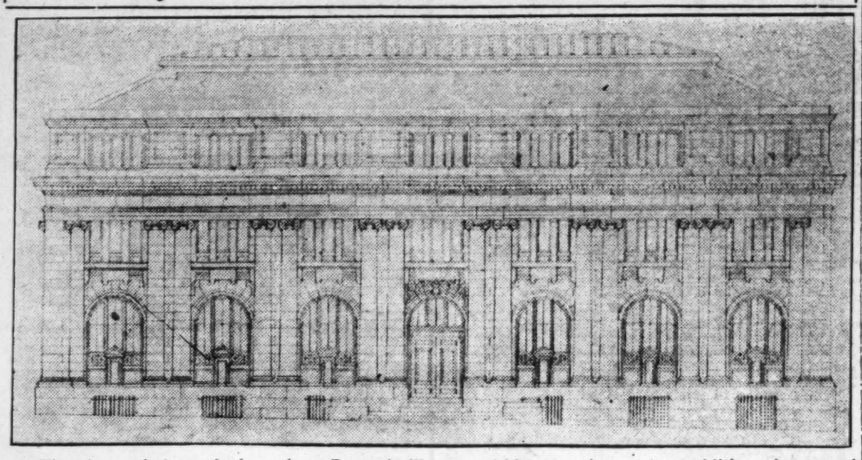

Palmer sought to prevent the court from approving the sale of the road to representatives of the Missouri Pacific and the Western Pacific railroads, alleging the sale price of approximately $18,000,000 was too low.

After his decision, which was given after a hearing in chambers, Judge Symes postponed until 4 o'clock this afternon formal approval of the sale of the road. Palmer announced he would appeal.

Roach are the officers alleged to have been assailed by the couple.

Carnegie Library Addition Move Launched As City Celebrates 25th Anniversary

The above photograph shows how Carnegie library would appear in event an addition of a second story is made, the move for which was launched recently in connection with the city's celebration of the 25th anniversary of the library. Hentz, Reid & Adler, architects, made the drawing and estimate that a second story could be added for $50,000, and the city will be asked for the amount, under present plans.

Coincident with preparations to celebrate on November 20 the twenty-fifth anniversary of Atlanta's Carnegie library, comes the announcement of a move, already well underway, which provides for the enlargement of the present building by the addition of a second story, according to Miss Tommie Dora Barker, librarian.

Specifications, including approximate cost of the proposed addition, and information of the advantages to be offered, have been obtained by Miss Barker, and a definite attempt will be made to carry the plan through, it is learned.

The cost is estimated at $50,000 and the additional space gained through the enlargement, would care for the natural growth of the library for a considerable period, it is pointed out. The present building is wholly inadequate, it is said, and additional space is necessary to care for the expansion and must be had at an early date if the service is to continue with any degree of satisfaction, Miss Barker asserts.

History of System.

The move for more space was inaugurated simultaneously with the announcement that plans for the celebration of the quarter-century anniversary of the library had been completed and that "Visitor's Night" would be observed on November 20. "A Little Story of a Big Work" is an interesting pamphlet which Miss Barker, with the assistance of the library personnel, has compiled, shows the tremendous growth of the book-reading habit in Atlanta, the number of books read annually by Atlantans, the reference and information service which must be maintained and other features offered the general public for the asking by the library.

The real beginning of Atlanta's present library, the nucleus of the Carnegie system, was instituted on July 30, 1867, immediately following the close of the civil war. E. Y. Clarke, Darwin Jones and Henry Jackson, pioneer Atlantans at that time and leaders in bringing the city "out of its ashes," called a meeting and decided that a library was necessary at once. An association was formed which laid the first plans for this city's great library system.

The $50,000 required to add the second story is expected to be given by the city, it is said. The library board, after going into the matter thoroughly, is convinced that there is an urgent need for more space, not only to handle the increasing business and the present 110,000 volumes, but to care for the increase in books from time to time, the rapid growth in demands made upon the library for statistical information and other help which the institution must supply with its present limited quarters and equally as limited personnel, it is pointed out.

Atlanta has $250,525 invested in library buildings. Of this amount, $202,000 was given by Mr. Carnegie; $20,000 by Fulton county; $5,000 by citizens of Atlanta, and $23,525 by the city of Atlanta. The total value of the library, it is said, is placed at $800,000.

Leaders in the move to carry through the program for an additional building will urge the city to appropriate the necessary amount, according to plans drawn and estimated by Hentz, Reid & Adler, local architects. Just when the move launched as a pre-celebration affair will take definite form and a proposal made to city fathers, is not known, although it is highly probable that action will be pressed and that the beginning of the new year will see Atlanta's library system on the threshold of an era of extension which will place it on the same level as other large southern cities occupy, as regards library systems.

Wallace P. Reed, writing of the beginning and early struggles of Atlanta's first library association, throws much interesting light on the city's early history and mentions a number of leading citizens in the fight to restore Atlanta after the civil war period.

"The summer of 1867 was not a favorable time for the inauguration of a literary movement in Atlanta," he says.

"The city was rising very slowly from the desert of ashes left by Sherman. Many streets were partially obstructed by the debris of the great fire. There were few decent sidewalks, and the main thoroughfares resembled neglected country roads.

Cheap temporary buildings had been erected for the merchants and there were very few substantial two and three-story structures.

State Not Recognized.

"At that time Georgia was not recognized as a state. If laws are silent in the midst of arms, literature could hardly be expected to make itself heard and felt.

"But there were many young men here in the those days who were plucky, enterprising and hopeful. On the 19th of August, in the year before mentioned, several young men held a meeting and organized the Young Men's Library association.

"It was a risky venture for a city under bayonet rule, poverty-stricken, and in mud to attempt the establishment of a library, but our public-spirited people came forward and gave what they could in the shape of money and books.

"The idea of a library association suggested first by Darwin G. Jones, who, together with Henry Jackson and E. Y. Clarke, called a meeting on July 30, 1867, in the office or W. H. Parkins in a room just above the Georgia National bank, 4 East Alabama street. Twelve young men attended this meeting. A committee was appointed to draft a constitution and by-laws, which were adopted at a subsequent meeting and signed by 47 members.

In the preamble of the constitution adopted by these "plucky, enterprising and hopeful" young men they state that the purpose of organizing an association was to "extend our information upon subjects of general utility, promote a spirit of useful inquiry, and qualify ourselves to discharge properly the duties incumbent upon us.

"Having neither money nor books, the association accepted the hospitality of Mr. Parkins' rooms a time; however, by September 2, the board met for the first time in the rented quarters on Broad street, when the library committee reported that the rent of the room would be $300 a month while necessary shelving would cost $15.00.

First Book Donated

"The first book donated was Appleton's Cyclopedia, given by Col. L. P. Grant. The first year of the association was extremely precarious, but through lectures and by other means, enough money was raised to keep the work going. Within a few years the association was firmly established and the library became the pet institution of the growing city."

By 1869, the book collection numbered 800 volumes and by 1871, 2,000 volumes, while the membership had increased to 400. While one might consider that books were the greatest need of a library, Darwin G. Jones ascribes the success of the association to the purchase of a carpet. In a speech, reminiscent of the early days, which Mr. Jones made in 1893 at the time when the library moved into its home at 101 Marietta street, he related the following incident in reference to the purchase of the carpet.

"We needed books," he said. Six directors of the thirteen thought we ought to have a carpet, the floor was so bare and uninviting. We could not outvote seven but we could scheme, and we did in this way: We ascertained that we could buy a carpet for about $30 on 60 days time if some one of us would be personally responsible. One of the six signed an agreement to become personally liable for the carpet and induced one of the most liberal of the opposing seven to sign with him. Then the other five of the six who wanted the carpet, signed, which made seven signatures.

"At the next meeting, without any explanation, the carpet matter was quietly brought up, and the vote was 7 to 6 again, but this time in favor of the carpet. Of course the seven who had become personally liable voted for the purchase, thereby practically making the other six responsible with them. The carpet was bought and promptly paid for when due.

"I shall never forget the incident. While a small thing, it was a great one. The members immediately took a pride in inviting the ladies to the room. The ladies responded graciously, and brought pictures and flowers, and lent us their presence and encouragement.

"From that moment the library association has been a success."

Women Were Admitted.

The time to which he refers must have been about 1873, for, it was in that year that, with suitable gallantry, an amendment to the constitution was passed providing that "the privileges of membership shall be extended to females, under the same constitutional restriction applicable to males with all the rights appertaining thereto."

To call the names of the men who were directors of the Young Men's Library association during the thirty-two years of its history is to call the names of those identified with all the activities for the upbuilding of the city during that time. Captain Henry Jackson was the first president, with Darwin G. Jones, vice president. Mr. Jones is the only surviving member of the organizing group. Other names connected with its early history are: E. Y. Clarke, John Keely, Louis Gholstin, B. Mallon, Henry W. Grady, S. M. Inman, R. J. Lowry.

Membership on the board of directors of the Y. M. L. A. came to be the most coveted honor to which a young man could attain; and the annual election of members to the board was the political and social event of the year.

From Broad street the library moved in 1874 to what is now the Ivan Allen-Marshall building on Marietta street; in 1881, it moved into its own building which still stands at 45 Decatur street; again, in 1893, the library moved to a new location, having purchased the old Markham home, at 101 Marietta street.

There it remained until the Young Men's Library association became the Carnegie Library of Atlanta.

Agreement Reached.

On May 6, 1899, the contract between the directors and the city was agreed to which consummated arrangements for the double gift to the city of the property of the Young Men's Library association and of the gift from Mr. Carnegie of $100,000 for a building, a gift which later was increased to $145,000. The directors of the Young Men's Library association obtained the gift of $100,000 for the buliding from Mr. Carnegie, purchased the site at a cost of $35,000, and offered the whole property to the city, including 20,000 books, if the city would agree to maintain a free public library.

With the signing of this contract, the Y. M. L. A. as it was affectionately called, officially ceased to be after an existence of 32 years. During this time it had made an invaluable contribution to the life of the city through making books accessible to everyone for reading and study within the building and available for home reading by the payment of a small membership fee.

This cooperative experiment in the ownership of books was so successful that it paved the way for full community ownership through a tax supported public library, which has been realized in the present Carnegie library.

Summary of Library.

The following summary will show the progress of the library as a city institution. The library opened with a staff of 8 people; today it has 45 people on the staff. The library has at present 57,803 registered borrowers and lent, in 1924, for home reading 625,000 valumes. Approximately 100,000 readers have been served during the year in the main building in research and study. The library's book collection now numbers about 110,000 volumes.

During its twenty-five years of service, the library has lent for home reading 7,000,000 volumes; 2,300,000, or 33 1-3 per cent of the total circulation, have been lent in the last five years.

In keeping with the modern idea of making books accessible to people living in all parts of the city, the first branch library was opened in 1909, called the Anne Wallace branch in honor of Miss Wallace, the first librarian. Others have followed with the expansion of the city: Oakland City in 1912; Uncle Remus in 1913; South Branch in 1916; Auburn branch for colored in 1920; English avenue in 1921; Inman Park in 1922; and Stewart avenue in 1924. Approximately 290,000 books a year are lent through the branch system.

Plans for Future.

In order that the next 25 years may not fall short of the first 25 in achievement, it is said, the library must plan for the accomplishment of the following ends, outlined in the plan for an addition:

The enlargement of the present main building: The library has outgrown both book capacity and work space, and must have more room to meet the inevitable expansion of work;

A large book collection both for home reading and for research and study in the building;

Reasonable expansion of the branch system to centers of population inaccessible to a library agency.

Favorites Are Heard On Victor Records In New Releases

Fritz Kreisler's bow can plumb the deeps of human feeling and this week he chooses to don a sober mien "Slavonic Lament" and "Dirge of the North," on Victor records.

John McCormack counters with two promises of spring—two charming love melodies to brighten dull days. "When" is impetuous and swift, reflecting the ardent lover, while "Bridal Dawn" is more esctatic with lovely voice and violin counterplay.

Sir Joseph Barnby, composer of "Sweet and Low," is the author of the anthem, "King all Glorious" which Trinity Choir records this week.

The three Brox Sisters cavort on "Mammy" stuff and heart throbs abound in "The Sweetest Little Rose in Tennessee" and "Nobody Loves You Like I Do," waltz and fox-trot, respectively and variably.

Wendell Hall and Carsen Robinson disport themselves in two compositions by themselves, waltzes with whistled effects and some close vocal harmonies. "Lonely Lane" has the assistance of a violin and piano, while "Swanee River Dreams" has the further support of a guitar.

Victor Salmon Orchestra plays two charming concert waltzes. "Aloha Sunset Land" is obviously Hawaiian, while its companion, "Chanson Bohemienne" (Sweet Dreams of Thee), is an equally soft and sumptuous record.

International Novelty Orchestra records this week, two taumatic waltzes, feelingly and skilfully. "Dreamer of Dreams" and "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" represent a high degree of artistry, the latter with a vocal refrain introducing a phrase from Bartlett's "Dream."

The Bensons, of Chicago, are safely in the fox-trot column with "Some Other Day, Some Other Girl" and "My Rose Marie," light and graceful with open orchestration.

From the source of "blues" come two Cerulean fox-trots by the Original Memphis Five, with the slow, rolling rhythm of the only and the genuine blues. You have undoubtedly heard "How Come You Do Me Like You Do?" but hear it on this new record. "Meanest Blues" certainly reveals a lot of bottled-up venom.

In Pondoland, in southeast Africa, wives may be bought on the installment plan.

CAREY FIRM TO OPEN FACTORY BRANCH HERE

An agreement whereby the R. O. Campbell Coal company, formerly Georgia distributors for the Philip Carey company, becomes dealer for Fulton and DeKalb counties, and the Philip Carey firm opens a factory branch office in Atlanta, was disclosed Saturday in a circular letter to customers throughout the state.

The local factory branch of the Philip Carey company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, manufacturers of the well-known Carey products of roofing material, asphalt, asbestos and similar materials, is located at 605 Walton building.

The R. O. Campbell company has represented the Philip Carey firm in Georgia for nine years, during which a steady increase in business has marked the relation, it is said. On account of a desire on the part of the Campbell company, however, to serve as dealer only, by mutual agreement between the two firms the new plan has been adopted.

The change in handling Carey products in Georgia became effective November 10, with E. O. Perry, district representative, acting as manager of the factory branch here of the Carey company. Associated with him in the local office will be R. E. Rhamstine and E. S. Sanford. The latter has been connected with the R. O. Campbell company for some time past.

The Carey firm has handled an immense business since it entered trade fields in Georgia, the business increasing each year and expanding into adjoining states, officials of the firm assert.

NEW ORDER OPPOSES RACE, CLASS HATRED

Fort Wayne, Ind., November 15.—(By the Associated Press.)—Plans for a national organization of the "Watchmen of the Republic," to promote understanding, regard for the constitution, laws and courts and to eradicate race, class and religious hatred and prejudice, were made known by John B. Maling, Fort Wayne lecturer and author of the plan.

Edwin P. Morrow, former governor of Kentucky, was announced as general chairman of the board of directors.

Chicago, November 15.—Edwin P. Morrow, of the United States railroad labor board, announced today that the "Watchmen of the Republic" hoped to "remove the group animosities now astir in this country," but "was not an anti-klan organization."

"We want to pour oil on the troubled waters, not make them more roily," said Mr. Morrow, who is chairman of the board of directors of the Watchmen. "We are in no sense organized to oppose the Ku Klux Klan or any other group, but rather to promote harmony among all groups. We will teach the faith of tolerance instead of hatred, friendliness instead of trouble."

LIBRARY LITERARY NOTES

BY CLYDE PETTUS, OF THE CARNEGIE LIBRARY

The High Delight of Reading

Any traveler in a far land who has suddenly come fact to face with a fellow countryman and neighbor can imagine the shout of joy with which the "librarians of America" will hail the book graciously dedicated to them by May Lamberton Becker. For Mrs. Becker is both fellow countrywoman to dwellers in bookland and neighbor, as those who have read her columns in the Literary Review of The New York Evning Post will be confident, to the middle men of learning who would pass on to others the dainties that are bred in a book. She is the rare combination of an enthusiast for literature and a comprehending and sympathetic guide to those whose footsteps in the desired direction are as yet faltering and afar off.

"A Reader's Guide Book" is by no means for the exclusive use of the librarian, helpful for his purposes though it undoubtedly is. It is first of all, as its title shows, for the reader—to point his way through the sometimes confusing bypaths of books and to lend a helping hand in indicating the high places of his particular interest. The chapters are the answers given by Mrs. Becker to those of sufficient intellectual curiosity to send their queries concerning book selection and kindred subjects to the Reader's Guide column of the magazine. But each question is answered so fully and with such a happy combination of accurate information and friendly interest that it may well be for the advantage of future inquirers that the articles now make their reappearance between permanent book covers.

Four Books a Year.

The first section on "Sweeping the Field" is a bait that few book lovers can resist. Few did resist the tempting request for the titles of "Four Books a Year" which Mrs. Becker made in the magazine column, and here retells with fuller details concerning the farmer's wife in Pennsylvania whose budget allowed only this small margin for the satisfaction of literary appetite. This chapter is as full of suggestions as the number of people who wanted at once to share some dear and treasured "find" with a reader certain to understand the enthusiasm that prompted it. Nobody is so eager to share his joy as the bona fide bookworm. If he is sure of your having "drunk ink" until you have reached the proper state of exhilaration, he wants more than anything in the world to be the first to bring to your appreciative palate the taste of a new and pleasing variety; or, it may be, of an old variety towards which he feels a discoverer's proprietary pride. The suggestions of the column readers poured in: Conal O'Riordan's racy bit of old Erin, "Adam of Dublin;" Augustus Hare's leisurely "Memoirs of a Quiet Life;" calm, ruminative books like "The Wedgwood Medallion," "The Wind in the Willows" and the best for the last, James Stephens' "The Crock of Gold." There may have been blanks in the drawing as Mrs. Becker found them, but if so she has left them out, reserving only prize numbers for book lovers to come.

There is a section called "Is There a Novel About—?" and apparently the blank space may be filled in to suit one's pet predilection and the answer still be in the affirmative. For those who prefer fact to fiction there is a comprehensive covering of the ground from the "Bride's Book Shelf" to the Einstein theory. It is easy to understand how Mrs. Becker, by those who do not know her as a lecturer, may have been regarded as a syndicate rather than as an individual.

For Travelers.

There are particularly delightful suggestions for the world tour—and less ambitious or less affluent travelers may appropriate to themselves those that fill their needs. If England be the objective it is interesting to know that Muirhead's useful Blue Guide includes literary geography as well as lists of hotels and railroad mileage; and that of the making of books that follow Dickens about London, the Bronte sisters over the Yorkshire moors and Sheila Kaye-Smith through Sussex by the sea there is no end, but room for a wise exercise of the selective faculty. There are a few choice titles that call at one for a notebook—intriguing, vagabondish titles like "The Green Roads of England" and quiet, contemplative titles like Hudson's "A Shepherd's Life." There is "Father Thames" murmuring through the reeds at Runnymede a story of John, and "Among English Hedgerows" wandering by the thatched cottages and gay flower gardens of the countryside.

Before, during and after a visit to Paris Mrs. Becker recommends Frances Wilson Huard's "American Footprints in Paris," and no one who has read her charmingly written personal narratives of the war will wonder why. "Paris Through an Attic" is the sojourning music and art student's introduction to top floor housekeeping, and "The Lure of Old Paris" is the contribution of a visiting Briton who incorporates in his book the perpetually surprised and enthusiastic state of mind with which he finds himself in the gay city of the Seine.

Knows Human Nature.

Readers suffering from an overdose of amour proper might do well to follow up the list in "What They Think of Us," the reactions of the foreign-born to American conditions. Those who want material on the fascinating subject of deportment will find Mr. Turveydrop's airs and graces properly outmoded by Emily Price Post's "light-handed and light-hearted, and not in the least light-headed" guide to perfect behavior. There are books for the chess player, for the collector of "devils in literature," for the scrupulous soul disturbed by uncertainties in the matter of proper name pronunciation, for the struggler in the mazes of modernism and the harassed producer of amateur plays.

A reason for the appeal of "A Reader's Guide Book" is its author's realization that the book adviser who accomplishes his purpose "giveth himself with his alms" like the reformed Sir Launfal. She knows human nature as well as she knows books; she recommends manuals of philosophy mindful that most inquirers are really in quest of the philosopher's stone, and chooses books of cheer with a concern for the convalescent who becomes restive under the suggestion of "uplift." It is excellent to find a guide who is at home in the varied fields of knowledge, but it is much more gratifying to find the abundant store sympathetically adapted to the common needs of life.

VANDERBILT ALUMNI CELEBRATE VICTORY

Brief addresses, praising the Vanderbilt football team which defeated the Georgia Tech team Saturday afternoon 3 to 0, and discussion of alumni plans for the university featured the banquet tendered the Vanderbilt team by the Atlanta alumni association Saturday night at 6:30 o'clock at the Ansley hotel.

A. G. Adams, president of the Vanderbilt Alumni Association of Atlanta, acted as toastmaster of the occasion.

The principal address of the evening was delivered by Chancellor James H. Kirkland, of Vanderbilt. Other speakers were: L. B. Smeiser, alumni secretary; Justice Price Gilbert, John Hines, Coaches Dan McGuigin and Josh Cody, W. R. Manier, secretary of the Nashville chamber of commerce, and several others.

Clifford Prichard, of the United States marine corps, in an address offered a marine commission to Henry Smith Wakefield, a star member of the Vanderbilt team, who stated he would make a decision at an early date.

Captain Tuck Kelly, of the Vanderbilt team, made a brief address in behalf of his gridiron comrades.

Approximately 200 alumni and members of the Vanderbilt football squad were present.

Roy L. Mitchell, secretary of the Atlanta Vanderbilt Alumni association, who had charge of the banquet, was praised for his work.

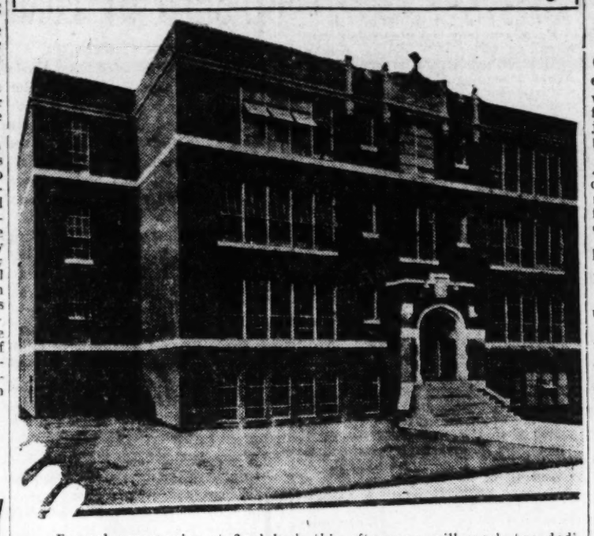

PERRY COURT TO OPEN WITH CIVIL CASES

Perry, Ga., November 15.—(Special.)—The November term of the city court will convene Monday. There are 112 civil cases on the docket, all set for trial for four days.

A large number of criminal cases will be tried beginning Monday, November 24. Jurors have been summoned.

The automatic money-changing machines installed in New York subways will detect counterfeit coins.

Dedication of Parochial School Scheduled Today

Formal ceremonies at 3 o'clock this afternoon will mark the dedication of the new parochial school of Sacred Heart church parish, located at 230 Courtland street. The new structure was completed recently at a cost of $100,000, and is one of the most modern of its kind in the city.

Elaborate ceremonies will mark the formal dedication Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock of the new parochial school, parish school of Sacred Heart church at 230 Courtland street.

The new structure is fireproof and extremely modern throughout, the greatest care having been given, it is said, to material used in its construction. This building is the outgrowth of a school started 13 years ago with 40 pupils and four lower grades—now one of the largest and most impressive in Atlanta's educational system.

Right Reverend Bishop Michael J. Keyes, Father Walsh, pastor of the Church of Immaculate Conception, and a prominent member of the city board of education will make addresses at the dedication exercises. J. J. Spalding will deliver the opening address for laity, and Bishop Keily will be heard in brief remarks. Rev. Father Horton will deliver a 15-minute talk on the work of the school.

At 4:30 o'clock, the clergy, speakers and visitors will assembly in front of the new building for photographs, followed by an inspection of the structure.

At 5 o'clock benediction will be said in the church, nearby.

The building is of three stories, with a basement, contains 12 class rooms and will care for 500 pupils. The cost is approximately $100,000, having been subscribed by the parish of Sacred Heart church. It is coeducational and non-secretarian, and operated by sisters of the church. It is equipped with gymnasium, playrooms and a laboratory, and a special music and art department. It is of English style and design, well lighted and modern in every detail.

The public is invited to attend the ceremonies, according to Joe Haverty, one of the leaders in the school movement in the church, and arrangements are being made to comfortably care for all visitors. An inspection of the building, to be made immediately following the ceremonies dedicating the structure, will give one an insight into the elegance of the new school and its preparedness to care for both high school and grammar school students, Mr. Haverty states.

TALLAPOOSA LEGION ELECTS OFFICIALS

Tallapoosa, Ga., November 15.—(Special.)—Latimer Mosley was elected as post commander, John B. Fitzgerald was chosen post adjutant, J. P. Stephens, vice commander, and Professor G. A. Townsend, finance officer, at a special meeting of the Tallapoosa post of the American Legion Friday night.

The meeting was held in the office of The Tallapoosa Journal, this office being designated as the regular meeting place for the former service men during the winter.

Ralph Head, ballplayer with the Fort Worth team; Professor Townsend and John B. Fitzgerald were initiated as new members.

PLANS ORGANIZATION TO COMBAT PREJUDICE

Fort Wayne, Ind., November 15.—Plans for a national organization of the "Watchmen of the Republic" to promote understanding and regard for the constitution, laws and courts and to eradicate race, class and religious hatred and prejudice, were made known today by John B. Maling, Fort Wayne lecturer and author of the plan.

Edwin P. Morrow, former governor of Kentucky, was announced as general chairman of the board of directors. The organization, incorporated under the laws of Illinois and having temporary headquarters in Chicago, plans subordinate lodges, called "watch towers," in every city and town in Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Ohio before extending nationally.

Chicago, November 15.—Edwin P. Morrow, of the railroad labor board, announced today that the "Watchmen of the Republic" hoped to "remove the group animosities now astir in this country" but was not an anti-klan organization.

"We want to pour oil on the troubled waters" said Mr. Morrow, who is chairman of the board of directors of the Watchmen. "We are in no sense organized to oppose the Ku Klux Klan or any other group, but rather to promote harmony. We will teach the faith of tolerance instead of hatred, friendliness instead of trouble.

"We seek the full application of the constitution in its protection of the rights of every citizen."

MRS. EVA DORMAN DIES AT AMERICUS

Americus, Ga., November 15.—(Special.)—Mrs. Eva Mae Dorman, 27, wife of G. G. Dorman, of Americus, died at her home here this afternoon, following an attack of pneumonia.

Mrs. Dorman, who was an active member of Americus First Baptist church, is survived by her husband; three young daughters; a son; her mother, Mrs. J. A. Davis, of Newton, Ala.; a sister, Mrs. E. N. Eiland, of Montgomery, Ala., and a brother, F. A. Davis, of Laurel, Miss.

Funeral services will be held from the residence Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Dr. Carl W. Minor, pastor of the First Baptist church, will officiate. Interment will be at Oak Grove cemetery.

Chrysanthemum Show Closes at Americus

Americus, Ga., November 15.—(Special.)—The annual chrysanthemum show just concluded here was the best and most successful in the history of the Americus Chrysanthemum club, members of that organization stated last night.

The prize winners, announced at the conclusion of the show, are as follows:

Rev. Dowdy Closes Year.

Uvalda, Ga., November 15.—(Special.)—Rev. E. C. Dowdy has closed one of the best conference years of the Uvalda Methodist church, according to reports. All claims have been paid in full, with an increase in the pastor's salary. Thirty-five have been added to the church membership.

SENSATIONAL TRIALS ON SAVANNAH DOCKET

Savannah, Ga., November 15.—(Special.)—Unusual developments are expected in federal court here Monday when the criminal docket is taken up, following a week's grind by the grand jury. Judge William H. Barrett will preside.

The indictment of Clark Grier, of Atlanta and Augusta, on one charge of accepting a $5,000 bribe from rum-running interests here opened the way for the sensations. There are nine charges of fraud against Grier also.

The indictment of a local minister, Rev. R. H. Folmer, pastor of the Fourth Baptist church, has occasioned much interest.

Information concerning the "higher up" in the recently nipped syndicate ring's operation of shipping carloads of whisky disguised as lumber from Brunswick to Atlanta and midwestern points is also creating uneasiness in some circles. Officers left Savannah today for Brunswick with a warrant for E. M. Pearson, Brunswick lumberman, whose bond on his return here it is said, will be fixed at $10,000. Other arrests are expected.

HEN BEATS 'POSSUM

Deputy Sheriff Rescues Vanquished Animal From Hen.

Savannah, Ga., November 15.—(Special.)—H. M. Morgan, deputy sheriff, was summoned on an unusual peace errand, when a commotion in his henhouse aroused him and neighbors. He reached the henhouse just as a neighbor arrived.

A big 'possum which had invaded the henhouse was in battle—and all but vanquished by a pugnacious Rhode Island Red hen.

The hen and the 'possum were locked in deadly struggle and it required several shots from the deputy's flashlight to quiet them so that they could be pulled apart. W. S. Mason, a neighbor, was bitten by the 'possum.

SUMTER FARMERS TO SEE AIRPLANES ATTACK WEEVIL

Americus, Ga., November 15.—(Special.)—A demonstration of airplane dusting as a means of boll weevil control, has been arranged for Friday by George O. Marshall, Sumter county farm demonstration agent. The demonstration will be made by representatives of the DeLand-Huff company, working in conjunction with representatives of the Staet College of Agriculture. Plans are being made to have many farmers present.

Discussing the demonstration today, Mr. Marshall expressed the opinion that Sumter farmers may easily solve the labor problem during next year through the adoption of airplane dusting as a weevil control measure. One airplane, he states, is capable of dusting efficiently a minimum of 100 acres an hour, or approximately 1,000 acres each day.

THIS CLUB SEDAN PRICE A SURPRISE TO THOUSANDS

The chief comment heard regarding this Club Sedan is that a Hupmobile closed car at such a price was never thought possible.

Hupmobile—finely built, reliable, long-lived, brilliant in performance, low in upkeep costs—is a car which thousands have desired to own.

This Club Sedan enables these thousands to enjoy closed car comfort plus Hupmobile's superior mechanism, at little more than open car cost.

This Club Sedan affords plenty of leg room. It has doors front and rear, regular sedan width.

It is finished in Duco blue or beige, with nickel radiator and cowl lamps. There is an unusually large trunk in rear. Balloon tires and natural wood or disc wheels are optional at nominal extra cost.

Phone for a demonstrator to call at your home or office. No obligation.

67 STAR OWNERS AVERAGED 11,273 MILES ON A SET OF TIRES

THE small gasoline consumption of the Star Car and its freedom from expensive repair bills are supplemented by unusually low tire replacement costs. Sixty-seven Star owners drove 755,300 miles on 67 sets of tires, an average of 11,273 miles per set of tires.

One owner replaced his first tire after driving 21,000 miles, and after driving 31,000 miles, is still using the two original front tires. Many others drove upwards of 15,000 miles before replacing tires.

At Atlanta's Windows

MOTHERS AND BABIES LOOKING IN.

"Rightly, we condemn the man, who abandons his baby.

"Would not Atlanta deserve the same condemnation, if we should let one little child, whether it be an abandoned baby, or a motherless boy or girl, suffer for the lack of food, clothes, shelter, or a doctor's care?"

As Marvin Underwod asked this question in his appeal before the Christian council for the Community Chest, there came before us the twelve thousand and odd babies and children, who this past year have been fed, clothed, sheltered, or helped, or given the care of a doctor or nurse, by the charitable organizations, supported by our Community Chest.

Jesus said of the children:

"In heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven."

Babies Looking In.

But what do the children, themselves, see in Atlanta?

If this evening one little pinched face, with eyes hungry not only for food, but also for a mother's love and care, were pressed against the window-pane of our comfortable dining room; and we saw it there, no matter how many blessings we might ask over our food, it would choke us, if we tried to swallow it while leaving the little chap to starve outside.

These twelve thousand and more little people dependent for life or health upon the love in Atlanta's heart, cannot press against one single window in any individaul home.

Such a sight would crush a heart of stone.

But, if our eyes are not blurred and blinded by the hardness of our hearts, this week, we cannot fail to see this great host of babies, small boys and tiny mites of girls, crowded not against one window, but against the windows of every home in Atlanta.

What They See.

If the babies could look in, what would they see this evening?

In one home, a mother with smiling face and shining eyes, is flying between the kitchen and the suppertable, where Bill, Jr., Tommy, little Mary, and Bill, Sr., are hungrily, happily, and clamorously, waiting the results of mother's skill with pot and pan.

A small dog—little Mary's own pup—racing around the room, and stopping by every chair to bark his request for his share, adds to the noise, which dies away in a sigh of contentment as mother brings in a dish of ham and eggs, and a platter of biscuit, such as no one else on earth can make.

Pup will get his later. Now he must be content to thump the floor with a stump of tail, or out he will go.

Not much of the world's goods in this home, but a wealth of love, and if any in the group should look up and see hungry, motherless little faces pressed against the window, that love and all that is in this home would be quickly shared with the babies without.

The Birthday Cake.

In another home the hungry eyes might see a beautifully-appointed room.

Flowers glow, and glass, silver and china sparkle beneath the cluster of lights above the table around which mother, father and the children are gathered, while about them in the subdued light just outside the glowing circle, noiselessly moves the butler serving the last of a six-course dinner.

He is carefully carrying a wonderful thing.

A great cake covered with a diminutive forest of lights—40 tiny candles. A joyous shout of laughter goes up as the butler puts the shining wonder near the center, and all lean forward to blow out the candles.

Will the tots against the window—those from the Home for the Friendless and the Florence Crittenden home—understand?

This is mother's 40th birthday, and the whole family has hurried home from golf course, country club and motor trip to be with her at dinner on this day.

The Fortieth Year.

Birthdays are sacred days in this home—days when the family are a bit inclined to draw into themselves to show their love for the one whose birthday it is, and this day, above all others, when mother is crossing into the forties, no power could have kept father, son or daughter away.

Fourteen-year-old Jane, Jr., doesn't say so, but thinks it a wonderfully old age. But father declares that Jane, Sr., has only begun to live. She is smiling, but there's just a suspicion of moisture in her blue-grey eyes, not because of the increasing years, but at the thought of how quickly and completely the babies have grown beyond the age at which she could cuddle them in her arms.

It is merciful that these tots from the Florence Crittenden home cannot know of this. If they should see and understand, and then remember their pitiful, cruelly-wronged mothers, they could not bear it.

But while such a family, on such an evening and occasion, might not altogether welcome the coming in of a casual acquaintance, or even of a friend, we know that if any one of them looked up from the happy table to see these babies at the window—little children hungry not alone for food, but for the love of mothers and fathers—the family so blessed of God would gladly share with those who have not.

The Pleasure-Seekers.

In another home, those outside looking in might see Harry come hustling in, and calling to the butler:

"Show a little speed with my dinner, Dick. Got a date, and am late now."

In flashes Emily, radiant as a picture—just sweet sixteen—to kiss the tip of father's ear, take a flying peck at mother's forehead, and then go fluttering away with grinning George to a dinner-dance at the club, while mother and father go speeding in another direction for entertainment, leaving the big house empty but for the servants.

No need for hungry eyes to look in here tonight.

But we seem to see the great crowd of wistful-eyed little people packed around the gleaming windows of the club, where to the strains of wonderful music, "Sweet Sixteen" and scores of others, just as dainty and charming, are dancing over the polished floors.

Unable to Dance.

And we turn from the club to a place from which we cannot even imagine one coming to look in on a dance—that strangely-named place, the Home for Incurables.

Here, too, is another just "sweet sixteen," but she will never dance, nor watch a dance. Her abiding place until the end must be a bed of pain, which our love may soften a little bit.

From a nearby bed a woman's voice is calling softly to a visiting pastor:

"Doctor, don't you remember me? About a year ago you married me."

Just a few short months before she had stood before him a happy little bride. Now she has come to this.

"Dream children" may be hers, but never more than these. She cannot get well.

If We See.

If these joyous dancers at the club, and the thousands of other care-free people at other places of entertainment in Atlanta tonight would only look into this place of suffering, and into these hungry little faces crowding against our windows, our Community Chest would be filled to overflowing.

For these dancing people, and other pleasure-seekers have love and pity in their hearts, as well as the desire for the joy of living.

If they, and all of us, who have known the blessing of love in our homes, will only use our eyes and ears, we shall see and hear the call, which God, the Father of us all, is sending us through these wistful little faces pressing in upon us tonight.

And all of us will pay our debt of love.

We have not paid it yet, if we have not given to the Community Chest.

Observe Education Week.

Rome, Ga., November 15.—(Special)—In observance of American Education week, annual Visitors' day will be held in the city schools next week.

Wednesday will be Visitor's day at Central Primary and at schools in the different wards. Thursday will be Visitors' day at Neely school and Rome High school.

Programs consisting of readings, songs, play, debates and other features will be given. Another feature of Education week will be a conference of officers of the five city Parent-Teacher associations Thursday. An educational program under the auspices of the business methods committee will be given by the Rotary club.

At the request of the National Education association, O. C. Lam, a local theater man has secured "America" for Education week.

Many Projects Progress.

Rome, Ga., November 15.—(Special)—Progress of several chamber of commerce projects was indicated in reports made at a meeting of the board of directors of that body this week. In these was that more than two-thirds of the stock to be sold for reestablishment of the State Mutual Life Insurance company had been subscribed, and that the Kingston road from Cass station to the Floyd county line is being improved by the state highway department. Plans for the community chest drive were completed and much enthusiasm is being shown in preparation for the campaign.

Directors elected J. L. Brannon, W. M. Towers and D. W. Simmons as a board of trustees to have custody of the chest throughout the year.

Bank Hard to Get Into.

Owing to a series of bank robberies in Illinois, the officers of a bank at Milstadt decided to keep the bank's doors closed at all times even to customers and clients. It is necessary to knock and present credentials before being admitted by the guard. The patron must identify himself to the satisfaction of the cashier before passing the guards.

Electric Razor Perfected.

An electric safety razor which makes 60 strokes a minute and will produce a satisfactory shave in 31 seconds, has been perfected by manufacturers of electric devices. The electric safety razor is "painless" and is so simple in mechanism, it is said, that a child can operate it. Electric clippers have been perfected some time.

South Africa Has Real Union

In South Africa there is a real union of states. The union was formed in 1910 and it now comprises the provinces of Cape of Good Hope, Natal with Zualand, the Orange Free State and the Transvaal. The British now possess the former German African territory. Forty per cent of the people in the union live above an altitude of 4,000 feet.

Town Gets Off Its Time.

Glenville, the county seat in Gilmer county, West Virginit, got entirely off its time schedule recently when the janitor of the town hall forgot to get some one to watch the clock when he went on his vacation. Residents depend upon the striking of the clock for their time and no one else in town understood the intricacies of the old clock.

BUDGET FOR 1926 SLASHED BY LORD

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.

Washington, November 15.—Uncle Sam has cut down the estimates for his household expenses for next year by millions of dollars, through the pruning knife of Director Lord of the budget, backed by President Coolidge. Now those who preach economy are looking forward to see how strictly congress will abide by the estimates.

General Lord, who is as hardboiled as when he took over the job of paring down expenses from General Dawes, figures that the government can run on $1,800,000,000 next year, outside of the public debt and the postal service. This figure was set by President Coolidge, and General Lord, like a good soldier, intends that it be carried out as far as his influence is concerned. Congress, under his rigid demands, has improved in the last two years.

Saves $865,000,000 Since '21.

"I am sure the departments and establishments in Washington understand that so far as the director of the budget is concerned the instructions of the chief executive will be reflected in actual performance," is Lord's dictum.

The general figures that a cool billion will have been lopped off of departmental estimates for the years 1923, 1924, 1925 and 1926, as a result of economies established under his direction. This is quite a saving. In the period from 1921, when the budget was installed, through 1924, a total of over $865,000,000 was knocked off of departmental estimates.

In 1924, the last budget year, the government spent more than $2,000,000,000 less than it did in 1921, the year the budget system was installed.

Here's What It Means.

Lord translates this saving into the following equivalents:

Half of the gold coin and bullion in the country at the present time.

The entire savings of 12,500,000 depositors in the nation's savings banks for a period of 20 months.

The value of all the passenger automobiles produced throughout the United States in 1922, plus the value of all the motor trucks, plus the value of all the motorcycles.

It is more than twice the value of the cotton crop of 1922 and nearly two and one-half times the value of the country's wheat crop in 1922.

It exceeds the amount paid in dividends by all the railroads in the United States for five years.

Fund Hunters Organized.

"There are hundreds of active, live organizations in this country created and operated for the purpose of getting money out of the federal treasury," Lord says. "There is but one organization, the bureau of the budget, created and operated for the purpose of protecting the treasury. Every measure that proposes a federal appropriation commands powerful support. The director of the budget has to contend with organized and able opposition. He is almost overwhelmed at times with telegrams and letters from the people whose pocketbook he is trying to protect—letters and telegrams demanding favorable consideration for measures that he with his complete view of the entire field knows should not be approved."

Lord has a hard task also, he says, in refusing funds for really worthy projects in which bureau chiefs are interested heart and soul, in the desire to build up their services. Turning down these conscientious officials is about the hardest thing he has to do.

Girl students in the University of Indiana are not allowed to have automobiles while they are in the institution.

GEORGIAN IS KILLED WHEN TANK EXPLODES

West Point, Ga., November 15.—(Special.)—John Howard, 40, was killed instantly here Saturday morning by the explosion of an oil tank in the yards of the Gulf Refining company. He was filling the tank when suddenly the oil became ignited and the force of the explosion hurled his body several yards from the demolished truck. There were no witnesses to the accident.

Courageous work by the fire department averted the fear felt for a time that the flames of the explosion which ignited several nearby small buildings would reach the company's large drums.

MORTUARY

ABRAHAM FAGELSON.

Abraham Fagelson, 56, of 152 Fair street, died at a private sanitarium Friday. Funeral arrangements will be announced later. PASTOR IS FREED OF BIGAMY CHARGE

Moultrie, La., November 15.—(Special.)—After brief deliberation by a jury in Cook county superior court, Rev. R. B. Chitty, Colquitt county preacher, who was tried on a charge of bigamy, a verdict exonerating the defendant was returned, and Chitty is now free.

Chitty was originally arrested under a warrant sworn out against him in this county, being held several days as he was unable to make bond. At the meeting of the grand jury, developments arose that the alleged acts charged in the warrants were committed in Cook county, and the jury ordered his release. T. J. Meadors, a Tift county farmer, father of Chitty's third wife, Mrs. Sarah J. Roberts, upon wearning of his release, secured a new warrant and the minister was rearrested.

In Chitty's statement to the court he asserted that he had been informed by a relative that his second wife had died as the result of an attack of influenza, and that he had no reason to doubt the truthfulness of the information. He asserted that he had planned a suit for divorce against his second wife on the grounds that she had been guilty of misconduct.

Mrs. Chitty declared that she regretted the court action against her husband.

"He has been good to me and good to my little children," she declared. Chitty blamed his matrimonial troubles on his father-in-law and stated that Meadors in having him arrested was prompted by malice rather than any desire to see the law enforced.

Until the time of the trial the preacher refused to believe that his second wife was still living. While in prison he asserted that "if it is shown that my second wife is still alive, when I am released I am going to bring suit for divorce against her on statutory grounds, and after I get my divorce, I am going to try to win back my real wife, whose relatives are seeking to poison her mind against me."

The divorce suit is expected to be filed by Chitty in this county and will in all probability appear on the docket of the January term.

WORLD COURT ISSUE NOT EXPECTED SOON

Washington, November 15.—Senator Swanson, of Virginia, ranking democrat on the foreign relations committee, said today he did not expect any action at the short session of congress on the world court proposals. No action can be obtained in the next congress, he added, unless President Coolidge and Secretary Hughes "push the matter more vigorously and determinedly than they have in the past."

It is impossible, the Virginia senator said, to pass either the Pepper world court resolution or the one favored by Presidents Harding and Coolidge and Secretary Hughes by a two-thirds majority, because of opposition of "a large majority of republican senators," unless some have changed their views as a result of the elections.

SPANISH WAR VETS HOLD MEETING TODAY

Spanish -American war veterans and relatives of veterans are asked to attend a called meeting at the city Auditorium this afternoon at 2 o'clock, according to John Chalman, commander of Fitzhugh Lee camp, S. W. V. Matters of interest to veterans and relatives of veterans will be discussed at the meeting, Commander Chalman said.

There are many veterans and their relatives who are entitled to pensions but who are ignorant of the fact, he stated, and it is the purpose of the meeting to explain this feature.

Methodists of South Georgia To Begin Convention at Bainbridge Wednesday

BY REV. W. A. BROOKS.

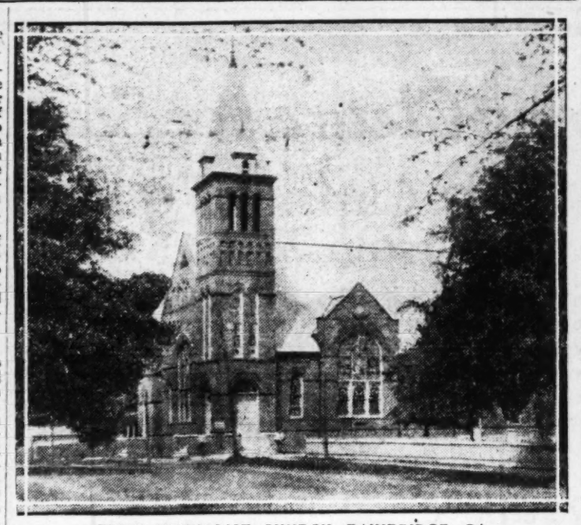

Bainbridge, Ga., November 15.—The 58th session of the South Georgia conference to be held at the First Methodist church here next week, will be the third session of that body over which Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, of Macon, has presided; the other two being in Waycross, in 1922, and in Savannah in 1923. Bishop Ainsworth will formally organize the conference at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning, November 19, and the body will adjourn the following Monday. Rev J. M. Foster is preacher-host.

There is always a vast amount of preliminary work which must be dispatched prior to the formal calling to order of a Methodist annual conference, and for this purpose several conference committees will hold important sessions Tuesday.

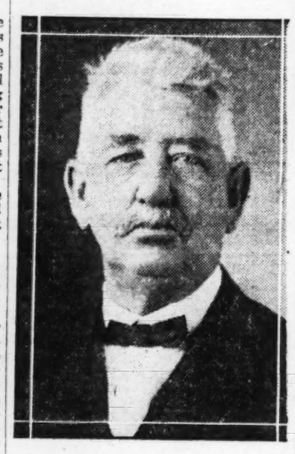

Designate Meeting Places.

Meeting places of various boards and committees have been designated by Rev. Foster, and the committee on arrangements as follows:

Board of missions, Methodist church (auditorium); committee on evangelism, Methodist church (classroom); church extension board, Presbyterian church (Sunday school auditorium); board of finance, Methodist church (classroom); Sunday school board, Baptist church; board of education, Baptist church; Epworth league board, Baptist church; board of temperance and social reform, Baptist church; committee on conference relations, Methodist church (Sunday school classroom); Bible board, Methodist church (Sunday school classroom; commission of finance, Methodist church (Sunday school classroom); board of Christian literature, Baptist church; committee on admission, Methodist church (Sunday school classroom); examining committee, first year, Presbyterian church; second year, Presbyterian church; third year, Presbyterian church, and fourth year, Baptist church; hospital board, Baptist church; trustees of orphans' home board, Presbyterian church (auditorium).

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH, BAINBRIDGE, GA.

REV. J. M. FOSTER.

Chappell to Preach.

Rev. Clovis G. Chappell, D. D., pastor of First church, Memphis, will preach a series of evangelistic sermons during the conference session.

The Conference Orphans' home at Vineville, Macon, has been directed by Rev. J. A. Smith, financial agent.

Educational institutions, Emory university, Atlanta; Wesleyan college, Macon; Andrew college, Cuthbert; South Georgia college, McRae, and Sparks institute, Sparks, have enjoyed a year of gratifying prosperity, according to preconference reports.

Rev. W. F. Quillian, D. D., president of Wesleyan college, has recently issued the following statement concerning that historic institution:

"The Wesleyan campaign has been carried forward during the past several months, but the goal has not yet been reached. We have secured in good pledges approximately $500,000 of the $1,000,000 needed. No other woman's college in the south has undertaken to raise this amount of money in a single campaign. Our plan was to do this work largely through the alumnae of the college.

We find now that in order to complete the effort, it is necessary to call upon outsiders.

Promise Good Reports.

Rev. N. H. Williams, presiding elder of the Waycross district, who was appointed in July to succeed the late Rev. John C. Flanders, has affairs of his district well in hand. Among the churches of the district where revivals have been held during the year are the following:

Alma, Allenhurst, McKendree, Brunswick, Homerville and Jesup.

Methodism in Savannah, Macon and Columbus has had the careful supervision of Rev. Bascom Anthony, D. D., Rev. W. F. Smith and Rev. Whitley Langston respectively; and the pastors from these cities will be prepared to give good reports along with pastors and presiding elders from the other districts of the conference.

The following are items of special interest from the Columbus district: St. Luke's has completed a $55,000 Sunday school annex and now has a plant for an "A" grade Sunday school; St. Paul church has made a number of material improvements. Among other things, a $10,000 organ has been installed; Beuna Vista has built and paid for a new modern church; Junction City has built a beautiful plant; Rose Hill has just concluded an unusual revival; Talbotton has reworked and beautified the church.

Wardlaw Is Oldest.

A study of the yearbook of the conference as to membership of conference classes and the longevity of service of ministers, reveals that Rev. J. P. Wardlaw, of Brinson, is completing his 54th year of service as pastor and presiding elder. He is the only surviving member of the class of 1870. So far as this writer is apprised, only three other members of the south Georgia conference have ever rendered a longer period of effective service, than has Rev. Mr. Wardlaw, Rev. J. P. McFerrier, D. D., of Waynesboro, sewed 56 years and Rev. T. H. McGehee, 58th.

Only eight of the effective members of the conference have rendered longer periods of service than Bishop Ainsworth, who is closing his fortieth year. These are Rev. W. C. Lovett, D. D., of the Americus district, and Rev. T. I. Nease, of Springfield, 50 years; Rev. G. W. Matthews, D. D., of Marshallville, 46 years; Rev. J. B. Johnstone, of Waynesboro, 44 years; Rev. Bascom Anthony, D. D., of the Savannah district, 43 years; Rev. E. A. Sanders, of Habira, 42 years; Rev. W. D. McGregor, of Damascus, and Rev. E. L. Padrick, of Brewton, 41 years.

Dr. Luther E. Todd, secretary of the general board of finance, with headquarters in St. Louis, reports that the $1,000,000 mark has been reached in raising a fund of $10,000,000 for the superannuate endowment fund, and that this will produce an income of $60,000 annually. There are approximately 1,000 pastors and 1,500 widows, who are claimants on the $60,000 annually, the result is an average of about $24 per annum, or $2 per month for each claimant, the fund being distributed on the basis of the number of years of service rendered. From the above it can be readily seen that the "Call of the Forgotten Man is really emergent.

Macon to Bid for Meet.

Mulberry Street church, Macon, will extend an invitation to the 1925 session of the South Georgia conference. The last session of the body held there was in 1913.

Laymen and women are becoming more and more potent factors in annual conference sessions, and a large number will attend the Bainbridge meeting.

NEW DIXIE FLYER TO MIAMI MAKES FIRST RUN TODAY

A new Dixie Flyer, a de luxe, all-Pullman train from Chicago and St. Louis to Miami by way of Evansville, Nashville, Chattanooga and Atlanta, will make its initial run today, arriving in Atlanta at the Union station at 6:29 o'clock tonight and leaving at 6:50 o'clock. The Dixie Flyer is the pioneer train between the middle west and Atlanta and points in Florida.

The train has been operated between Chicago, St. Louis and Jacksonville for several years and is being extended to serve Miami on account of the heavy increase in tourist travel there, the announcement said. It has already become one of the most popular means of transportation between the middle west and Florida, and inauguration of the more extensive service is expected to increase greatly the patronage.

The train will carry baggage, club, dining, observation library cars in addition to the regular Pullman cars.

EDWIN MONTAGU DEAD; IN BRITISH CABINET

London, November 15.—Edwin H. Montagu, 45 years old, former secretary of state for India, died here today. He held the secretaryship for India in the Lloyd George cabinet from 917 to 922.

Edwin E. Samuel Montagu, liberal statesman, was identified during the greater part of his comparatively brief political career with the affairs of Britain's Indian realm. After brief service in the pre-war period as parliamentary secretary to Mr. Asquith, then chancellor of the exchequer, and later to Mr. Asquith as premier, he was appointed early in 910 as undersecretary for Indian, retaining that post until 1914. In that year he became financial secretary to the treasury and in the early years of the war gave valuable assistance in bringing about financial adjustments necessitated by the outbreak of that conflict.

In 1916, Mr. Montagu was made head of the munitions office and given a seat on the war committee of the cabinet, but retired from office when the Asquith ministry fell. He returned to the India office as secretary of state the next year, however, in the coalition ministry, and made a notable record in his dealings with Indian affairs, the secretary's investigations and activities finally resulting in the passage of the government of India bill in 1919 embodying the constitutional reform provisions recommended in previous reports due to his initiative.

Mr. Montagu married in 1915 Beatrice Beneti, youngest daughter of the fourth Baron Sheffield.

49 STUDENTS PLEDGED NOT TO FIGHT IN WAR

Columbia, Mo., November 15.—Forty-nine students of the University of Missouri subscribed to a statement declaring they would not take part in the fighting of any future war, it was revealed when a tabulation of responses to a questionnaire circulated on Armistice day was made public today by the Students' Religious union.

Twenty-three of the students were men and 26 women. They were not required to sign their names, it was announced.

The statement read: "I am unalterably opposed to war and will never take part in the fighting of any future conflict."

One hundred and forty-three students answered "no" to the proposition and 59 were non-committal, it was announced.

The questionnaire was distributed at student religious meetings and reached only a small portion of the entire student body.

"Cyclone Mack," Famous Evangelist, Tells Why He Takes Nuxated Iron

TO INCREASE STRENGTH, ENERGY AND POWER BY BUILDING RICH, RED BLOOD

Says Nuxated Iron Enables Him To Do More Work Today Than Ever Before, Without Being All Worn Out, And Recommends It To Any Person Who Feels The Need of Tonic Blood and Nerve Builder.

Prominent Doctor Says Nuxated Iron Is The Most Valuable Tonic, Strength and Blood Builder Available to Physicians.

TO anyone who has seen the Rev. B. F. McLendon, "Cyclone Mack," in action, the man is not only one of the greatest of our modern envangelists—but he is also a veritable cyclone of almost superhuman power, force and energy.

The pastor of one of the largest churches in America says of him, "To give a description of McLendon is like trying to describe forked lightning. It can be seen, but never the same thing twice, and always producing results. It is like describing Niagara Falls.... He is a keg of dynamite."

Yet few realize how exhausting such work as his really is. It means giving one's all, soul and body—throwing every last iota of one's force and power, both physical and mental, into the scale. It would quickly knock out a champion athlete. Indeed, without special care it would even floor a "Cyclone Mack." The story of how he preserves his wonderful health and energy undiminished, and rises to greater and greater heights of success with every new effort, may be of as much help to the physical bodies of thousands of run-down, weak, nervous men and women as his marvelous sermons are to their spiritual beings. Here are his own words:—

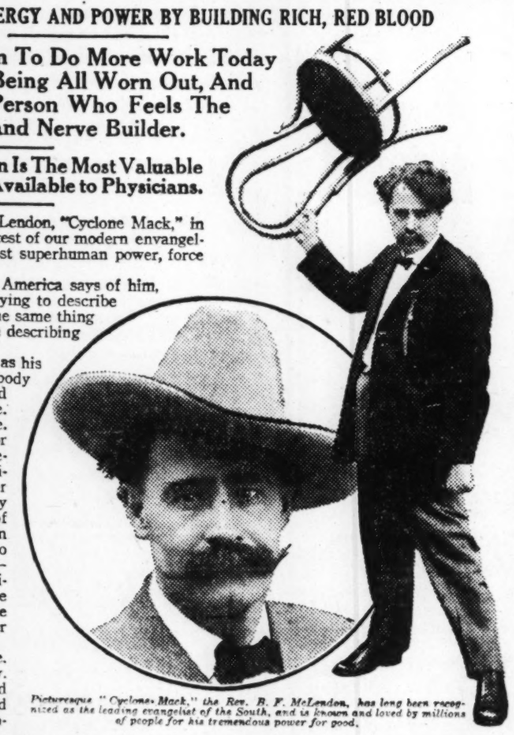

"Anyone who thinks that the work of a revivalist is easy has never had any experience preaching to eleven or twelve thousand people in a sweltering tent through long, hot summer days.

"When a man devotes his life to a great cause, he must give himself completely, mind and body. The strain is terrific—at times every nerve and fibre of your body seems totally exhausted and only the great work keeps you going. The problem of restoring physical power to the worn, tired-out body is so vital that for years I have employed a special person to keep me in condition.

"Only recently a friend of mine, who has been associated with religious work for over thirty years, told me about Nuxated Iron. He explained how the iron in your blood and the vital forces in your nerves are used up and must be replaced, telling me that Nuxated Iron contains iron in the form like the iron in your blood, and the principal ingredients of active, living nerve cells. He said that whenever any member of his family felt tired, worn-out or run-down, they had always used Nuxated Iron with excellent results.

"Ever since then I have used it regularly. It seems to give me new power, strength, energy and endurance. I believe I can do more work today without being all worn out than ever before, and I do not hesitate to recommend Nuxated Iron to any person who feels the need of tonic, blood and nerve builder."

B F McLendon

Picturesque "Cyclone" Mack," the Rev. B. F. McLendon, has long been recognized as the leading evangelist of the South, and is known and loved by millions of people for his tremendous power for good.

Any physician will tell you that iron is absolutely essential to life itself. Without sufficient iron the blood loses its power to change food into living tissue. Therefore, nothing you eat does you the proper amount of good—you don't get strength out of it. As a result of this blood deficiency people become weakened, nervous and all run-down, and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at night, others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless, but all lack physical power and endurance. As one physician puts it, "Thousands of men and women are impairing their constitutions, laying themselves open to illness and literally losing their grip on health, simply because their blood lacks iron. To help make strong, sturdy men and healthy, beautiful women, there is nothing better than organic iron—Nuxated Iron."

Another prominent surgeon and former medical professor says, "I have never had recourse to so valuable a remedy for building up the health and strength of debilitated and convalescent patients as Nuxated Iron. By enriching the blood. Nuxated Iron strengthens the nerves, rebuilds the weakened tissues and helps to instil renewed energy and endurance into the whole system, whether the patient be young or old. In my opinion Nuxated Iron is the most valuable tonic, strength and blood builder available to physicians."

If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test:—First see how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take Nuxated Iron tablets for just two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. If even in that short time you do not notice a wonderful improvement, take the bottle back and the druggist will promptly refund your money.

NOTE: Nuxated Iron which is so highly recommended above is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to the druggists everywhere. Unlike the older iron tinctures and pills made from mineral iron, it contains a wonderful new combination of organic iron like the iron in your own blood and like that in spinach and lentils. So it is easily assimilated and does not injure the teeth and make them black, or upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser, or money refunded. But be sure you get genuine Nuxated Iron with the letters NI on every tablet, and not substitutes. Nuxated Iron is the only kind sold under the above money-back guarantee. At all druggists.

A Remarkable Man

The Rev. Baxter F. McLendon ("Cyclone Mack"), evangelist extraordinary, is just coming into the prime of a world-wide evangelistic career. Although a great deal of his work has been in the South, his birthplace, he has also preached often in the North and West, and everywhere thousands and tens of thousands flock to hear him. Not only this, but he is responded to by young and old, men and women alike. Thousands of men of red blood and backbone have mustered into service in his campaign.

One of the greatest newspapers in the country has this to say of him:—"Saying things like Sam Jones, and like Sam Jones getting away with it, swinging into a Hallelujah kick like Billy Sunday, but more impressive than Billy—swaying his audience to a fever heat at times like Dr. Frank Norris of Fort Worth, and then smoothing them with the gentleness of a Gypsy Smith—that is the composite picture of "Cyclone Mack" (Rev. B. F. McLendon)."

When a man like this voluntarily gives his strong endorsement of Nuxated Iron, as printed above, it must convince every intelligent reader that this remarkable preparation is everything that is claimed for it. No doubt Mr. McLendon felt that in recommending Nuxated Iron to thousands of others who feel the need of the best tonic, blood and nerve builder they can get, he could be of as great service on their physical side as he is through his wonderful preaching on their spiritual side. Naturally, too, he could never afford to lend his name to Nuxated Iron unless he were certain (as he is from personal experience) of its marvelous value in increasing and maintaining abounding health, strength and energy.

GOVERNORS MEET IN JACKSONVILLE

Jacksonville, Fla., November 15.—Measures to prevent grade crossing accidents, and to safeguard state highways, are among discussions on the tentative program of the 16th annual governors' conference which will convene here Monday for a two-day session.

More than half of the governors have definitely advised Secretary Miles C. Riley that they will be here for the conference, and several others sent favorable replies to the call for the meeting, the secretary states.

The visiting executives will be welcomed to Florida by Governor Carey A. Hardee, who will speak immediately after the conference is called to order at 10 o'clock Monday morning, and Governor Preus, of Minnesota, will make the response.

Four sessions of round-table discussions then will begin on a program that calls for:

Monday, morning session: "Conservation of Natural Resources," discussion led by Governor Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, and Governor Pat M. Neff, of Texas.

Afternoon session: "Taxation," discussion led by Governor William D. Denney, of Delaware; Governor Clifford M. Walker, of Georgia, and Governor Joseph M. Dixon, of Montana.

An executive session for election of officers, hearing the treasurer's report and discussion of future plans, will follow discussion of taxation problems.

On Tuesday, November 18, Governor Emmett F. Branch will lead the round-table discussion of measures to prevent grade crossing automobile accidents, and Governor Channing H. Cox, of Massachusetts, will lead in the talks on safeguarding the highways.

At the close of the business sessions on Tuesday, the governors will leave Jacksonville for a tour of several days that will take them to Sanford, Orlando, Tampa, St. Petersburg, West Palm Beach, Miami and intermediate points.

The trip will be made from Jacksonville to Sanford by boat, thence to Orlando by automobile and from Orlando to Tampa by special train. Nights will be spent on the boat at Tampa, St. Petersburg and Sebring with elaborate plans for entertainments at these places and en route. The trip will carry the executives through the heart of the Florida citrus-growing belt and across the Everglades, where they will see the progress of drainage work in that section.

The party will disband at Miami on November 22, and a number of the governors probably will form a party that will visit Cuba, according to advance information here.

Governors who have notified Secretary Riley of their intention of attending the conference are: W. W. Brandon, Alabama; William E. Sweet, Colorado; Charles A. Templeton, Connecticut; William D. Denney, Delaware; Cary A. Hardee, Florida; Clifford M. Walker, Georgia; Henry L. Fuqua, Louisiana; Percival P. Baxter, Maine; Channing H. Cox, Massachusetts; A. O. Preus, Minnesota; Henry L. Whitfield, Mississippi; Arthur M. Hyde, Missouri; Joseph M. Dixon, Montana; James F. Hinkle, New Mexico; R. A. Nestos, North Dakota; Gifford Pinchot, Pennsylvania; Thomas G. McLeod, South Carolina; Austin Peay, Tennessee; Pat M. Neff, Texas; Charles R. Mabey, Utah; Redfield Proctor, Vermont; E. Lee Trinkle, Virginia; Ephram Morgan, West Virginia; W. R. Farrington, Hawaii.

Scott C. Bone, governor of Alaska, and Governor-elect Ralph O. Brewster, of Maine, also have advised that they will attend, and Secretary Riley says favorable responses have been received from the governors of Idaho, Illinois, Iowa, New York, Ohio, Rhode Island and South Dakota.

NAVY PUSHING PLANS TO DESTROY WARSHIP

Washington, November 15.—The navy is proceeding with its plans for utilizing the uncompleted battleship Washington for target practice despite the continued effort of William B. Shearer, of New York, through the courts, to prevent Secretary Wilbur from disposing of the vessel under the arms conference agreement in this manner until congress has an opportunity to act on the question.

The secretary's authority to use the ship as a target was upheld in effect by the action of Justice Hitz in the District of Columbia supreme court yesterday in dismissing Shearer's application for an injunction on the grounds that the plaintiff had no equity and the court lacked jurisdiction. Shearer's attorney immediately noted an appeal to the court of appeals, but this, Secretary Wilbur asserted afterwards, did not act as a stay in the case, and no action was taken to halt the navy tugs en route to Philadelphia to tow the Washington to the Chesapeake capes experiment site.

Science League To Enter Lists For Evolution

San Francisco, November 15.—At a mass meeting which overflowed the main auditorium of the Native Sons hall, a campaign was launched last night, under auspices of the recently organized Science League of America to combat efforts of opponents of the theory of evolution to prevent instructions on that subject from being given in public schools and colleges.

Among the speakers were Luther Burbank, of Santa Rosa, Cal., "plant wizard;" Dr. David Starr Jordan, chancellor of Stanford university; Dr. William E. Ritter, noted biologist; C. S. Mundell, formerly a Congregationalist minister, and Maynard Shipley, president of the league.

Shipley declared it was the purpose of the campaign to "keep evolution in the schools and the Book of Genesis out."

In that Dr. Jordan disagreed with the aims of the organization.

"I would let in not only Genesis, but the whole Bible," said Dr. Jordan. "All I ask or that any one should ask is the free air for truth and it will hold its own."

The chancellor of Stanford said he did not want to see any popular vote on the matter or any laws keeping evolution in the schools or out. Such matters, he averred, should be determined in the light of reason and not by votes. All of the speakers emphasized their belief that evolution did not antagonize or conflict with religion.

ARMY MAY DRAFT FIGHTING WOMEN

Washington, November 15.—(By the Associated Press.)—The war department has put in motion a study intended when completed to give American women a recognized place in the American army "in all branches of the military service in case of future emergency involving a maximum effort."

While the movement still is in a preliminary stage and those responsible for it profess inability at present to say where it may lead, no secret is made of the hope that it may ultimately result in creation, as a separate and distinct branch of the military service, of a reserve woman's army corps, to be found through voluntary enlistment.

Recommendations that such a corps be created already have been made by the commission on training camp activities, by war college committees and by the chiefs of several war department branches. These prompted the distribution among all commanding generals of corps areas of a questionnaires askin ginformation for use by the general staff and upon which the study it is making may take definite form.

The information sought relates particularly to questions of conservation of manpower and increased efficiency for the army. In its present stage, the study shows that the method of recruiting, regulating and coordinating women personnel for the military establishment during war was unsatisfactory to the women employed and to the army as well.

During the world war 250,000 women were in the military service with the British army and their value in the military and industrial service was recognized by the British. It is pointed out in this connection that the British women's army auxiliary corps was organized by the British war office, and functioned as a part of the British army under army orders with efficiency and success.

About 90,000 women served with the United States army overseas, but that included welfare workers, clerks, telephone and telegraph operators, dietitians, cooks, employees in the reclamation service and others, and under the system then prevailing there was much duplication of effort caused principally by the lack of any adequate plan of organization.

The precise duties to be given women under the plan remain to be worked out. Those in charge of the study are considering the needs of all the various branches of the army in emergency. The advisability of employing women as civilians under military control is being considered, together with a proposal by one war college committee that "a study should be made of the organization of a women's army service corps in which women will be regularly uniformed and enlisted.

It is not improbable that the women's corps should be commanded by a woman general officer, assigned to the general staff. Under her supervision the enlisted personnel of the corps would be allocated to all military departments.

REAL values in fine, slightly used fixtures for stores, banks, offices and all lines of business.

THESE fixtures are all rebuilt and refinished by skilled cabinet men in our workshop. Then before being placed on your floor, they must pass a rigid inspection by Mr. Lenson, who has made a close study of the business. His sound judgment and exacting taste protect you against faulty merchandise.

NEW FIXTURES

WE carry a complete line of products of the Atlanta Show Case Company, which all bear the factory guarantee.

WHETHER you are in the market for new or used fixtures it will pay you to drop by our show rooms and get our prices and terms before making any definite arrangements.

LUMBERMAN HELD IN RUM SHIPMENT

Brunswick, Ga., November 15.—The "man higher up" in the alleged liquor shipment from Brunswick to Atlanta is believed to be under arrest, according to police. He is Everett Pearson, well-known Brunswick lumberman, who fell in the toils of the law last night, when placed under arrest by Chief of Police Register.

Pearson, who disclaims all knowledge of the shipment from Brunswick, was arrested upon orders received by the Brunswick police from United States Deputy Marshal A. W. Stuart, of Savannah. Marshal Stuart came here for his prisoner last night and returned to Savannah with him today. Bond for Pearson, it is reported, will be placed at $10,000. Pearson told reporters last night his friends in Brunswick would raise the bond.

The arrest of Pearson follows the holding of two negroes, Will Austell and Joe Tino, in Savannah, in connection with the big shipment. It is understood Pearson was implicated in statements made by the two negro prisoners. At first, Austell claimed sole ownership of the liquor, but his statement was discredited by dry officers.

Pearson, it is charged, assisted in getting the whisky from the steamship, said to be anchored 12 miles off Brunswick's coast, to the mainland and thence into the box car, which was discovered later in Atlanta's railroad yards, consigned to Chicago.

Federal officers forecast further arrests in connection with the Atlanta haul. Other men "higher up," they say, will soon be under arrest, and interesting disclosures are expected.

MACON MAN GIVES $5,000 TO MERCER DIVINITY SCHOOL

Macon, Ga., November 15.—(Special.)—A donation of $5,000 was today made to Mercer university by B. P. O'Neal, Macon capitalist and philanthropist, which he designated is to be used to arrange a building to house the theological department.

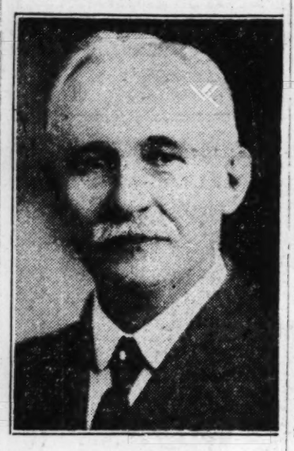

The present gymnasium building wil be reconstructed for this purpose. Mercer alumni yesterday pledged themselves to erect a $150,000 gymnasium on the campus soon. The giving of a separate structure to the school of divinity marks the first time in Mercer's history that the school has had its own building.

Mr. O'Neal is an alumnus of the University of Georgia. He has made large donations to his alma mater and the public school of Thomson and Cordele.

Baptists Prepare To Open Conference at Columbus

BY LOUIE D. NEWTON.
Editor The Christian Index.

Delegates to the Georgia Baptist convention, which will begin in Columbus Tuesday, will begin to arrive there today for important committee meetings and the laymen and pastors' conference, which will open there Monday night at 7 o'clock.

A number of Atlanta Baptists will leave this afternoon for Columbus to be present tomorrow morning for the committee sessions. By noon Monday a majority of the messengers will have reached Columbus and the opening session of the conference on Monday night will see the large auditorium of the First Baptist church of that city crowded with Baptists from every community in Georgia.

Atlantans to Speak.

Dr. W. T. Grande, of Statesboro, president of the laymen and pastors' conference, has arranged a program for the two sessions of this annual pre-convention gathering which will attract a large attendance. Dr. F. C. McConnell, pastor of the Druid Hills Baptist church, Atlanta, and one of the widely-known preachers of the south, will be one of the speakers Monday night. Dr. Arch C. Cree, executive secretary of the Georgia Baptist convention, will be the other principal speaker. Both men will deliver sermons. Dr. McConnell is to preach on the "Ministry of the Holy Ghost."

On Tuesday morning the conference speakers will include addresses by Dr. C. W. Durden, of Newnan; M. S. Shivers, of Eatonton; Judge A. B. Lovett, of Savannah; Hewlett A. Hall, of Newnan, and Dr. J. M. Dodd, of Winder. Laymen on the program will speak on the general theme of "The Unlearned Lesson of the Kingdom."

Mell Opens Convention.

The convention opens on Tuesday afternoon with President Mell's address, always a feature of the annual gatherings of Georgia Baptists. Dr. Mell has been president of the convention for 12 years and knows the thought of the 400,000 white Baptists in Georgia better, perhaps, than any other one person. His addresses are regarded as an interpretation of the present and the future lines along which the denomination should travel.

The Tuesday afternoon session will also be featured by the review for the year by Secretary Arch C. Cree. Dr. Cree will report gifts through the Baptist $75,000,000 campaign for the 11 months of December, 1923, through October, 1924, totaling $697,997.83. This represents missionary and benevolent gifts of Georgia Baptists for this period. The month of November, 1924, is not included in the report and will, most likely, bring the total gifts for the year to close to $1,000,000.

Georgia Baptists have given more than $1,000,000 during the 11 months to the support of local interests of the churches. The Baptist Woman's Missionary union, auxiliary to the Georgia Baptist convention, in its annual convention in Savannah this past week, reported a total of $260,790.38 to mission and benevolences during the year just closing.

A feature of the Tuesday evening session will be the addresses on the

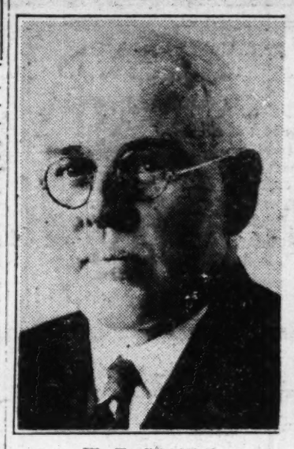

DR. C. W. DANIEL.

1925 campaign of southern Baptists, in which Georgia Baptists have promised to raise $1,000,000. These addresses will be delivered by Dr. George W. McDaniel, of Richmond, Va., president of the Southern Baptist convention; and Dr. Charles E. Burts, of Nashville, Tenn., director of the 1925 program.

Regular reports of the several departments of the convention's work will be made on Wednesday and Thursday. The convention will likely adjourn Thursday afternoon.

Columbus has made ample preparations to make the visitors have a good time. Free entertainment has been provided in the homes of the people for all who will accept the hospitality. Hotels are already crowded with reservations in addition to the large number who will stop in the homes of the Columbus Baptists.

BAG BOB-CAT

Big Feline Taken by Valdosta Hunters After Chase.

Valdosta, Ga., November 15.—(Special.)—A party of hunters, headed by Chief of Police Kendall, of this city, after following a pack of hounds in the river swamp for several hours succeeded in bagging a big bob-cat. The feline was a very fine specimen, measuring more than three feet in length. This is the second cat caught in Lowndes county in the past month.

Chatham Legislator-Editor Appeals for Sane Legislation

Belief that passage of an amendment to the state constitution providing for biennial sessions of the Georgia legislature will have a direct bearing, with fruitful results, for the future of Georgia's business growth, is voiced in a lengthy statement by William G. Sutlive, legislator from Chatham county, managing editor of The Savannah Press and past president of the Georgia Press association. The statement appeard in a recent issue of "The Week," an industrial newspaper published weekly by the utilities information committee of Georgia.

Interspersing Mr. Sutlive's statement, the editor of the industrial paper emphasizes salient features and enables the reader to gather thoroughly the views of the prominent legislator and newspaper man of Chatham.

Sutlive's Statement.

The full story, clipped from "The Week," follows:

"A ringing demand that the state legislature 'get down to business and do the work it is elected to do' came from William G. Sutlive, legislator, managing editor of The Savannah Press and past president of the Georgia Press association, in discussing frankly Georgia's industrial future. He urged honest and intelligent legislation as one of the conditions precedent to a Greater Georgia.

"Mr. Sutlive called attention to the probability of biennial sessions of the legislature to take the place of the annual sessions and declares that real work must be done from now on by the legislators.

"The biennial sessions will have a direct bearing on the future business growth of Georgia,' he said. 'The necessity of stabilizing tax conditions, of establishing a fair, just and equitable state policy toward outside capital needed so badly for development and the abolition of the "sharp-shooting" methods used by some members and non-members of the legislature toward financial groups which are turning their eyes toward Georgia, is plainly visible to the far-seeing citizen.'

"Mr. Sutlive has served as a member of the legislature from Chatham county and is as familiar with Georgia conditions as any other man in the state.

Constitution's Editor Praised.

"The suggestion of Clark Howell, editor of The Atlanta Constitution, relative to the need of giving definite encouragement to outside capital impressed me very much and we reprinted it in The Press,' he continued. 'I believe that the legislature of the state can do Georgia inestimable good if it will follow the general fundamental principles discussed by Mr. Howell.'

"Mr. Sutlive said the legislature, by skipping a session every year will of necessity face more work when it meets in biennial sessions.

"This calls for real work from the very first day of the session,' he said. 'It means that the members will not have time to waste on endless discussion of petty questions. It means the legislature will not be able to defer its important work until the last legislative day.

"'It will produce more real thought as to the needs of the state and when the people back of the legislators begin to do some constructive thinking you will begin to see the passage of more constructive legislative measures.

Confidence in People.

"'I have implicit confidence in the judgment of the people of Georgia when aroused to the vital needs of the state and I believe a strong public sentiment is being created all through the state which will call for some real intelligent action on the part of the legislature and will call for the destruction of little bickerings and squabbles arising from the personal animosity of one legislator against another.'

"Mr. Sutlive said the state has been given a black eye through the introduction of innumerable bills of a facetious or malicious character. He said he was convinced there is a small group of men to be found in the legislative halls who are not members, but who get members to introduce bills directed at some business activity for the sole purpose of forcing that line of business to employ them to withdraw or defeat the bill.

"'By holding biennial sessions I don't believe the state will suffer as much as heretofore from this class of parasites,' Mr. Sutlive declared. 'When this class is eradicated you will find that a more wholesome sentiment in behalf of the passage of constructive measures will have been created.

Georgia Cannot Lag.

"'With the other southern states showing marked activity in seeking new money for their development Georgia cannot afford to lag behind. In fact, Georgia must stay ahead of these other states if she expects to hold her position as the Empire State of the South. We ought to meet new capital with a band; we ought to welcome new lines of business with sincerity and honesty; we ought to go out and seek the men who are capable of building great factories and big cities and assure them that the people of Georgia and the legislature of Georgia will do everything possible to aid them in their enterprises.

"'By building up the state industrially the indirect benefit largely will come to the farmers of the state and as Georgia is essentially an agricultural state it is to the best interest of the farmers to join in the movement to encourage investment in Georgia.

"'The farmers virtually name the dominant group in the legislature and I am glad to note that they are calling to account some respresentatives who have followed a consistent policy of opposing all developers and endeavoring to hamstring investors in every possible way.

"'The biennial plan is going to help Georgia and I predict that we will see some definite action soon in the stabilization of taxation, the equalization of taxation and in frowning upon the petty destructionists who would sacrifice the interest of the entire state for a little private benefit to themselves in a political way,' he declared. 'I firmly believe we are on the way to better and bigger things in Georgia and we should all get together, regardless of minor differences, in carrying out successfully the several constructive movements now under way.'"

MOTORMAN IS BLAMED FOR TONAWANDA WRECK

Washington, November 15.—Responsibility for the wreck on the International railway near Tonawanda, N. Y., on October 19, resulting in the death of four persons and injuries to 98, was placed on Motorman Foreman of the passenger train in a report today by the safety bureau of the interstate commerce commission.

The report said the crash was due to the failure of Foreman to maintain proper lookout and to note that there was a train standing at the station at Ellicott Creek road.

Foreman said he did not see the rear end of the second train until his own was within a few hundred feet of it, but tests made under weather conditions similar to those prevailing at the time of the accident showed the bureau reported, that the train should have been seen from a point 1,500 feet distance.

Had the motorman looked across the curve, the report said, he would have seen the train at an ample distance to enable him to stop.

GEORGIA BEATS AUBURN—VANDY WINS FROM TECH

Bulldogs Threaten Often

BY GEORGE CONGDON,
Sporting Editor, Constitution.

Columbus, Ga., November 15.—(Special.)—Georgia's ferocious bulldog, an animal to strike terror into the hearts of would-be conference leaders, sank its molars tellingly into the striped flanks of the Auburn Tiger at the Driving park here this afternoon, but while it was holding grimly the jungle beast of Boozer Pitts, its rantings on its own account netted only one touchdown. It was by a meager margin of a 6-to-0 score that Georgia is winner of the 1924 Columbus classic.

The Bulldogs, collectively and severally, literally ranted about the barred field of the Driving park, but every time, except in the first quarter when Nelson, halfback, went off left tackle for 15 yards and a touchdown, the Tiger got his dander up, stiffened his back and was invulnerable. Only twice did Auburn show signs of scoring, once in the first quarter and again in the third period. The first threatening ramp of the Pitts boys sort of died out. The last was ended summarily when Joselove recovered after Turner, Auburn fullback, had fumbled on the Georgia 35-yard line.

It was the inspiration of a historic pride in its victories over the Bulldogs that kept Auburn from breaking before the Bulldog's vicious charge. Georgia was the kind of an offensive that generally brings touchdowns. It brought one today, but against any other team that has played as Auburn has before this game it would have brought many. There were penalties figuring in the smallness of the score, too. More than once Georgia was offside right at the goal line and the over-anxiety to ram the ball over the last white line meant a touchdown gone.

Georgia Uses Rockne System.

The irresistible punch and power of the Bulldogs comes from the source that has given, we believe, the middle west its greatest team. Watch the Notre Dame outfit of the able Knute Rockne in action and then watch the Georgia team. You'll see that same driving ability in both. Call Stuldecher, Crowley, Miller and Layden of Notre Dame the Four Horsemen. Then watch Georgia and you'll be mightily inclined to talk about Moore, Kilpatrick, Nelson and Thomason in about the same manner. Georgia looks like the Irishmen, works like them and is getting results that aren't far behind them.

Auburn has not shown so much this fall, although no team has been able to run wild on the Plainsmen. Vanderbilt beat Auburn, 14 to 0, but Vanderbilt in beating Auburn made nothing like the number of first downs against it that Georgia did today. Seventeen there were to Georgia's credit. Auburn made six first downs against the Athenians. Georgia smashed through the Pitts line time after time in all four quarters for its first downs. Three of the Plainsmen's first downs came in the third quarter when Georgia rooters began figuring what a 1924 win for Auburn would do to the historical table of Bulldog-Tiger meetings. They came right in a row as first one back and then another cut through the line or snagged a pass.

The most startling thing in the whole event this afternoon was the amount of time that both spent and the entirely remarkable results they obtained from the aerial attack. Completed forward passes, long ones, short ones, and others of medium length, played a big part in that game.

Beautiful Passes.

Buster Kilpatrick, of Georgia, and "Pea" Green, of Auburn, are about even tonight on the pass-pitching game. We never saw a prettier exhibition of the overhead work. This attack, with the line plays and end runs, combined to make the game a masterpiece in Georgia-Auburn history, even though the Plainsmen will not be inclined to relish it. It wasn't a case of what the loser lacked. It was simply the better brand of football the winner played. More in the dark than ever are prospects of predicting fairly and accurately Georgia-Auburn and Tech-Auburn scores.

While the booting toe of J. D. Thomason, star Georgia fullback, was almost equaling the work of "Pea" Green's elongated legs and ample understanding in the punting line, Scrappy Moore's point-gaining hoof wasn't in shape today. Not only did Moore miss his drop-kick try for the point, after Georgia's touchdown, but also was off when he booted twice to add three more points from the field to break a record of six years' standing. In that time, seven points have been the largest number scored in a single Georgia-Auburn game.

About 12,000 people converging in Columbus from all sections of Georgia and Alabama were banked in the big wooden stands of the Driving park this afternoon to see the struggle. Tonight they made Columbus their own. Columbus is willing to belong to Georgia and Alabama both on this one day of the year. Columbus, without the Georgia-Auburn game, would no longer be Columbus.

Georgia's March to Victory.

It was almost the end of the first quarter when Georgia pushed the horseside pigskin over Auburn's last white line for the only touchdown of the fray. The march to the touchdown looked just like Notre Dame's advance down the field. It started this afternoon from Auburn's 35-yard line where Moore, Georgia quarterback, received "Pea" Green's 31-yard punt. Wiehrs, halfback, sneaked 1 yard around end and then big Thomason carried the ball on two cross bucks that netted 8 yards. Thomason went 1 more yard through right guard for first down.

With the ball on Auburn's 25-yard line the Bulldogs threw more steam into their attack and they got another first down on Nelson's 3 yards over right guard, Wiehr's 2 yards around right end and a penalty against Auburn for off-side. With the ball on Auburn's 15-yard line Nelson, who covered himself with glory in today's game, started off left tackle, found a hole over near left end and shot through like lightning 3 yards over the goal line.

Just before this the Tiger had made his first big effort to tear the Bulldog to shreds. Georgia started the game by making two firstdowns in quick succession. Losing the ball to Auburn on downs, the Tigers tore into the Georgia line and had only a couple of yards to go for a firstdown when Allen cut loose with a beautiful

Each Team Had One Chance

BY CLIFF WHEATLEY.

Straight through the thick walls of the building which houses this great southern newspaper comes the rumble of a mighty celebration; brave songs the band is playing; braver yells the crowd is giving; middle-agedalumni parade arm-in-arm with half-baked freshmen; sons of Vanderbilt acclaim the payment of the vengeance which belonged to them.

Hysterical hundreds think they're paying tribute to the Commodores who defeated Georgia Tech's Yellow Jackets at Grant field Saturday by the slim margin of 3 to 0. But in reality they are not. They are paying tribute to the player on that team, or to the coach on the sideline, who remembered that when opportunity knocks, it's always best to find out what she wants.

Vanderbilt had one chance and took it. Tech had the same number, and spoiled it as completely as a Jacket team has ever succeeded in doing.

Summons Heard.

The Commodore heard the summons in the first quarter after being outplayed throughout the period. Wycoff, punting for Tech from his own 15-yard line, sent the oval 40 yards against a brisk November breeze, but Gil Reese returned it 25 yards when, as a matter of fact, he should have been downed in his tracks.

The opportunity had come and the Commodore was ready. Starting with the ball on the Jackets' 28-yard line, Ryan launched two attacks at the line, which netted a total of three yards. McKibbon dropped back for a long forward pass, but Tech smeared his attempt. On the fourth down, with the wind at his back, Hek Wakefield dropkicked a field goal from Tech's 37-yard line and the winning margin was provided.

Then opportunity placed the game on a silver platter and pushed it toward Tech, but the Jackets turned their backs.

The proffer was made as the second quarter drew to a close. On sustained attack the Jackets carried the ball from Vandy's 38-yard line to the 12-yard tape and Wycoff, on fourth down, went back to the 20-yard line, where he attempted a goal from placement. The ball barely cleared the line of scrimmage and Hendryx, Commodore halfback, foolishly caught it, only to fumble, Captain George Gardner recovering for Tech four yards from the Vanderbilt goal.

Pass Goes Bad.

Assuredly, here was a touchdown! Four yards from glory and four downs to make it in! Farnesworth went into position for a plunge off tackle, but Poole's pass was either bad, or Farnesworth was out of place. Anyway it went by the intended receiver, sped on to the 25-yard line and there it was recovered by Tommy Ryan. Vanderbilt was out of danger. Tech had thrown away a very important struggle.

That accounts for the scoring, but it does not begin to tell the story of a game the complexion of which changed as often, as easily and as completely as a chameleon changes the color of his skin. One moment the lash was being relentlessly, mercilessly applied by the Jackets; the next Tech was fighting desperately to evade destruction.

It was a brilliantly fought engagement from the start and a corking good crowd was on hand to witness the rendering of the verdict. The opening skirmish was confined to a punting duel between Wycoff and Ryan, the latter having a big edge, the advantage coming from the high wind which swept the gridiron from the north.

The Jackets were in possession of the ball twice before any offensive power was demonstrated. Wycoff and Williams alternately bucking for first down before the former kicked from his own 30-yard line to Vanderbilt's 30-yard marker. Then Ryan punted 70 yards over the Jacket's goal line and Tech again made a brief display of attacking ability, Williams bucking 9 yards for first down after the Commodores had stopped Wycoff. Then followed another exchange of punts, culminating in Reese's magnificent return of a splendid punt and Wakefield's exhibition of drop-kicking qualities.

The second quarter was lacking in spectacular ground-gaining features until Tech was given the ball on Vandy's 38-yard line, the result of Keene, the Vanderbilt center, and therefore ineligible, catching one of McKibbon's tosses.

Strain Telling.

The Jacket backs by this time were showing the strain under which they were laboring and Coach Alexander sent in Moore and Farnesworth for Wilton and Williams. On the first play Murray failed, but Farnesworth hit right tackle for 7. He fumbled on the next play, but recovered without loss and on fourth down made three yards and first down.

Scenting the counters that would give them a working margin, the Jacket backs continued their pummeling of the Commodore forwards. Wycoff plunged through right guard for two and Farnesworth contributed one at the opposite side of the line. Farnesworth hit right guard for 5 and went through the same hole for 3 more and first down. In scoring distance for the first time, Murray, Farnesworth and Wycoff plunged for 5 yards on three plays and then followed the queer twists of fortune that have been described already.

Vanderbilt's only first down in the initial half was registered on the first play after the Jackets had ruined their chance of scoring. Reese, sweeping from Vandy's 25-yard line, ran 18 yards around right end before being brought down by Captain Gardner. The half ended two plays later, Tech having the ball on her own 24-yard line.

Punting Duel Resumed.

The punting duel which had marked the first quarter was again resumed in the third, Wycoff this time stepping ahead of his Commodore rival. Each team made one first down from scrimmage, Vandy's resulting from two plunges through the center of the line by Ryan and Tech's from successive bucks by Farnsworth and Murray.

Only once in this quarter did the Jackets have possession of the ball in Commodore territory, Moore's nice return of Ryan's 40-yard punt putting Tech on Vanderbilt's 38-yard line. On the third down, however, Wycoff, attempting to throw a for-

Strategy of Commodores Defeated Tech--Staton

BY JOHN STATON.
Four Years End, Georgia Tech.

Tech and Vandy, once peers of all southland in football, fought it out yesterday to a finish. But for once in many years the victor was not accorded the southern championship. It was just a colorful, hard fought contest, but had no special significance in regard to southern rating.

Vandy, by virtue of a drop-kick in the first period, emerged from that conflict with all the laurels of a victor. The Commodores deserved the three points. Tech did not earn a score. So, as far as the result is concerned, the tally 3-0 is what it should have been. Considering the game without regard to points, Tech played a shade better all-round game. There was not much difference, but when the final tallies are compiled, Tech will no doubt have earned more first downs, etc.

The Vandy strategy, in scoring the three points, was a perfect example of the technique of football, and able generalship.

A strong breeze was blowing south across Grant field. Vandy won the toss and chose to defend the north goal. The wind was behind the Vandy punts, giving them good distance. Doug Wycoff was forced to punt right into the face of the blowing wind.

Now Vandy figured thusly. We will gain on every exchange of punts. Finally, Tech will be forced to kick from under the shadow of her own goal posts. Punting at such Walter Hagen Wins Club Open Championship at Va.

Norfolk, Va., November 15.—Playing steady, consistent golf under adverse weather conditions that had made a difficult course heavy this morning and holding a steady pace despite a downpour of rain that drenched the participants in the afternoon, Walter Hagen, British open champion, not only wiped out Johnny Farrell's slight lead of the opening day to take the lead, but withstood the final drive of Harry Hampton, to capture the first open championship of the Princess Anne Country club. Hagen finished in 293, three strokes ahead of Farrell and Hampton, who tied for the second purse, each making 296. Hampton was credited with playing the best game of the day.

Tom Boyd, also showing up well under the changed conditions, forged to the front to take the fourth purse with 298. Gene Sarazen and Jack Forrester finished in a tie for the fifth purse with 301. E. Loving, of Charlotteaville and Virginia open champion, won the purse offered by the Virginian Pilot for the lowest score made by a Virginia or North Carolina entrant, 323.

Rain Delayed Start.

Light rains this morning delayed the start of the threesomes for the first flights of the day, materially increased the hazards of the course, and handicapped the players. It was plain from the start that there would be no pars registered and that the lowered course record of the preceding day would stand. The field of starters was sharply curtailed, but the galleries held up well.

Farrell, Hagen and Sarazen, the three players with the best chance to

CRIMSON TIDE UPSETS DOPE BY LOSING TO CENTRE

Lucky for 'Bama That Praying Colonels Are Not Conference Members

BY JERRY BRYAN.

Birmingham, Ala., November 15.—(Special.)—Dope went by the board here Saturday afternoon and a spotless record was marred with Centre's 17-to-0 victory over the University of Alabama. The Crimson football bark, apparently sailing over a calm sea steering by the compass, championship, ran afoul of hurricane weather when it encountered the Prayin' Colonels and the hopes of a team with a victorious season passed from the campus of the capstone. Though Centre's victory does not knock the Pickens conference championship trophy from out of the reach of the clutching fingers of the Tidesmen, it nevertheless discounts the eleven as one which could not stand the pace set by a Dixie eleven.

Luckily for Alabama, Centre is a non-conference team and the game which will be played in Birmingham on Thanksgiving day between Alabama and Georgia will yet decide the conference champion.

There was no doubt as to which of the teams that played Saturday was the better. Centre made 15 first downs while Alabama made only seven. Alabama at no time during the game had the ball nearer Centre's goal line than the 48-yard line and the entire game was played in Alabama territory. The Tide looked stale and lacked the color of the team which played earlier in the year. Centre literally smothered the fleet Alabama backs and Rosenfeld and Brown, the two boys who have been winning games with sensational broken field runs, seldom got far beyond the line of scrimmage and often were thrown for losses, especially Brown, as Rosenfeld went out of the game in favor of Brown early in the contest.

Hubert's Plunges Fail.

Hubert's wonted line plunging failed to crush the forward wall of the Colonels and the light delegation from Danville, with the mighty Kubale adding a bulwark of strength in the middle of the line, held steadfastly before the onslaught.

As for Centre, Minus Gordy seemed to have stolen Captain Hubert's stuff and smashed the heavy Alabama lines for long gains through center and guard. Covington ran the ends like a demon and hurled passes to his ends with an unbeatable sureness.

Centre displayed some very efficient blocking when the Colonels started around end and it was largely the better interference of the Kentucky team which enabled its backs to go for longer gains. Alabama ball carriers ran often unprotected and Lemon and Thomason smashed through what interference screened the majority of protected plays.

Covington Stars.

Though Covington, the leading star of the Centre constellation, did not break loose on any of his sensational long-broken fields runs he was eternally dashing off four, five and six-yard gains when the Colonels needed yardage. He, however, broke away on one 20-yard run, the longest of the game from scrimmage, which placed the ball on Alabama's 20-yard line and in position for him to hurl his pass to Lemon for the final touchdown.

Centre received the ball and Covington ran it back from his goal line to the 28-yard line. Covington and Gordy made first down on a run and plunge of 5 and 6 yards, respectively. Centre was held and punted and Alabama was forced to punt after being held on her 18-yard line. Covington called for a fair catch and Lemon tried a placement from the 53-yard line on a free kick, but it fell short. Alabama made a first down on two bucks by Hubert, which carried the ball 13 yards down the field. However, the Alabama captain fumbled on the next play and Lemon recovered on Alabama's 30-yard line.

Gordy fumbled on the first down for Centre and McClintock recovered for Alabama on his own 43-yard line. On the second down for Alabama Rosenfeld fumbled when Wilson tackled him and Lynch recovered for Centre on Alabama's 37-yard line.

Centre scored her field goal in the third quarter after Gillis had punted out of bounds on his own 39-yard line. Covington ran the ball 7 yards around right end out of bounds, but McClintock threw Rabenstein for a loss of 5 yards. Covington passed to Lemon for 10 yards and first down. After being held on Alabama's 17-yard line and a 5-yard penalty inflicted against the Colonels, Covington dropped back to the 35-yard line and held the oval while Lemon booted it squarely through the goal.

Score on Pass.

Late in the game Covington reeled off 20 yards and placed the ball on Alabama's 20-yard line. Gordy made four at right guard but Covington lost three around left end. The Centre quarterback then called for a pass and shot the ball over Barnes' head to Lemon, who caught it behind Alabama's goal line. Lemon kicked goal. The work of Lemon at end was a big feature in the Centre defense. The fact that Alabama actually lost 19 yards on their 15 tries on end runs speaks well of the work of the Colonels' great flankmen. Kubale was a tower of strength in the Centre line, while Lynch played a good game at tackle.

Captain Covington, of course, was the big offensive star of the Colonels and used rare judgment in running the team. Gordy's smashing line plunges were seldom stopped without gain.

For Alabama Compton probably played the best game in the line. In the backfield Hubert made a few good gains.

Tech High Holds Field Meet Trouncing Riverside

BY GORDON KEITH.

The Tech High football machine, with Thomason and Randolph running wild, rolled over the fighting Riverside Cadets Saturday morning on Poncey park and smashed the Gainesville defense for five touchdowns with not even a murmur from the visitors' flaunted attack. The final score was 32-0, and Tech High looked like two million dollars in amassing this total over such a worthy opponent.

At the end of the first five minutes the count was 6-0, at the first quarter 13-0, and at the half 20-0. The Cadet line, heavy and experienced though it is, was absolutely unable to stop the mighty thrusts and fancy side-stepping of the Smithie backfield, and during the entire first half the Tech High backs were stopped not more than twice for no gain, while runs of from 15 to 30 yards were the order of the day.

The home team's line opened holes a wagon could be driven through, and the backfield interference got the secondary defense out of the way, so there was nothing to do but give ground in huge chunks. The Cadets did this all right, but put up a game fight for every inch, even though the manner in which the fast Atlanta backs ripped and tore yardage through their line and around the flanks made it appear as if the Riverside eleven was either not fighting or was hopelessly in the fog.

When the Cadets got the ball, which they managed to do occasionally, they would make a first down or two, but since Tech High had the ball about four-fifths of the time during most of the game, the attack had but small opportunity to assert itself.

The first touchdown came a few minutes after the kickoff when Randolph, one of the best fullbacks southern preps have boasted in years, went 15 yards through center for the score after a smashing drive had advanced the ball well within the danger zone. Thomason missed goal. A few minutes later, when Riverside was still rather razed by the suddenness of the attack, Stumpy Thomason shot off tackle and sprinted 40 yards for the second of the Smithie scores. He kicked goal from placement. The quarter ended with the count 13-0.

Tech High got one more score in the first half when Randolph ploughed through center from the 5-yard line on fourth down. Thomason kicked goal. The half ended with the Smithies sitting on top of the world with a 20-0 score.

Riverside played a much better game in the second half, especially the third quarter, often holding for downs and forcing a punt. Tech High went scoreless in this frame, but threatened seriously until the cadets held for downs within their 10-yard line. The quarter ended with Riverside in possession of the ball on its own 7-yard line. Two bucks failed to gain, and the cadets punted out of danger.

Rosenblatt, brainy little field general of the Smithies, made the most spectacular run of the day when he intercepted a cadet pass on his own 25-yard line and raced 75 yards with interference across the cadet goal. Goal was missed, with the score standing at 26-0.

Riverside was desperately heaving passes on every down, and completed one for 40 yards that put the ball on the Smithie 10-yard line, but the cadets were off side and the ball was brought back. The Smithies made their final score of the game when Holland recovered a Gainesville fumble on Riverside's 15-yard line, Randolph again going over, scoring on an off tackle drive for the 15 yards. Goal was missed, with score 32-0.

Late in the second quarter, Thomason crossed the cadet goal on a pretty 20-yard run, but the touchdown did not count and the ball was brought back and Tech High penalized 15 yards for roughness. In the same period Riverside had perhaps its best chance to score when two successive first downs had placed the ball on the Smithie 30-yard line, but several long passes were incomplete by narrow margins and the ball went over.

Thomason was as bright a light as ever, making numerous long gains and failing to advance only a time or two. He is about the fastest man wearing grid togs this scribe has seen, and just as hard to stop as he is hard to touch. Randolph ploughed through the line with his usual force, and his broken field work rivalled Stumpy's in brilliance. Parshall, at half, picked his holes with unfailing accuracy and gained always through the line. He runs slow and goes where his opening is made.

Rosenblatt made two or three brilliant gains and ran his team in masterly fashion. The line, with McClure, Lautsenheiser, Watkins and Rusk playing brilliant ball, put up a magnificent defense and seldom failed to open up. McClure played a particularly good game in the line. Holland was even better than usual at end, and the fast Smithie captain threw the cadet backs for losses and followed the ball in fine fashion.

When players can play as brilliant a game as these men did against a team as good as Riverside they are sure enough stars. Vaden, cadet fullback, and Armstrong, half, played best ball for the visitors. Vaden supported the line and advanced the ball with equal brilliancy. The offensive contained a stack of plays and the attack was varied throughout. Forward passes nearly gave the desperate team two touchdowns in the final quarter, when Riddle, great little end, and Brisdois, quarterback, missed one or two of Armstrong's long heaves by inches.

Oglethorpe Meets Concrete Wall at St. Louis

Edgren's Impressions of Boy Who Seeks American Ring Money

Fuente Grasps Opportunity To Get Boxing Fans' Money

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

Tony Fuente, of Mexico, is the latest heavyweight novice who seems headed for some of the big money. An Argentine picked up a quarter of a million or more trailing Dempsey. Why shouldn't a Mexican have as good a chance Besides that, promoters like to work up "international" bouts. They draw the big money. Look at Carpentier and Firpo with Dempsey. Both record-breakers.

Fuente is only nineteen, stands a couple of inches over six feet—which is very unusual for a Mexican—and weighs something over 180. He has broad sloping shoulders, good arms and big fists. He has been fighting only a short time, and has attracted attention for only a few weeks, but he has been well advertised and well handled, and seems able to deliver his share of the goods. This doesn't mean that he will be sitting on Dempsey's tail this year or next. But there's a chance he may be shoved along into the challenger class, with luck. He is fast, he can box, and he has a punch. Experience may do a lot for him.

Discovered by Winsor.

Fuente was "discovered" by Fred Winsor, locally known in Los Angeles as "Windy." Winsor has been handling fighters along the coast for several years. For four years he had been anxiously hunting for a heavyweight. Fate played a funny joke on "Windy" once. Seven or eight years ago he managed a young heavyweight novice who had a few four-round fights and felt so little enthusiasm over his prospects in the ring that he wanted to go back to work in the shipyards at good wages. Winsor wasn't very enthusiastic either.

In fact he decided that the youngster probably never would get out of the ham and bean class as a fighter, and thought he might as well go back pounding rivets, as he's probably never be able to pound anything else. The youngster was Jack Dempsey. Speak to Winsor about those days and he has a stroke of apoplexy. What was that income tax Jack Kearns paid this year? And possibly someone else might have been paying it.

Since Winsor has been handling Fuente, however, he is more cheerful. "Dempsey is growing old like all of them," he says, "and some boy will come along and take him. It may be Tony."

Fuente has been rushed along fast in the past couple of months. He knocked out a lot of heavyweights imported up and down the coast. His quickest K. O. was in fifteen seconds. The name of his opponents may not be known all over the country, but they look well enough on a record, and even Dempsey flattened a lot of unknown in his early days.

Johnson Fight Best.

Fuente's best job, to date, was taking a four-round decision over Floyd Johnson. Floyd is an experienced veteran. It's true he never got over the beating he received from Willard, and that he grows tired and wobbly on his pins more than he used to before that happened. He has been on the point of retiring from the ring two or three times. But he is the gamest fellow in the world, aggressive every minute, has a good punch, and ought to be a terror to any novice in a four-round bout.

I had a notion myself that Johnson probably would flatten the young Mexican. But he didn't. In the first round Johnson swarmed over Fuente just the way he swarmed over Rojas. He cut the young Mexican's nose and lip and had him bleeding, and Fuente looked as if he didn't quite know what to make of it. But in the third minute of the first round Fuente started with a jab and uppercut, and the fight was his from then until the end of the fourth.

Johnson, at the finish, had shot his bolt and was slowing up, while Fuente was going better and hitting faster. The Johnson fight was a great thing for him. He learned something, and got a lot of confidence.

Matched With Fulton.

But Tony is being rushed along pretty fast. He is now matched to fight Fred Fulton. The long plasterer should be dangerous still to a novice; Winsor takes chances. But, as he says, "If Fuente has the goods he'll come through; it he hasn't I want to know it." Managing a fighter isn't all sentiment.

A week after the Fuente-Johnson fight Pat Lester was brought down to Los Angeles by Spider Kelly and Tim McGrath, two of the foxiest old-time handlers of fighters in the world.

These two birds picked Lester a couple of years ago as a world beater, and have been grooming him for the big tent. Pat is six feet three, long armed, big fisted, and weighs a plenty. Johnson went after him the same way he went after Fuente, and in the first round landed so many punches that Lester was a little at sea.

But the big fellow started fighing in the second, dropping Johnson for a few seconds wih a hard righthand punch on the chin that took half the steam out of him. In the last round of the four Johnson was weary, but he stuck it out. Lester seems to have a pretty good punch, and he has the slickest seconds in the world. He may get up into the big money too.

La Barba Good.

Among the little fellows who are likely to upset some of the champions within a year or so is Fidel La Barba, Olympic champion. La Barba recently started professionally in the four-round game at Los Angeles, directed by George Blake, who is well known in army and athletic boxing circles.

La Barba is a powerful little fellow and a top-notch boxer. He was a wonder among the amateurs and I see no reason why he shouldn't be at least as good as Gernaro, who can whip Pancho Villa and was Olympic champion in his own time.

FORT TACKLES LOYOLA TODAY

New Orleans, La., November 15.—(Special.)—Coach "Moon" Ducote's Loyola university Wolves Sunday afternoon at Loyola stadium will swing into action against a powerful army eleven possessing a galaxy of brilliant performers in the Camp Benning combination. And, though the odds lean heavily in favor of the visiting clan, the locals are "sitting pretty" and saying nothing.

The Wolves are silently waiting for the opening whistle just as in former melees and intend pouncing upon the Camp Benning "All-Stars" with a suddenness and unwarrantness that may upset the dope bucket. The Maroon and Gold warriors surprised the gridiron world by holding the powerful Oglethorpe and Mercer teams to ties, and who knows but the Wolves may arise to the occasion and turn back the gathering of all-Americans, all westerns and what not?

Watch Smythe.

According to advance dope, the man most to be feared by the Crescent City representatives is "Dutch" Smythe, the little all-American quarterback with West Point last year. Smythe will have to be watched if Loyola hopes to halt that Benning offensive with any degree of consistency.

Materially aiding "Dutch" in the scoring line is Claude McQuarrie, West Point captain in 1919 and declared by Walter Camp to be the greatest defensive player of all time. Then there is Henry White, an all-western tackle from the University of California. Other heady performers for the "Doughboy" squad include Sidney Douhit, Onto Bragan, William Schaeffer and Clough ("Mutt") Gee, all-southern end while with the Clemson eleven.

Wolves Confident.

The Loyola Wolves, on the other hand, are supremely confident of giving a good account of themselves, even though the dopesmiths overlook their chances. Every last one of those fighting game Wolves are in the best possible shape and ready for their best efforts, and it will be a strong team that Ducote sends into the fray against the Camp Benning men Sunday afternoon.

The locals realize that in the Benning team they are meeting a group of footballers that has not been defeated by a southern team this season. Benning's string of victories includes wins over the powerful Oglethorpe eleven with Adrian Maurer and his band of Stormy Petrels.

Both teams will not be minus moral support in today's crash. The Soldiers have brought over a 64-piece band besides a number of loyal supporters, while the local university will be on hand with colors flying. The Loyola instrument blowers also will be in the stands lending music to the occasion, and the rooting squad has been prepared for Sunday's game. The contest is scheduled to start at 2:30 o'clock sharp.

TERRIERS FALL BEFORE TRINITY

Durham, N. C., November 15.—Wofford's Terriers snapped viciously at the heels of the Trinity Blue Devils during the first half here this afternoon, but in the third and fourth periods Edward Lagerstedt, the outstanding star of the game, eluded them and raced and bucked his way to two touchdowns. The try for point by Caldwell after second touchdown was the last play of the game.

Rip Major's South Carolinians had a shade the better of the argument during the first half, but weakened in the final periods and Trinity gained consistently on line stabs and short end runs.

Bell gained consistently through center for the Terriers.

Bears Retain Slim Lead In "Y" Volley Ball League

The Bears, led by McLain, still heads the Jungle Volleyball league of the business men's class of Central "Y," but are being closely pursued by the Elephants, under Dan Dozier. During the week, the Elephants took two out of three from the Bears, and the Tigers did likewise, but the Bears came back strong Friday and defeated the demoralized Lions three straights.

Dozier's Elephants fell as the agile Tigers took them to the ground for the count of two out of three on Friday, and are getting their crippled forces back in shape for a hard grind this week.

Although Captain Kent, of the Tigers, was in the wilds of Mississippi learning a few tricks in the art of Bear and Elephant hunting, the team bore down on the leaders and gave them a mighty bad scare.

Judge Bennett's Lions have been off their feed for some time, but judge has secured a new whip, with some advice from "Old Timer," and will no doubt take some time for a strangle-hold on the Elephants when they meet Monday.

The Bears are composed of McLain, Captain O'Callahan, Horton, Callaway, Atkinson, Myrick, LeCraw, Rader, Hartsfield, McHlamey and McCash. The Elephants have Dozier, Captain Lamb, Heath, Foster, Hood, Crippen, Miller, Jentzen, Mills and Hardin. Kent's Tigers are Mayfield, Hutchison, Morrison, Dent, Burt, Goldin, Hepner, Pittinger and Evans. Judge Bennett's lineup follows: Hunter, Lowry, Thompson, McPherson, Normandy Snodgrass, Eubanks, Tucker, Visanska, Redding and Slate.

The standing to date:

Team.	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
Bears	19	8	.703
Elephants	16	11	.593
Tigers	13	14	.481
Lions	6	21	.222

This week's schedule:

Monday—Bears vs. Tigers, Lions vs. Elephants.

Wednesday—Lions vs. Tigers, Bears vs. Elephants.

Friday—Elephants vs. Tigers, Bears vs. Lions.

MARYLAND IN 0-0 TIE WITH N. C. STATE

College Park, Md., November 15.—Maryland and North Carolina State played to a scoreless tie on a rain-soaked gridiron here this afternoon.

Maryland outplayed State in attack, making nine first downs to three, and came within State's 30-yard line four times, once in each period. In the second period Maryland got to State's eight-yard line, where a forward pass attack failed, and reached the six-yard line in the third period, but lost the ball on a fumble.

The nearest North Carolina State got to Maryland's goal was the 31-yard line in the first period. Pugh and Besley, of Maryland, made remarkable gains considering the condition of the field. Cox in the line, and Lassiter, in the backfield, starred for State. Punting on both sides was good, considering the playing conditions.

Hall of Maryland tried three dropkicks for field goals, one from the 35-yard line in the first period, and the others within the 45-yard line near the end of the game.

The Line-up and Summary.

L. S. U. DEFEATS STATE NORMAL

Baton Rouge, La., November 15.—(Special.)—L. S. U. this afternoon defeated the Louisiana State Normal eleven by a score of 40 to 0 during a steady drizzle of rain. Throughout the game every player on the entire L. S. U. squad, along with men from the second and third strong teams, got into the scrimmage, for that was all it really was, as the Bengals literally scored at will over the upstaters.

TULANE BEATS TENNESSEE 26 TO 7

New Orleans, La., November 15. After holding like a stone wall for two periods, the Tennessee line crumbled in the third, and Tulane dashed through at will, scoring three touchdowns, to which another was added in the final period. Up to this time Tennessee led by 7 to 0. The final score was Tulane 26, Tennessee 7.

Lautenschlaeger, fast Tulane quarterback, was the individual hero, scoring 13 points in the third period. Brown, G. Wilson and E. Henican scored the others.

To Neff, who replaced Robinson at right half, goes the credit for Tennessee's touchdown. In the second period a forward pass, Campbell to Harkness, netted 42 yards. This was followed by line rushes, and Neff carried the ball through for the touchdown. Campbell kicked goal.

The Lineup and Summary.

LARRY AVERA TO FIGHT J. FLYNN

Larry Avera, junior welterweight southern champion, left Atlanta Saturday morning for St. Petersburg, Fla., where he will box Johnny Flynn on an all-star card Tuesday night, November 18.

Larry is in the best of condition and has been working hard for the past two weeks in preparation for the coming fight. He will arrive in St. Petersburg tonight and will work out Monday afternoon in final preparation for the fight.

MICHIGAN U. BEATS OHIO STATE

Columbus, Ohio, November 15.—(By The Associated Press.)—An infuriated Wolverine lashed into fierceness by its Ohio State keeper, who had whipped and subdued it into submission for three periods, faced a starking six to nothing defeat as the last period began, when with all its characteristic cunning and fighting inheritance, it snarled, scratched, passed, escaped and finally outran its keeper and early master, piling up 16 points. Tonight it rests in its far northern retreat, nursing without malice the bruises it sustained in its 16-to-6 victory over Ohio State's eleven today.

The classic contest was waged before a throng of 68,284 spectators, including 15,000 Michigan fans, that all but filled the huge Ohio stadium to capacity.

Ohio State, the early master, caught its visitor in an unacclimated state at the very opening of the game, scoring a touchdown within one minute after the first kickoff.

There was no more scoring until the second half, when Michigan counted two touchdowns and a field goal.

MISSOURI WALLOPS WASHINGTON, 35-0

Columbia, Mo., November 15.—Crashing through the Washington university line for 391 yards and 19 first downs, the powerful Missouri university backs ran up a score of 35 to 0 over the Pikers today, avenging their defeat of last year at the hands of the Washington squad.

V.P.I. DEFEATED BY STATE UNIV.

Blacksburg, Va., November 15.—One of the largest crowds that ever assembled here to witness a football contest saw the University of Virginia eleven defeat Virginia Polytechnic institute 6 to 0 in a spectacular game on Miles field this afternoon.

The lone tally of the encounter came during the opening period when a V. P. I. back fumbled the ball in midfield and Ahner recovered and dashed 50 yards to the goal line. Maphis failed at the try for point.

Several times during the game Tech threatened to score but, although they made eleven first downs to Virginia's three, they were unable to cross the Cavaliers' goal. Once Virginia held for downs on the six-yard line.

Southerners Beaten 18-6

St. Louis, Mo., November 15.—(Special.)—Oglethorpe encountered an unexpected concrete wall against St. Louis University today and was beaten, 18 to 6. The Petrels spread all of their gridiron tricks in the initial quarter when they gathered their only touchdown, while the Blue and White machine stopped during the first period, crossed the opposing line in each of the remaining three periods.

First Quarter.

Campbell kicked off over the line. Ramacciotti punted and Wentker recovered Campbell's fumble on the 40-yard line. Oglethorpe threw two line thrusts for a loss and a five-yard penalty put the ball on the the 48-yard line. A pass, O'Reilly to Kahle, netted 15 yards. Fischer made it first down off tackle. Kilgore went nine yards off right tackle. Redfern went 10 yards around right end. Redfern went five yards off tackle. Kilgore broke through line twice for four yards. Hannegan, Higi, Klasner, O'Toole and Schwartz entered the game.

Kilgore made first down, taking the ball to the seven-yard line. St. Louis was penalized half the distance to the goal line for roughing. Kilgore went over on the third down. An attempted forward pass failed to add the extra point. Score, Oglethorpe 6, St. Louis 0. Ramacciotti kicked off to Maurer. A line buck was effectual. Kilgore fumbled and Cooper recovered the ball. Score, Oglethorpe 6, St. Louis 0.

Second Quarter.

Campbell kicked out of bounds. Fischer, Karst and O'Reilly contributed six smashing drives to take the ball to the Oglethorpe 36-yard line. Oglethorpe's line held for two downs, a pass failed and Ramacciotti then booted over the line. Campbell punted to O'Reilly. O'Reilly went off tackle. Ramacciotti smashed through the ball on the 29-yard line.

Oglethorpe was penalized 15 yards for rough work. Ramacciotti took the ball six yards in two line plunges. O'Reilly went four yards off left tackle. Ramacciotti smashed through for touchdown. Stanton substituted for Kahle, but failed to kick goal. Score, Oglethorpe 6, St. Louis U. 6. Ramacciotti kicked off to Kilgore, who ran to his 25-yard line. Campbell kicked out of bounds on St. Louis' 45-yard line. Karst dashed five yards around left end. Score at end of first half, Oglethorpe 6, St. Louis U. 6.

Third Quarter.

Ramacciotti kicked to Maurer. He returned to the 16-yard line. Campbell booted to O'Reilly on his 40-yard line. He threaded his way back 15 yards. Karst broke away for a 45-yard run and a touchdown. Stanton failed to convert the point. Score, St. Louis U. 12, Oglethorpe 6.

Campbell kicked over line. Ramacciotti kicked out of bounds on his own 47-yard line. Stanton threw Redfern for a seven-yard loss. A punting duel followed which ended when Ramacciotti recovered Campbell's fumbled punt in midfield. Ramacciotti and Karst ripped off gains of 20 and 12 yards, respectively. O'Reilly fumbled and Crowe recovered on the 50-yard line. Score: St. Louis university 12, Oglethorpe 6.

Fourth Quarter.

Campbell kicked over the line. Ramacciotti booted out of bounds on Oglethorpe's 43-yard line. Kilgore and Maurer went seven yards through tackle. Kilgore made first down through center. Campbell made first down through center. A double pass netted 12 yards but Oglethorpe was offside. Stanton recovered the ball after it was knocked from Campbell's arms and raced 55 yards for a touchdown. Stanton's attempted pass to O'Toole failed. Score: St. Louis university 18, Oglethorpe 6.

Ramacciotti kicked to Redfern, who ran back to his 20-yard line. Two line plunges and a five-yard penalty gave Oglethorpe first down. Campbell booted to O'Reilly on the 30-yard line. Ramacciotti fumbled and Oglethorpe left recovered on St. Louis' 27-yard line. St. Louis took the ball on the 22-yard line after two line bucks and a completed pass failed to make the necessary 10 yards. Ramacciotti kicked out of bounds on the 50-yard line.

Three successive attempts at passing failed, but St. Louis was penalized 15 yards for roughing. Fischer intercepted an Oglethorpe pass on his 12-yard line and the game ended, the final score being St. Louis university 18, Oglethorpe 6.

VA. EXPECTS BIG ATTENDANCE

University, Va., November 15.—(Special.)—Between 12,000 and 15,000 people are expected to see the football game between Virginia and North Carolina to be played on Lambeth field on the afternoon of Thanksgiving day. Special trains from all over Virginia and North Carolina will bring supporters of both elevens to Charlottesville.

This Thanksgiving game will mark the close of the season for both teams. The two of them have games away from home today and the men who get into action this afternoon will probably be given a rest Monday, but by Tuesday afternoon one squad of men on Lambeth field and another on Emerson field will be drilling hard for the clash which will end the gridiron year.

When Virginia played Carolina two seasons ago the capacity of Lambeth field was taxed by the largest crowd ever assembled for a gridiron game there.

:-: Action Pictures of Tech's Defeat by Vanderbilt Yesterday :-:

Yale Scores Touchdown And Field Goal, Giving Dopesters Another Jolt

Princeton, N. J., November 15.—(By The Associated Press.)—The Bulldog clipped the Tigers' claws and blasted his dream of a big three championship this afternoon in Palmer stadium.

Before a colorful crowd of close to 60,000 and under drab skies from which a bitterly cold wind whipped through the big stadium Yale unleashed a mighty machine that smashed its way to victory, 10 to 0, and toppled Princeton from the heights of greatness it had scaled only a week ago by crushing Harvard.

Yale's triumph by a margin even more one-sided and complete than the score indicates came as an upset almost as startling as Princeton's transformation against the Crimson, for the Tigers had entered the fray favorites. As a result the Blue, now apparently at the top of its stride, will be favored to conquer Harvard next Saturday in the deciding game of the title series and complete a second undefeated season for the Blue.

Score in Third.

Yale concentrated all her scoring today in the third period when Harry Scott booted a remarkable drop-kick for a field goal from the 44-yard line, and Joss, giant lineman, scored a touchdown on a forward pass from Kline after Phil Bunnell had put the pigskin within scoring distance with a brilliant 45-yard run back of a punt. But the Blue outclassed the Orange and Black in every other period and was within three yards of another touchdown, ripping the Tiger line to pieces, when the final whistle blew and stopped the drive.

The Elis not only displayed decisive driving in their attack, but put up a brilliant defense, in which Joss and Captain Lovejoy were the outstanding figures, that completely checked Princeton's offensive efforts, except for a few sporadic instances. Ted Williams, Jake Slagle, Charley Weeks and other backfield aces who had run wild against Harvard were checked repeatedly in their tracks or thrown for losses by the alert, rugged Eli forwards.

Tigers Stopped Cold.

So thoroughly was Princeton's attack stopped that the Tigers never threatened the Eli goal, and, in fact, were only once in Yale territory during the entire game. That was in the latter part of the third period when the Tigers, lashed to a fury by Yale's scoring spurt, gained 45 yards in two plays, a forward pass from Slagle to Tillson and a slashing 25-yard broken-field run by Slagle, which put the ball on Yale's 45-yard line. But the blue defense quickly stiffened and forced the Tigers to kick.

Princeton, it seemed, had gone stale since its startling victory a week ago, for the Tigers showed none of the fire and dash that characterized their play against the Crimson. Yale, however, beat Princeton at the latter's own game, for the Elis got the jump at the start and held the upperhand throughout, smothering Princeton's offense and outplaying the Orange and Black in every department.

The 'huddle system" of calling signals that had bewildered Harvard had no terrors for Yale, which displayed uncanny skill is diagnosing the Tiger plays and tackled with deadly sureness. Behind this forwarded wall the blue had a powerful set of backs, with Eddie Cottle, Bunnell and "Ducky" Pond occupying stellar roles.

Artell, Nittany End, Scores on Fumble But Play Is Ruled Illegal

Philadelphia, November 15.—Pennsylvania's football eleven entered the ranks of tied, but undefeated teams, today when it played a scoreless tie with the strong Penn State college squadron on Franklin field. A mixture of rain and sleet fell throughout the game, which made Franklin field slippery and uncertain and the ball so soggy that it resulted in some fumbling and poor punting.

Once the Penn State cohorts were sent into ecstacies of joy when Right-end Artell picked up what appeared to be a fumble by Captain McGraw, of Pennsylvania, and ran more than 60 yards and across the Pennsylvania goal line for a seeming touchdown. The officials, however, brought the ball back, declaring that the whistle had blown and the ball was not in play.

Al Kreuz, Pennsylvania's fullback, tried five times at placement goals when within striking distance of the State goal line. Four times the kick went bad and once the attempt was blocked. State college made one attempt at placement goal, but M. Baker, of State, fumbled the pass as he tried to catch the ball to hold it for Provost to kick.

BROWN BEATS HARVARD, 7 TO 0

Cambridge, Mass., November 15.—Still gripped in the throes of the blind staggers that sent them careening to a 34-to-0 defeat at the paws of the Princeton Tiger a week ago, Harvard dropped her third consecutive annual encounter with the Brown Bear here today by a score of 7 to 0.

The game was slow to watch, except for the second period, when Brown scored on two brilliantly executed forward passes and two smashing line plunges by Klump, who momentarily substituted for left halfback Keefer. Keefer had been on the receiving end of both passes which led directly to the touchdown.

Klump kicked his own goal after touchdown, the ball slapping off the upraised mits of Theopold, Crimson right guard.

Defensively Harvard showed to better advantage, but throughout the game, play was pretty much a punting affair, with the two teams about evenly divided in distance thus gained.

For Harvard, Halfback Maher starred offensively and defensively.

Forty-five thousand fans tolerated the scrap, and got their real "Kick" of the day when the victorious Brown hosts uprooted the goal posts. A few fisticuffs ensued, but tonight the hospitals are clear.

Out behind the big stadium, on a roped-off plot on Soldiers' field, while the Brown Bear was cuffing the Crimson varsity the Yale freshmen were defeating the Harvard cubs by a score of 7 to 6.

YALE DISTANCE RUNNERS WIN

Princeton, N. J., November 15.—Yale won the annual triangular cross-country race with Harvard and Princeton today, scoring 27 points to 35 for Crimson and 59 for the Tigers. k Smith, of Yale, crossed the finline first in 27 minutes, 4 seconds. The course was 5 1-2 miles.

THIRD ARMY CORPS LOSES

Washington, November 15.—Georgetown defeated the Third Army corps eleven here today, 6 to 0, in a football game played during a snowstorm. But for fumbles, due to a slippery ball, the score would have been larger.

O'Neill, who substituted for Metzger, right halfback, made a 70-yard broken-field run in the second quarter for the only score of the game.

MOREHOUSE BEATS TALLADEGA, 14-0

Morehouse won a well-played 14-to-0 victory over Talladega Saturday afternoon on the Morehouse campus. The game was featured by many long passes on both teams and the line playing of the Morehouse eleven. Talladega had several chances to score but the good linework of Morehouse kept the visitors from scoring.

The first score came in the second quarter after a series of beautiful passes and several neat gains through the Talladega line by Clark. The final score came in the third quarter when the ball was placed within striking distance by forward passes and Clark carried it across.

CENTENARY IN WIN OVER BOSTON

Boston, November 15.—Centenary college's team of 'Southern Gentlemen," with their title inscribed on their chests, defeated Boston college today, 10 to 9, wiping out last season's defeat. The team of giants coached by "Bo" McMillin scored a touchdown and a field goal, the former by Ferrell after an 80-yard run in the third period, and the kick by place from the 25-yard line in the first period.

Ward rushed for Boston College's touchdown in the first period after a Centenary kick was blocked, and Boston gained two points on a safety by White of Centenary in the closing minutes of play.

LUCK AIDS DRAKE TO WIN

Manhattan, Kans., November 15.—The breaks of luck enabled the Drake university eleven to maintain its lead in the Missouri Valley conference here today. Drake, with the aid of an intercepted forward pass and a fumble at two points in the game, when a touchdown was within the grasp of the Kansas Aggies, defeated the Wildcats 7 to 6.

The Aggies outplayed and outgained their conquerors, but luck favored the leaders in the final quarter when an intercepted Aggie pass prevented a score, and later, with three minutes to play, a fumble cost another touchdown.

In the first quarter the invaders took the lead when Lingenfelter, Drake end, picked up a fumble by Anderson, who was tackled in receiving a punt. McLeuen's toe added the winning point.

From that moment the game went the other way. Crashing down the field in the second period for 60 yards, Smith, of the Aggies, went over for a touchdown, but McGee's kick bounced back from the goal posts. It was the second time the Drake goal line had been crossed in a Valley game this year.

KEARNS BREAKS INTO RACE GAME

Los Angeles, Cal., November 15.—Jack Kearns, manager of Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, is planning to break into the boxing and six-day bicycle-racing business in California through the erection of an area to seat 80,000 persons, according to advices received here today from Kearns, who is in New York. Kearns said he had closed contracts for the services of Abe Goldstein, Benny Leonard, Mickey Walker, Gene Tunney, Johnny Dundee, George Godfree, Jack Renault, Charles Weinert and other star boxers.

In the six-day bicycle field, contracts had been closed with Goullet and other riders, the fight manager announced.

Imaginary Wounds Healed; Tech To Meet Ga. on Grid

BY PAUL WARWICK.

Imaginary wounds are healed. Visionary differences are settled. Childish disagreement has been smothered by the fire that burns in manly bosoms—and what we've waited for, is. Feast your eager eyes on the delectable (and quite logical) idea:

The University of Georgia, of Athens, Ga., will meet the Georgia School of Technology, of Atlanta, Ga., in a football game on Grant field, Atlanta, November 14, 1925.

The traffic squad has already begun preparations. They'll be needed. The railroads have already begun poring over time-tables to arrange faster schedules and better rates. They'll be needed. Architects have been commissioned to expand the capacity of Grant field's stands. They'll be needed.

BUT NOT because it'll be a riot! Steady your faltering mind on that feeble point. Simply because it is something that should be, something that should always HAVE BEEN. The good old state of Georgia, peaceful to a pronounced degree; placid to an admirable extent—why shouldn't it see its two proudest institutions engaged in yearly battle?

We could call back the shade of Tommy Spence—and Tommy could say—"Go to it, boys"! We could call on the spirits of those departed souls that have left the Red and Black to enter the mysterious Beyond, and to a voice they would shout—"Up and at 'em, Georgia"!

And the shade of Tommy Spence and the living reality of good old Bob McWhorter, what a blend of spiritual and physical bliss that will be! Join hands and be glad:

For Georgia's two greatest institutions are back on a footing of friendly rivalry once more; once more they will face each other over the lime-striped lines.

Basketball tournaments, when friendliness magnified itself; they don't count—nothing counts except that the year 1925 will bring us what always we always should have had: Georgia Tech, God bless 'em; versus the University of Georgia, God bless 'em.

And we'll all be seeing each other.

U. OF KENTUCKY BEATS VIRGINIA

University of Kentucky eleven closed its home football season here today with a 10-to-3 defeat by Virginia Military institute.

The Cadets were the first to score with a field goal in the second period by White. Kentucky evened the score in the third period with a kick from placement.

V. M. I. scored the winning touchdown of the game when, after an exchange of punts, a Wildcat forward pass was intercepted, the runner being downed on Kentucky's 11-yard line. Here the Wildcats held for downs. However, a five-yard penalty was assessed against Kentucky on the last play for off-side. This gave V. M. I. possession of the ball on Kentucky's six-yard line and a first down. Two line plunges by White carried the ball over. He place-kicked the extra point.

MILLIGAN BEATS CARSON NEWMAN

Jefferson City, Tenn., November 15.—(Special.)—The Orange and Black colors of Milligan now hangs in the archives of Carson-Newman, but only after one of the hardest struggles ever seen on the local field. The toe of Abbott sent two markers through the uprights for Carson-Newman's only score. A Buffalo line that stood as impregnable as steel told the tale of Carson-Newman's inability to batter them into helplessnes, as had been predicted time after time.

Milligan held the famous Carson-Newman team at all points of the game in a sea of mud. Never in the history of football at Carson-Newman has such a battle been waged. This victory for Carson-Newman by such a small score is really a feather in Milligan's cap, as Carson-Newman boasts of victories over Sewanee and other crack teams.

ARMY TIES COLUMBIA, 14 TO 14

West Point, N. Y., November 15.—Columbia and Army fought to a 14-14 standstill in a well-played and interesting game today. The game marked the formal opening of Army's new stadium, which was dedicated with appropriate exercises. Twelve thousand spectators witnesses the contest.

Columbia gave Army the hardest fight it has had this year. The Blue and White backs, Sesit and Koppisch, outclassed Army's backfield. Not until Harry Wilson entered the game in the second quarter did the cadets get going.

win the championship, because of their scores yesterday, were the last to start. Birdies, so frequent the day before, were few and far between, while eagles were unheard of today.

Hagen Forges Ahead.

It was during the morning round that Hagen, superior in driving, approach and on the greens, steadily forged to the front. Farrell was the greater sufferer from the changed conditions, and especially on the greens steadily lost ground. Sarazen was often in trouble and slipped after the turn for the eighteenth.

Hampton and Tom Boyd, rated as having only a slim chance to win, showed the best form throughout the day and steadily closed up the gap between themselves and the leaders. Hampton went into a tie with Farrell for second place, while Boyd, further back on the opening day, shed ahead of Sarazen and Forrester, and forced them to finish in a tie for fifth position. This was the big upset of the day, although neither was able to overhaul the leader, Hagen.

PIMLICO CUP IS WON BY ALTAWOOD

Baltimore, November 15.—The Pimlico cup at 2 1-4 miles proved only a romp for Joseph E. Widener's Altawood, which ran through a track fetlock deep in mud in 3:57 to win $7,950 for his owner and reward his backers to the extent of $3 for each two-dollar ticket invested.

Three lengths back of Altawood finished the Belair stud's Aga Khan, which in turn beat the Liane stable's Sunsini two lengths. The Salubria stables' My Own was the only other starter in the race, finishing a badly beaten fourth.

Sunsini was allowed to set the pace for two miles, with My Own, Aga Khan and Altawood running in the order named. At this stage My Own had had enough and started to bear out, and Altawood soon went to Sunsini to take command, entering the stretch.

Aga Khan made his bid turning for home but, although he put Sunsini away, he could never get close to Altawood. Parke had the latter under wraps throughout the long race.

STRATEGY WON GAME FOR VANDY

a disadvantage, Gil Reese must sooner or later, make a nice run back, putting the ball within striking distance of the goal.

Strategy Worked.

How well did the strategy work? Ryan and Wycoff carried on a punting duel for the larger part of the first quarter. But Ryan, with the wind to his back had the edge. Tech's ends covered all of Doug's punts well save one. This ball came to Reese on the fly. He grabbed it, and found that Tech's ends had been cut down. He carried the ball to within striking distance of the goal. Wakefield, with a beautiful dropkick, gave Vandy the score which she coveted.

For the remainder of the game Vandy was content to play a purely defensive game. And, that was good football, too.

Tech once threatened. But, finally the drive was halted, aand Tech was forced to try a drop-kick with Ivan Williams out of the game. It failed, but Tech got a good break that gave her an opportunity to score. On the next play, Tech made a break which evened up the bequeaths of fortune for the afternoon.

The feature of the game was the punting. Both Wycoff and Ryan got off some remarkable boots, three out of four being registered for a total of 70 yards or better. And Wycoff was punting in the face of several Vandy players every time. He was unnecessarily rushed.

Wycoff Practically Unaided.

Wycoff failed to go yesterday for one, and only one reason. The men in front of him gave him no protection. On punts, as mentioned before, the line did not hold long enough. On line bucks, he was forced to ram through a solid mass of men. On end runs he invariably had to reckon with the end before he could cross the line of scrimmage. Yet in face of all this disheartening opposition, he made some very creditable gains.

Gil Reese gave Vandy her opportunity to score. Outside of that he was not spectacular. Running from scrimmage he lost more ground than he gained. Returning punts, he was always a dangerout threat.

Bip Farnsworth was the boy yesterday. Bip is small, but he can do one thing well. If there is the least little crack in the line of scrimmage, Bip can slide through. He is a quick [illegible] find a hole through [illegible] he can receive.

TIGERS EARN VICTORY LATE

Columbia, S. C., November 15.—Raging up and down the field for three quarters like a prairie fire between two alternating winds, Sewanee and Carolina were unable to break the deadlock of a scoreless game until the last few minutes of play when the Tigers scored a touchdown and field goal, defeating the Gamecocks here today, 10 to 0.

Twice in the fourth quarter, the Tennesseeans fought their way to within a few feet of Carolina's line, the first time only to meet with an impossible barrier of Gamecocks. On the second attempt, however, Mahoney, Sewanee fullback, dropkicked a field goal from the 15-yard line. After the next kick-off, a pass, Mahoney to Harris, placed the latter across the goal line for a touchdown, and Mahoney kicked goal for the extra point.

Notre Dame Breaks Jinx of Nebraska, 34 to 7

Severe Drubbing Given Cornhuskers to Avenge Defeats of 2 Past Years

South Bend, Ind., November 14.—(By the Associated Press.)—The four horsemen of Notre Dame, and their teammates, ran roughshod over Nebraska in their annual game on Cartier field here today, burying the Cornhuskers under a 34-to-6 score and avenging the victories Nebraska scored over Coach Rockne's warriors in 1923 and 1922. The defeat was the worst drubbing a Nebraska eleven ever received from Notre Dame in the ten years of football relations between the two universities. The contest was witnessed by a capacity crowd of 26,000 spectators, who jammed every available inch of standing room.

The famous Notre Dame backfield, consisting of Crowley, Layden, Don Miller and Stuhldreher, making up the quartette of cavalrymen swung into action late in the first period just before Nebraska crashed over with a touchdown and carrying the fight to the Nebraska territory slashed off the line for big gains and ran around the ends as they pleased, in addition to revealing a sensational forward passing attack.

Subs Start Game.

Coach Rockne followed his practice of starting a team of shock troops composed of second string players but as quickly as Nebraska pounded the ball dangerously close to Notre Dame's goal, Rockne gave the signal of eleven new players to take the field. Layden, Crowley, Miller and Stuhdreher yanked off their sweaters and raced into the game behind a complete new line. From then on the contest was one-sided, and Nebraska, although fighting doggedly, was unable to match speed with the perfect Notre Dame machine.

Notre Dame, which crushed the Army, Princeton, Georgia Tech and Wisconsin, will go through the season undefeated, with claims to the football honors of the nation, as a result of its remarkable record. Notre Dame closes its season with Carnegie Tech on Thanksgiving day, meeting Northwestern at Chicago next Saturday. The Purple eleven is not expected to furnish much opposition for the great Notre Dame machine.

VANDY BEATS JACKETS, 3 TO 0

ward pass, was tackled and fumbled, Vandy recovering in midfield.

Then followed the Commodores' one display of attack in this quarter. Reese failed at right end, but Ryan hit center for four and followed with six over the same spot. Ryan added five yards in two more plunges, but a forward pass was grounded and Ryan punted 40 yards over the Jackets' goal.

At about the middle of the final quarter Tech launched an assault that carried peril for the Commodores. Receiving the ball on her own 20-yard line, Tech started an aerial attack. A 25-yard forward pass, Wycoff to Marshall, was given to Tech on account of interference. Then Wycoff, on two line plunges, made first down, but Reese intercepted a Tech pass and was brought down on his 25-yard line.

Once more, starting from her 20-yard line, Tech put under way a desperate attack. A forward pass, tried on first down, was grounded. On the next play Wycoff rammed the line for three and a forward pass, King to Marshall, neted 25 yards and first down. When two line bucks and the same number of forward passes failed from midfield, the ball went over to Vanderbilt. The Commodores made one first down in the final quarter, this resulting from a 22-yard forward pass, McKibbon to Cargyle. Vandy was in possession of the ball near the center of the field when the whistle blew.

Right at the peak of their best playing form, the Commodores played a superb defensive game. It was typical McGugin football and it worked this time, just as it has been working in this part of the country for more than 20 years and just as it will work that many years to come if Colonel Dan sticks to the business.

You've been told time after time that the best defense was a strong offense. Perhaps it proves that way occasionally, but don't get fooled consistently by such assertions. No offense, regardless of its quality, is going to sweep merrily around such ends as Wakefield and Coles; no line plungers are going to cause a lot of damage through such forwards as Colonel Dan has dug up and trained.

Offensive Makes Defense.

A strong offense is the best defense, is it? All right, hardly a team that has played at Grant field this season failed to gain more ground in a single half than Vanderbilt did during the entire game Saturday, yet the Jackets took their second walloping from a southern foe since 1919.

Vanderbilt's losses in the first quarter equalled her gains from scrimmage. In the second she netted 15 yards and one first down. The third quarter found her gaining just 17 yards and one first down and a 24-yard forward pass in the final quarter was her only gain of note. The Commodores netted 56 yards from snap during the entire game, registering three first downs.

The Jackets registered eight first downs and netted 112 yards from snap. Tech reached her best attacking stride in the final quarter, making three first downs. Two came in the first and the same number in the second. Tech spent most of the third quarter in a punting exhibition and rolled up but one first down.

Failure to take the Vanderbilt ends out of plays is the explanation of Tech's failure to develop and sustain the assaulting power needed in defeating a team of Vanderbilt's caliber. It, too, explains why Douglas Wycoff, for the first time in his football career, failed to prove himself the outstanding ground-gainer of the struggle.

Wycoff Covered.

Other great football stars have been watched closely, but this reporter doubts if ever the attention was paid to a player as was given Wycoff yesterday. McKibbon, giant tackle, had orders to do nothing except keep his eyes peeled for the Jackets' mighty backfield hero; Coles and Wakefield had similar instructions. The rest of the Jackets were left to the tender mercies of other Commodores, but McKibbon, Coles and Wakefield were deputized to center their notice on Doug.

Well, it'll be hard for Colonel Dan to find any fault with their performance. McKibbon, backing up the line, greeted Wycoff practically every time the latter went through in his search for the open spaces. Wakefield guarded the left sector and Coles looked after the right. Wycoff simply couldn't do it. No one else could have done it; not with three of the south's greatest linesmen having nothing else to do except look out for him.

Wycoff's punting was one of the bright features of the day. He bucked the wind in the first quarter and trailed Ryan in yardage during this period, but in the third Doug's marks were splendid. The tab shows that he belted the oval twice for more than 75 yards and once for 65, Ryan's best punt traveling for 70 yards. Wycoff's average on 14 punts was more than 44 yards and Ryan's was close to 42.

Jackets Try Passes.

The Jackets, in their desperation to score in the final quarter, attempted 12 forward passes. Two connected and a total gain of more than 50 yards resulted, but one was intercepted and the rest grounded. Tech's three previous efforts with the aerial game were productive of no gains, one bringing a 15-yard loss when the passer was tackled and the others were knocked down. The Commodores completed one out of seven for a gain of 22 yards.

The game was not the type that brings out ground-gainers. If we were asked to name off-hand the player who led in territory annexed, we'd probably name Gil Reese and follow quickly with Bip Farnesworth. Reese possibly lost more ground from scrimmage than he gained, but the Vanderbilt flash was unbeatable in returning Wycoff's punts. He carted the ball 104 yards on these returns and was directly responsible for Vandy's one big chance.

Farnesworth supplied a punch for the Jackets when it was needed badly. Entering the game in the second quarter, he was the principal factor in the two first downs that were scored by the Jackets in this quarter. He continued the good work until he was replaced by Williams at the start of the final quarter.

Cliff King, at left end for the Jackets, was a tough nut for the Commodores. Cliff kept his head up and spent a very busy afternoon spilling Vanderbilt's interference, several times doing this and getting the runner, too. It was King who was responsible for most of Reese's losses on wide end runs.

GEORGIA WINS OVER TIGER, 6 TO 0

pass to Red Harkins, right tackle, for a gain of 15 yards. But the Bulldogs were too tenacious for the Tiger and Green had to punt.

More Passes.

After this initial overhead advance by the Tigers, the Bulldogs started their aerial attacks. The first completed pass, Moore to Sherlock, gave the Bulldogs 8 yards. Shortly afterwards, on a Georgia fumble, Harkins recovered and the ball went over to Auburn on its own 42-yard line. One the second play after this Moore skipped up and snagged a pass from Peterson, Auburn quarter, that wasn't meant for him, and Georgia again had the oval. Line bucks and end runs constituted the rest of the play until Georgia began the drive that provided the margin of its win.

Georgia gathered an apronful of firstdowns in the second period which started with the Bulldogs in possession of the ball on their own 37-yard line. Moore broke around right end for 8 yards, before Georgia was penalized 5 yards for offsides, and then Thomas, with 6 yards over center and Nelson, with 2 more around left end, made the first down. In the next advance Nelson ran into hard luck. Judging from his other performance he had a clear shot for 15 or 20 yards when he fell after gaining 4 yards around right end.

Moore did the punting soon afterwards and put Auburn well on the offensive by putting the ball on the Plainsmen's one-yard line. Green came out of this poorly with a 29-yard punt that went out of bounds. Starting again from Auburn's 30-yard line the Bulldogs went on another rampage with Kilpatrick knocking off 10 yards on off tackle plays and Nelson hitting the line for two, four and six yards. Harkins, who outstarred every other Auburn defensive player today, saved the the tawny hides here by recovering a Georgia fumble and giving Auburn the ball on its own 13-yard line.

Big Gains Frequent.

Big gains were frequent in the remaining minutes of the second quarter, but Georgia couldn't pass a certain place just in front of the Auburn goal line in any instance. One of the best passes of the game came right in here when Kilpatrick pitched a pass to Curran, Georgia end, that netted a total of 30 yards, 22 of which were covered when the ball was still in the air.

With the Bulldogs on their 17-yard line, the Plainsmen tightened their defense and turned back the Georgia drivers in spite of a 13-yard run by Nelson around left end. Soon after this run Moore tried his first dropkick for field goal and failed, the ball going over to Auburn on its own 20-yard line. After Green had punted out, Randall, at fullback for Georgia, went off right tackle for 17 yards. After two more plays, Kilpatrick lighted out around right end for 18 yards and took the ball to Auburn's 12-yard line.

Well within striking distance of the goal line had they been playing many other southern teams the Bulldogs met failure full in the face when Williams, Auburn back, cut in and took down a pass from the hands of Kilpatrick to run back five yards toward the Georgia goal.

All through the first part of the third quarter, the ball was well in Auburn territory, but the Plainsmen held in this period as they did at no other time in the game. The result was that Georgia experienced a decided falling off in its harvest of first downs. Once the Bulldogs worked the ball to Auburn's 30-yard line, but on an attempt to tear off a big slice of ground with a forward pass, Green reached up and snatched the ball for Auburn. But Auburn, having the ball, couldn't gain and, thanks to "Pea" Green's capable pedal extremity, could push it back into Georgia territory.

Tigers Fight Back.

After fighting the Bulldogs back every time they came up with their teeth showing, the Tigers finally in the third period started their advance down the field that had all the earmarks of a consistent and steady march to a touchdown. It started when Auburn got the ball on downs on its own 26-yard line.

Beginning the advance fullback made first down single-handed with three plays which netted four, five and one yard, respectively. On the next play Green, working a break through center on a fake triple pass as smoothly as we ever saw such a play executed, went 11 yards for another first down. He was tackled after he had gone about seven yards and literally dragged three Georgia men the remaining four, keeping his feet all the while. Auburn's third first down in succession came on a pass, Crane to Green, which netted eight yards, and a five-yard penalty against Georgia for excessive time out.

The Tiger horizon was bright when with the ball on Georgia's 40-yard line Crane shot through left guard for four yards, but hopes of the Blue and Gold fell suddenly when Turner fumbled in the backfield and Joselove, Georgia guard, reached out from under a pile of writhing forms to recover for the Red and Black.

The Auburn pass was still working like magic in the last quarter. One shot over line of scrimmage from Crane to Williams, netting 18 yards. The job was too big for the Auburnites, however, and Georgia getting possession of the ball began another drive that looked like a six-year record for small scores broken.

Play in Tiger Territory.

All the play in the last quarter was in Auburn territory and Georgia had little trouble apparently in getting the ball to the Tiger six-yard line for a first down. This drive started after Curran, Georgia end, recovered an Auburn fumble on the Plainsmen's 17-yard line.

So close they could almost reach out and touch the Auburn goal posts, however, the Georgians were stopped dead in their tracks. Here a five-yard penalty for off-sides against Georgia played tie dickens with Georgia's touchdown chances. Moore made his final effort to score with a dropkick, but failed.

After this Auburn got the ball toward the center of the field with a pass, Harrison to Green, that brought 14 yards.

Auburn's efforts here, though, like in all the previous play, were vain for when Georgia got the ball the Bulldogs ran it squarely back into Plainsmen territory, with Nelson leading in the attack with one yard gain through right guard and a 15-yard cut around right end. The game ended with Georgia in possession of the ball on Auburn's 20-yard line.

Hopelessly Cooped.

Fats Lawrence, captain of the Auburn Tigers, and Red Harkins, tackle, had a day all to themselves on defensive play for the Pitts aggregation. On the other side every Georgia man was starring on the defense, so that Auburn was hopelessly cooped up on the advancing business. Another factor in keeping the Georgia score as low as it was was Pea Green's punting. He averaged about 45 yards from the line of scrimmage, a record which stacks up with the best work done this season in the conference.

Today's victory for Georgia is one more step for the Athens outfit toward evening the score of 29 years' playing that is now heavy on the Auburn side.

Rejuvenated Minnesota Team Gives Dope Bucket Tumble in Stopping Ill.

Minneapolis, November 15.—(By The Associated Press.)—Minnesota stopped "Red" Grange today and Illinois' Big Ten conference championship aspirations went tumbling as a rejuvenated Gopher eleven pounded its way to a 20 to 7 victory over Zuppke's men.

Out of the realm of improbability and rated even more remote by many the Gophers snatched a victory through the brilliant attack of a backfield whose pace was set by Clarence Schutte, left half, and an all-around defense that was superb. Only in the first period did things look dark for Minnesota, for in that session the much feared Grange made a ten-yard dash around his left end for Illinois' only touchdown. (After that he was only a menace that did not materialize.

Near the close of the third period, an injury when he was tackled forced Grange out of the game, but long before that Minnesota had established its superiority by two touchdowns in the second period and another in the third, and in the final period the Gopher threatened.

New Team Wins.

In every department it was a new Gopher team that brought about the downfall of Grange and the Illini, and the 30,000 Maroon and Gold rooters went frantic with joy as their cohorts fought the Zuppke men off their feet. Even at the end of the first half, however, with Minnesota leading, 14 to 7, there seemed a feeling of insecurity among the Gopher followers, for they remembered Illinois' comeback at Chicago a week ago. But when the third period was well under way the Gophers had definitely marked themselves superior.

In the net result, aside from his touchdown, Grange was not much help, for while he advanced the ball from scrimmage a total of 24 yards, he was thrown for losses totaling 23 yards. His best run was a 25-yard return of an intercepted forward pass.

It was the terrific punch of the Minnesota line that repeatedly stopped the Illini attempts either in line plunging or end running, for time and again a forward broke through to stop an Illinois play almost before it could get started.

Victory Earned.

In results as measured in yardage gained from scrimmage and in first downs, the Gophers' superiority is shown, for Minnesota gained 351 yards from scrimmage and lost 16, while Illinois gained 102 yards and lost 32. On first downs, the Gophers led with 15 from scrimmage on straight plays and one on an Illinois penalty, while Illinois made three in carrying the ball, two on forward passes and one by a Gopher penalty.

In forward passing, Illinois tried 16, completing six for a total gain of 83 yards, Minnesota intercepted three and the others were incomplete. Minnesota tried seven passes, six were incomplete and Grange intercepted the other.

Tribute to the Gopher team, particularly the line, was paid Coach Bob Zuppke, of the Illini, before he left for Urbana tonight, declaring the Minnesota line "out played Illinois just like Chicago did" and "that accounted in a large way for Minnesota's went to points."

"Minnesota won the game on its merits," Zuppke said, "and that's all there is to it. The margin of superiority was represented by the difference in lines. Schutte and Graham played a remarkable game of football."

Grange Injured.

Harold "Red" Grange, the Illinois backfield star, suffered injuries in today's game with Minnesota that probably will disable him for the rest of this season, attending physicians said tonight.

Tackled for a 10-yard loss late in the third period, Grange's shoulder ligaments were strained, an X-ray examination tonight showed, and physicians said the injury "almost certainly" will keep him out of any future game this season.

Physicians at the University of Minnesota health service tightly taped up Grange's right arm, and he departed for Urbana at 7 p. m., with his teammates. Grange was quick to resent any intimation that unnecessary roughness on the part of the Gophers caused the mishap.

"I am unaware of any dirty playing on the part of any Minnesota player," Grange said. "It's all in the game and should be looked at in that light."

The injury was the culmination of a bad day for the Illinois star, for Minnesota terminated his brilliant record of the season by nullifying virtually all his attempts in carrying the ball.

GENERALS BOW TO W. VIRGINIA

Charleston, W. Va., November 15. West Virginia university downed her ancient rival, Washington and Lee, by a 6 to 0 score here today in a game whose dramatic climax conformed to the standards of the best known football fiction when Paul Stinebicker, faithful substitute on the Mountaineers squad during the past four years, was sent into the game in the last few minutes of play and scored the lone tally of the contest.

Stinebicker was not the only hero of the game, however. Both Nardacci and Ekberg made consistent gains, and twice placed the ball in position to cross the Virginians' goal line.

Early in the second period, prospects for the Generals brightened when McMillan intercepted one of Farley's forward passes and Thomas recovered a ball that Bruder had dropped after a punt, but the offense was short-lived and came to an end in an exchange of punts.

ALL-EMORY GRID TEAM SELECTED

The 1924 all-Emory football team has been announced by the executive committee of the athletic council, which is composed of the seven faculty members who were game officials during this season, and is as follows:

Player	Position	Team
Stockman	l.e.	Freshman
Craige	l.t.	Freshman
Woods	l.g.	Freshman
Kronstadt	c.	Lawyer-Senior
Bullock	r.g.	Junior
Pound	r.t.	Junior

Crawford	l.h.	Sophomore
Langford	r.h.	Freshman
Stovall	f.b.	Junior
Duncan	Util.	Theology
Pilgrim	Util.	Sophomore
Holt	Util.	Sophomore
Pollard	Util.	Sophomore

These men, along with Charlie Johnson, university manager, will be awarded letters. Johnson and his assistants have managed all the games and conducted the season in a splendid manner, and are in a large measure responsible for its big success.

MUSTANGS TIE BAYLOR, 7 TO 7

Dallas, Texas, November 15.—Baylor and Southern Methodist University remained undefeated in the southwestern conference football game today. The final score was S. M. U. 7; Baylor 7. The Mustangs started the scoring in the first period with a touchdown and goal kicked. Baylor tied down and goal kicked. Baylor tied the score early in the second period by making a touchdown and kicking goal. The third and fourth periods were much the same, each side resorting to line plunges, passes and punting, but the only result was that the ball was carried back and forth across the field.

PAPER CHASE IS ON TODAY

A paper chase will be staged by the Ponce de Leon Riding academy at 9 o'clock this morning. Participants will meet at the academy's stables at Spiller's park, where the chase will begin. Atlanta horsemen are invited to participate in this event and a limited number of gaited mounts are available at a nominal charge. No charges are made where rider furnishes his own mount. Reservations can be secured by communicating with Mr. Kirkland at Hemlock 3260.

This chase is the second of a series staged by the Ponce de Leon Riding academy for the purpose of acquainting both horse and rider with the ground over which the fox hunt will lead on Thanksgiving morning. In view of the interest shown in mounted sports the academy plans to stage various events throughout the winter.

Harvard Play That Beat Penn State Supreme

Sub Fullback Paved Way For Win

This is the seventh of a series of narratives describing great football strategies told by the leading coaches of the country in interviews with J. P. Glass and George Byrnes. Other numbers will include stories by Warner, Haughton, Bo McMillan and Yost. (Copyright, 1924, in United States and Canada and Great Britain by North American Newspaper Alliance. All Rights Reserved.)

BY ROBERT T. FISHER.
Head Coach, Harvard University.

This story concerns a quarterback's brilliant execution of a decisive strategy in the crisis of a sensational gridiron battle; but more than this it is a record of the dogged determination of a youth to reach a certain objective—and how he made good.

Also it tells how another lad by quick thinking and general alertness overcame a handicap which might have daunted a less ambitious person, made himself an asset to his team and finally was able to take a leading part in a play that was one of the thrillers of the season.

The accomplishments of these players should be an inspiration to every man who loves football, and should point a moral for every boy who aspires to play it. What they did seems more important to me than the above-mentioned strategy, although the latter will be remembered a long time by those who witnessed it.

Thrilling Struggle.

Although the Harvard-Penn State game in the stadium at Cambridge October 22, 1922, lacked the historical and sentimental importance of the annual struggles with Yale and Princeton, it was fully as thrilling a battle as any ever waged between these old-time rivals. In its closing stages it developed a tensity that was nerve-wrecking.

Picture the dusk of a late autumn day deepening into a darkness which the high rims of the stadium, shutting out the sunlight, thickened and increased; fancy some 38,000 Crimson followers plunged into a mental and spiritual gloom of even greater density, when contrasted with the joyous frenzy of a comparative handful of Penn State adherents; spread over the curving sides of the amphitheater the flare of innumerable burning newspapers, transformed into torches so that the maneuvers of the athletes might more clearly be seen; consider that Penn led Harvard by a score of 21 to 14 and the fourth quarter was passing quickly—do this and you have the setting for a rally which made football history and brought the high-pitched throng to its feet in a frenzy of emotion.

We had anticipated that when Hugo Bezdek brought his eleven to Cambridge we would have a fight on our hands. The former Chicago fullback had constructed a really strong machine and in Killinger and Lightner he possessed two consistent ground-gainers. In four games, Penn State had run up a total of 148 points to its opponents seven.

Harvard Leads at Start.

Although we had won all of our previous five games, we had managed to score only 58 points, meanwhile yielding seven points to our opposition. We had a good rushing attack which enabled us to take the ball down the field to a scoring position, but too often we then would fail to get it over the line.

Prior to the Penn State game we had a long list of injured players, but against Bezdek's aggregation we marshaled a first-string line-up, though only by calling upon men who really should not have been in the game. The regular backfield, consisting of Buell, at quarterback; Fitts, at left halfback; Chapin, at right halfback, and Owen, at fullback, started the game. But all of these men save Buell, were in a crippled condition. It was only because there were even worse injured among the reserved that they played.

At the start Harvard gained a distinct advantage. The Crimson cripples performed beautifully and in the first period after a long run by Owen, we made a march of 48 yards on line smashes and end runs that put us over the line for a touchdown. Goal after touchdown made the score 7 to 0 in our favor. We continued our drive in the second quarter, increasing our total of points to 14.

Penn State Fights.

With their backs to the wall, the Quakers suddenly showed wonderful aggressive power. Using their famous close formation they made a touchdown and goal after touchdown in the closing stages of the first half. In the third period, by further furious attacks, they scored two more touchdowns and ran their total of points to 21, while stopping us completely.

In the meantime, our first-string backfield had slowly dissolved until only Quarterback Buell was left in action. Owens had been compelled to retire, Gratwick taking his place at full. Chapin yielded to the light Churchill at right half. Hovey supplanted Fitts at left half.

But this was not the end of our bad luck. Hovey became a casualty and, with no more running backs to put in, we had to fill his place with Johnson, a substitute quarterback. Gratwick, who had taken up Owen's task at full, in turn had to give way to Gehrke.

The climax was reached when Gerhke succumbed. Our reserves of backfield men had been exhausted.

Coburn Fills the Gap.

At this juncture I recalled that Phil Coburn, a substitute guard, had been ambitious to play a backfield position and also possessed some experience behind the line. He told me that he knew the signals well.

"I've been practicing them every night," he said.

He was our only hope and I sent him in at fullback. A few minutes later Crimson enthusiasts were cheering a new gridiron star. Coburn had no sooner taken Gehrke's place than he proceeded to prove his qualifications for the assignment.

In a series of line smashes he made repeated gains. These, mixed with a forward pass, enabled us to carry the ball close to the Penn State goal line. Then Buell, our quarter, engineered the best strategy of the game. Faking a drop-kick, he threw a forward pass to Churchill, substituting at right half. He caught the Quakers completely by surprise. Churchill darted for the goal line, but, with the speedy Penn backs, Killinger and Lightner, rallying to the pursuit, he was overhauled while he still had three yards to go.

Learned Rest Later.

When Phil Coburn told me that he knew all our signals and knew them well, he had only given me part of his story. I learned the rest of it later.

Coburn never had relished his assignment as a guard. However, having what seemed a plentitude of backfield material, we could find no other place to use him than in the line. Even there we could only give him a substitute position.

But he was the type of player who wants to be in the thickest of the fray. Almost six feet tall and weighing 190 pounds, he wished to test his strength against the most powerful of Harvard's opponents from a point where he might carry the ball. And, although disappointed, he didn't give up. Some day, he felt, he was going to be needed in the backfield. He decided he was going to be ready for that day.

So, in practice and during each game, he gave close attention to all signals and all formations. But more than that, he devoted a solid portion of his spare hours to absorbing them.

Uses Chairs in Practice.

In the privacy of his room, with a quarterback to aid him, and using two chairs to represent the other backfield men, he regularly ran through the signals. He not only fitted himself to play fullback, but both of the halfback positions.

And that was why, when the Crimson was in distress, he was able to come to its aid. All boys who want to play football should be able to get a good lesson from the incident. It requires no explanation.

Before Coburn's advent Penn State rooters, wild with joy, considered the game won. And the Quakers' close formations, with the backs drawn up to the line of scrimmage and with all plays starting on a quick shift to left or right, had been extremely effective. They uncorked a big variety of plays, including straight formations but strongly featuring double passes and delayed passes. Seventeen plays, coverig 70 yards after a kick-off, produced the first Quaker score. A straight 94-yard journey down the field after receiving a punt on the 6-yard line brought the second. The third came on a drive from the center of the field to our 40-yard line, a forward pass to our 8-yard line and some powerful line smashes.

Team Takes New Life.

But with Coburn's appearance in the Harvard backfield things began to hum. The whole team soon became infected with a new vigor. It seemed again the machine which had accumulated fourteen points in the earlier parts of the struggle. Johnson, the quarterback, who had gone to left half, raised Crimson hopes immensely midway of the last quarter by catching a punt on Harvard's 40-yard line and brilliantly running the ball back 25 yards. Buell now used Coburn in a series of charges through the Penn State line which they could not stop. Next the Crimson quarters whipped over a pass to Johnson which gave us first down on Penn's 20-yard line. However, here two plays gained but five yards.

The decisive moment of the battle had arrived. Having gotten within fifteen yards of the enemy's goal, Harvard must score or accept defeat. To lose the ball to the Quakers with the end so near meant the death of its hopes.

Calls Kick Formation.

On the next play Buell called for a drop kick formation. It was a fake, designed to screen a forward pass.

This lineup served to draw Penn State's attention toward the right side of our formation. The effect was heightened when Buell, receiving the ball, posed as though to kick. The Quakers' left end and tackle, as well as their defensive backs, were drawn out of position.

When the ball was put in play Churchill paused a moment as though participating in a drop kick and then ran to the left, passing to the rear of Hufford, the Penn State right end, as the latter charged in toward Buell, who was protected by Johnson. He then veered slightly to his right and in a rather wide run dashed toward the left corner of the field, a maneuver which Buell's pose allowed him to nearly complete before the Quaker safety men tumbled to what was going on. At the right moment, as Churchill neared the Penn State five-yard line, the Crimson quarter straightened up and threw the ball.

Pass Offered Hazard.

The pass to little Winnie Churchill offered one hazard. That player suffered from a slightly defective vision—was, in fact, nearsighted. Would he be able to detect the ball in the thick dusk?

All season Churchill, by nimble wits and accurate gauging, had placed himself in position to capture such passes as came his way. This time, again overcoming his handicap, he made good. Receiving the ball on the four-yard line, he turned for a dash to a touchdown.

But Quarterback Killinger and Right Half Lightner, the Quaker stars forming the last line of defense, had been caught off their balance for a moment only. Running with the ball, they caught up with Churchill at the three-yard line and threw themselves on him as he charged forward. Fortunately their attack was launched from the rear. All three went down, but the Crimson player shook himself loose and rolled over the goal line. A minute later and a goal after touchdown tied the score.

In the remaining period of play Penn State made desperate efforts to come back. But it was here that Coburn showed his real value. He put up a defensive game worth going miles to see. Indeed then, as later, he proved to be one of the best defensive fullbacks I ever saw. We didn't beat the Quakers, but, under the circumstances, escaping defeat was as good as a victory.

Thereafter Coburn was a first-string man. He played in both the succeeding Princeton and Yale games and was a regular throughout 1923.

If you're trying for a place on a team, boys, and the position you'd like to play is given to someone else, don't give up. Fill whatever assignment is awarded you and fill it cheerfully. But keep on preparing yourself for the task you wish to do. Eventually your chance will come.

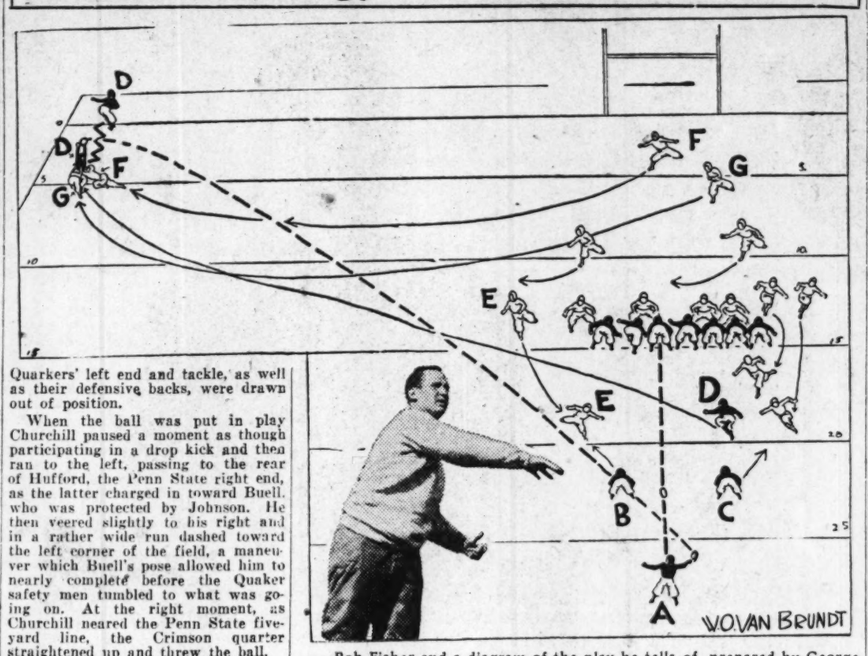

LONG A FIGURE ON HARVARD GRID

Ever since he started to play football for Harvard in 1909 Bob Fisher has taken a prominent part in Crimson gridiron history.

Fisher played three years in the Harvard line, establishing a great reputation and ending up in 1911 as captain of the eleven. From 1912 until 1916 he was assistant coach. After the world war, in 1919, he became head coach, succeeding Percy D. Haughton, who had sought other fields. He is still on the job.

His knowledge of line play and formations is profound.

Crimson Strategy Which Beat Penn State

Bob Fisher and a diagram of the play he tells of, prepared by George Byrnes, of the Colgate football department.

Strib Fights Thanksgiving Big Day in Career of Fay

Harry Fay, that ambitious Louisville boxer, who aspires to a world light heavyweight championship, is staking everything he hopes to be on one fight. That fight comes off Thanksgiving night at the city auditorium when he meets Young Stribling.

Two weeks before Fay was signed, on a big percentage plan to meet Stribling here Thanksgiving night, he worked himself into a match early in December with Mike McTigue, the wary Irishman who holds the title. Fay's boasts of his ability to beat Stribling and cries of "Get Stribling in a ring with me," were so insistent, however, that he could hardly afford to turn down the Stribling bout.

Mike McTigue is nobody's fool. He has a slim hold on his title. But for the knockout law of New Jersey, Stribling would be holding it, for Stribling beat Mickey decisively in Newark last spring. Mike, learning of Fay's bout with Stribling prior to his engagement, has informed Fay that if he is whipped in the fight here, there's no use going ahead with the December bout.

Pointing For Stribling.

If Fay were never primed to win a fight, he ought to be pointing for Stribling.

First indications of interest in the Stribling-Fay encounter are that every seat will be sold in advance. The prices have been held down to $1, $2, and $3, with the last named price for ringside seats. Special sections will be reserved for boys from the University school, where Stribling is a student, and other institutions of that kind in this part of the state.

The fight Thanksgiving night will mark Stribling's first appearance before local fight crowd in six months. His last fight in this neighborhood was on July 4 in Macon. Atlantans have had no opportunity at all to see him in action since then, for his most recent battle was last week in Greenville, S. C., when he knocked out tough old Fay Keiser, of New York, in the fourth round.

Tickets Scattered.

Plans are being made now to put tickets for the Thanksgiving fight on sale in several towns throughout Georgia where Stribling is a big favorite. The One-Minute Lunch room will be the agency in Macon. In Atlanta all tickets are to be sold at Jake's place in the Kimball house lobby. Mail orders should be addressed to Holt Gewinner, matchmaker for the American Legion, in the Kimball house. Tickets will go on sale Monday morning.

Fay is probably the most logical opponent the south can put up for Stribling, who holds the light heavyweight championship of Dixie. There are only three real contenders for the southern title. They are Stribling, Fay and Young Marullo, of New Orleans. Marullo has been whipped three different times by Stribling, and Fay put it over him once. That leaves Fay and Stribling.

IOWA TAKES ON NEW LIFE

Iowa City, Iowa, November 12.—(Special.)—The University of Iowa is still a contender for the western conference football title. That much is certain following the startling upsets which featured the games of last Saturday when the unbeaten teams of Illinois and Chicago fought to a tie and when the unbeaten Ohio State eleven was forced into the ranks of the defeated by Indiana.

Iowa's football men realize that the conference race may yet end in a hopeless tie if Illinois and Chicago are upset in their remaining games. So preparations for the Wisconsin game are going forward with additional vigor in the Hawkeye camp. The team will leave for the Badger's stronghold on Thursday night.

There is little optimism in Iowa City this week, although there is a great deal of hoping for the Hawkeye eleven played ragged football to nose out Butler, 7 to 0. If Griffen, giant center, is able to take the field against the Badgers and if the substitute guards develop more this week, the Hawkeyes will be greatly strengthened.

A search of the records reveals the fact that Iowa has never beaten the Badgers on the gridiron. Only six games have been played, the first in 1894 and the last in 1917. The results are as follows:

1894—Iowa, 0; Wisconsin, 44.
1901—Iowa, 4; Wisconsin, 18.
1907—Iowa, 5; Wisconsin, 6.
1911—Iowa, 0; Wisconsin, 12.
1912—Iowa, 10; Wisconsin, 28.

The Umpire
By H. G. Salsinger

THERE has been a great deal said recently on the subject of throwing ball games. Court proceedings have returned to the public prints the Chicago White Sox scandal of 1919 and there is also the incident of the present year where two members of the New York Giants were read out of baseball on the charge of having tried to bribe a Philadelphia shortstop to throw a game for $500.

With this prolific discussion of crookedness there has been no attempt to consider the possibilities of crookedness. Take the exposure of last September. O'Connell, a New York utility player, is charged with having offered Sand, the Philadelphia shortstop, $500 to throw a game to the Giants. Dolan, coach of the Giants, is charged with having told O'Connell to make the offer.

Now, this attempt at bribery appears ridiculous upon the evidence published. How many games have you seen in your life that a shortstop alone could throw? As the game was played, Sand could not have thrown it no matter how hard he might have tried. There are probably not more than ten games a season that the shortstop can throw without assistance and it is a million to one bet that you cannot tell beforehand what particular games in a season's schedule the shortstop will be able to throw.

THERE have undoubtedly been crooked ball games that the public know nothing about. There have been crooked fights, horse races, wrestling matches. Crookedness has crept into every sport in some degree at some time. As long as some men are crooked you are bound to discover dishonest fellows among the honest in every line. But to put over a crooked scheme in sport where as many as nine men play on each side and where no one can have any knowledge of what the play will be, is an extremely difficult job.

The only thorough job of fixing in baseball, as far as is publicly known, was the world series of 1919. In that series the Chicago first baseman, shortstop, third baseman, left and centerfielders and a few pitchers were included in the plans. Six out of nine players on the field were fixed, except when one of the pitchers who remained honest happened to be working.

The men that fixed the series controlled every strategic position. No matter how the play goes in any game where you have the first baseman, shortstop, third baseman, left and centerfielders and pitcher fixed, one of them is certain to get a chance to throw the game. They will get most of the fielding chances. The pitcher can either work the grooves or be wild. And no team will get far on attack when six out of nine men are not getting on the bases. The fixers played it safe.

IT IS next to impossible for a man who is honest to throw a ball game. No matter what the reward is, no matter how hard he tries, he will find it practically impossible.

Ball players field mechanically. They do the right thing automatically. They have been doing that thing for years. It is a set habit with them. If a player was fixed and the play arrived where he had the chance to throw the game, he would make the right play no matter how hard he tried to fumble or throw the ball away.

It all settles down to a question of the influence of the body upon the mind. One of our intellectual leaders recently pointed out that the mind is simply a function of the body. He attempted to prove his point by pointing out the effect of drugs. If you put drugs into the body the operations of the mind are affected, but you cannot make the mind alter the effects of the drugs on the body. A man with ten grains of strychnine in his body will die, no matter hoy violently his mind protests against it.

No matter how much the mind wanted to make the wrong play at the psychological moment, the ball player would be unable to make the body follow the dictates of the mind since the body has been trained for years to make the right play.

SOME years ago one of the entertainers on the minor county fair circuits was a man who had a knife-throwing act. He traveled in a wagon with his wife and a confederate. Several times each day, during the fair season, the confederate stood against a board and the performer took up a position thirty feet in front of him. He would throw knife after knife until the entire body of the confederate was surrounded by them. Head, outstretched arms, torso and legs were framed by sharp steel knives.

One day the performer began to suspect that his wife and the confederate were secret lovers. He succeeded in getting positive proof that they were. Then he planned his revenge. During the off-season he rented a barn near his home and in this barn he set up his board and drew the outline of a man corresponding in size with his confederate. On the left side he also painted a heart. Day after day he practiced with his knives. He started at the right side, framed it with knives and continued until he had framed the left side of the head and the left arm. Then, instead of starting down the left side of the body, he hurled the knife into the red heart.

FOR years the man had been throwing these knives. He had been mechanically perfect all this time and he labored all winter practicing one slip. He would have his revenge when the county fair season opened.

In the summer the man and his wife and the confederate started out again. Came their first performance. The confederate stood himself against the board as he had always done. The knife thrower took his position thirty feet in front of him as he had always done. The knives began imbedding themselves in the wood. The man's right side was framed by knives, then the head, then the left arm and—. The performer paused a moment to make sure. He pulled back his arm. He let go. The knife struck. But it did not strike the heart; it struck the wood and imbedded itself half an inch from his betrayer as it always had.

A ball player who has done a certain thing in a certain way year in and year out, will find it impossible to do it differently no matter how hard he may try.

Loose Handling of Ball Provides Margin of Win In Numerous Big Games

BY WALTER CAMP.
(Special Correspondent of The Constitution.)
(Copyright, 1924.)

New York, November 15.—There are two features that stand out in the football season of 1924, with an emphasis which is beginning to attract a great deal of attention and cause all sorts of discussion.

The first and primary one is fumbling. There has always been fumbling in football, but never have there been so many important games where this has proven a factor in the victory or defeat, and never have so many good men seemed to have off days at the time of Saturday contests which mean so much to them.

It began back in the Princeton-Lehigh game where either side, had it been able to eliminate a few fumbles, while the other side continued its juggling work, could have won the game. Fumbling was marked in the Penn State-Navy game. Fumbling led to the upset of Columbia in her game against Cornell, for it led directly to Cornell's touchdown in the second period, and this fumble by one of Columbia's best men seemed to upset the morals of the team. The Penn-LaFayette game was another instance where a fumble by one of Lafayette's most reliable men in the third period undoubtedly cost them the game.

Probably one of the most notable cases of all was the Syracuse-Pittsburg game. It began by a Pitt fumble, giving Syracuse her first score, and later in the game a fumble by Syracuse led to Pittsburg's score. Any coach in his big games that are to follow can make up his mind that if the two teams are faily equally matched, and he can by any amount of instruction, by putting resin on the hands of his players, by insisting that the order of the day is, first catch the ball, and, second, run with it, can fairly safely count upon having the preponderance in his favor, and probably winning his game if the other coach has not succeeded in eradicating from his team as well the fumbling and muffing habit.

Inconsistent Kicking.

The other point which has attracted the attention of everyone is the variableness and inconsistency of the kicking, both punting and field goal kicking. There have been several games which the writer has witnessed, where men with good reputations as kickers, and that reputation based upon past work, have fallen down miserably. True, it is a difficult thing for any punter to be consistent in a big wind, but most of these games have been played in very nearly a dead calm, and still the kicking has been quite unsatisfactory.

The worst feature of it is that the kickers vary anywhere from a slashed kick going about 20 yards up the field and out of bounds, to a really long and creditable punt traveling 50 yards. This is mighty hard on the ends and other line men, who are supposed to go down the field under punts, and yet these men have stood their punishment well, but some of them have become haggard-eyed in the attempt.

In the Yale-West Point game, both the West Point and the Yale punters, the former one of the most consistent high and distant kickers the writer has seen in the last two or three years, and the latter, who for the last two games had seemed to be master of the high, fairly long punt, both had occasional lapses that might easily have cost their side the game. In two or three cases the ball took a lucky bound on a short kick and rolled so that the team was not put in a serious defensive position by the short punt, but no one can tell which way a ball of this kind is going to bound, and usually it is more likely to bound backward than forward.

Even Garbisch Off.

The same was true in this game as to attempts at field goals. Even the great Garbisch, who made one of the most magnificent field goals a few years ago, against the navy, at Franklyn Field, with a cross wind blowing to the force of a gale, seemed unable to get the ball up when kicking at the Yale goal, and the Yale kicker experienced the same difficulties. True Garbisch converted the try-for-point after touch down. And yet the day was perfect, no wind, and a nice dry field.

It is going to be well worth while for the coaches to work on this fumbling and kicking proposition, for it will certainly bulk large in the later games if the faults are not corrected. No team is safe if its backfield man is muffing punts. No team can be secure if its punter sends even one out of five only 20 yards! Any one of these things may defeat a team that can gain ten yards to the opponents one, such errors turn the tide suddenly and disastrously.

Candler Represents State In Memorial Association

Walter T. Candler, of Atlanta, a leader in the light harness sport in the south and a driver of prominence in grand circuit meetings during 1924, has been named as Georgia representative in the Geers' Memorial Fund organization, which has as its purpose the acceptance of contributions for the erection of a lasting national monument to Edward F. (Pop) Geers, who died recently of injuries from being thrown from his sulky.

Announcement of Mr. Candler's appointment was made yesterday by Charles Tanner, of Cleveland, Ohio, chairman of the Geers' Memorial Fund organization.

Cooperation Assured.

Appointment of Mr. Candler as representative for the fund in Georgia promises to get all southern horsemen back of the movement to commemorate the life of the premier light harness driver of the century. It was suitable that Mr. Candler should be appointed in view of his close friendship with Pop Geers before the latter's death.

Plans for the erection of a Geers monument were made just after "the grand old man's" death at a mass meeting of breeders, owners and trainers assembled in Lexington, Ky., during the fall trotting meet there.

Other Southerners Named.

Other southerners besides Mr. Candler who are actively identified with the movement as directors are W. F. Garth, Huntsville, Ala.; John Trotwood Moore, Nashville, Tenn., and Shelby T. Harbison, Lexington.

Horsemen probably are not the only ones in the south who will contribute generously to the Geers' Memorial Fund, for Pop Geers was known well throughout the south by those outside the sport. This was especially true in Atlanta, where he had scores of friends who had no especial interest in light harness racing.

WARRENTON HI DEFEATED BY LOUISVILLE

Louisville, Ga., November 12.—(Special.)—The Louisville academy football team defeated the high school team from Warrenton Tuesday afternoon by a score of 12 to 0. This was the second game this season between these two teams, the first resulting in a tie of 7 to 7 on October 10.

The work of Cheatham and Estroff in the backfield was spectacular for Louisville, while the whole line held well. The first touchdown was by Robinson, regular tackle, who was pulled out of the line to carry the ball. The second was by Murphy, who made a beautiful short off-tackle run.

The work of Brantley and Steine was outstanding for Warrenton.

Louisville has two more games on her schedule for this season, Thomson, in Louisville, Friday afternoon, and Swainsboro in Louisville, Friday, November 21. The Louisville team has won half her games this season.

The lineup for Tuesday's game:

Lineup and Summary.

L. A. (7).	Pos.	WAR. (7)

Substitutes: Louisville, Jones for Cheatham, Clark for Scruggs, Mays for Clark (Jimmie), Wasden for Powers and Bowling for Murphy; Warrenton, Wilboute for Gunn. Officials: Hardeman (Georgia), referee; Yearns (Ohio State), timekeeper; Rivers (Georgia), head linesman. Time of quarters, 12 minutes.

WASHINGTON HI WINS HARD GAME

Washington, Ga., November 15.—(Special.)—Washington High defeated the strong Greensboro High here Friday by a score of 13 to 7. Washington made 20 first downs, with 297 yards total gains, and Greensboro eight, with 164 yards total. Nash, Lunceford, Jackson and Walton were the best for the winners, while Hollis was a tower of strength for Greensboro.

DARTMOUTH WINS FROM CORNELL

New York, November 15.—(Special.)—The Big Green team from Dartmouth won a 27 to 14 victory over Gil Dobie's Cornell eleven in a game featured by many passes on the part of Dartmouth.

A beautiful run of 35 yards by Erlander featured the first period of play.

KANSAS BEATS OKLAHOMA, 20-0

Lawrence, Kan., November 15.—Showing powerful driving ability for the first time this season, Kansas defeated Oklahoma, 20 to 0, in their annual football battle this afternoon. Nearly all the game was played in Oklahoma territory. The Oklahomans showed flashes of power, opening up an effective passing game at times but could not sustain their attacks long enough to score. The Kansas scoring began in the first quarter when Hodges, Jayhawk quarterback, raced five yards to the goal line after receiving a seven-yard pass from Zuber, Burt kicked goal.

In the second period Burt made a touchdown with a one-yard plunge over the line. Baker's kick for added point was blocked. Burt scored again in the third quarter when he took a short pass from Zuber and crossed the line and gicked goal for the added point. The final period was scoreless, the Oklahomans vainly trying to win across the Kansas goal line by aerial attacks, which were broken up near the Kansas goal.

A. C. MILLER AND COMPANY MOVE INTO SOUTH'S LARGEST BODY-BUILDING AND AUTO PAINT PLANT

55,000 SQ. FEET FLOOR SPACE IN BIG NEW FACTORY

Growth Typical of Many Atlanta Firms — Steady Increase Each Year Since 1889.

NEW HOME WILL PERMIT INCREASE IN BUSINESS

Building Pronounced a Masterpiece in Design, Workmanship and Materials Throughout.

The A. C. Miller company, one of the oldest and largest truck and automobile body builders and painters in the entire south, are now in their new home on Courtland street, adjoining the site of the old Wesley Memorial hospital.

Their new factory is said to be the largest and most modern in the south and compares favorably with any in the country, except those building exclusively for automobile factories, and contains more than 55,000 square feet of floor space.

Enjoys Steady Growth.

A. C. Miller came to Atlanta nearly 40 years ago. He began work her with the John M. Smith shops, then one of the outstanding builders of fine coaches and carriages.

In 1889 Mr. Miller entered business for himself under the firm name of Singer & Miller. About 1900 the firm name was changed to Miller & Karwish, and in 1908 changed to its present style.

Several years ago A. C. Miller, Jr., and Pat Miller, both his sons, were taken into the business as full-fledged partners. The business has never been incorporated, it being operated today as a partnership between father and sons.

During the 35 years in which Mr. Miller has been in business, he has seen the business grow from the most modest beginning to that of the largest in the south.

Four times it has been necessary to move in order to secure ample space to conduct the business, and many more times additional space in adjoining buildings has been acquired.

Yet during all this time Mr. Miller has had his business within a stone's throw of the corners of Courtland and Gilmer streets. Each move has been to bigger quarters, and almost each year has seen an increase in the volume of business handled.

Beginning with buggy, carriage and wagon repairing, painting and building, the business has gradually made the transition to automobiles, just as the mode of personal transportation has changed.

Ready for New Growth.

During the past several years the A. C. Miller plants have built more than 6,000 truck bodies and wagons for the American Railway Express company alone. They have also handled a large volume of business for the Coca-Cola company, the Southeastern Express company, Southern Bell Telephone company and other national users of note.

In their new building they are ready for a continued growth, and are prepared to handle their business on a more efficient basis. Ample space has been provided each department which include truck body building, automobile and truck painting, blacksmith work, body and fender repairing, automobile trimming and body repairing and glass cutting and fitting.

New machinery and equipment has been installed wherever its adoption would make possible better or more efficient work.

Their new plant is said to be one of the very few in the country where a complete overhaul of a wrecked enclosed automobile body can be made without calling in the assistance of other plants.

There is a special department, and trained workmen for handling the sheet metal, woodwork, trimming, painting and glass work in such a job, all within the walls of their new home.

Home Highly Praised.

Their new home is pronounced one of the best adapted and best constructed of its kind in the country. It is of fireproof construction throughout. It was built by A. K. Adams & Co., of Atlanta, one of the best-known southern builders of heavy-type construction, and designed by Lockwood, Greene & Co. Pat Miller, manager of A. C. Miller & Co., states that they are pleased with their building in every particular and that it will serve their needs for years to come, for they have provided for future growth.

The building occupies a lot 90 by 300 feet, almost in the heart of Atlanta, and was completed on schedule time.

LOCAL CO. HANDLES MILLER STEEL WORK

The structural steel and miscellaneous iron work in A. C. Miller & Co.'s new building was fabricated and delivered to the building by the F. E. Golian company, one of the most reputable and best organized steel fabricating concerns south of the Mason and Dixon line. This company was organized in 1915 and since that time has earned for itself the most enviable reputation throughout the south. The president of the company is F. E. de Golian and the chief engineer and general manager is F. S. Gillespie. Both of these men have had broad and extensive experience in their line of work and are two of the most expert engineers in the south.

In addition to structural steel, they operate a very large ornamental iron plant, specializing in stair ways, fire escapes, rails, grilles, balconies and all classes of work which enter into the construction of buildings.

The plant is employing approximately 175 men; is located on the A. & W. P. tracks, at Oakland City, and the executive offices are located in the Atlanta Trust company building, and according to officials of the company, they can at all times give attention and delivery on any of the items they are called on to make.

RELIANCE ELEVATOR IN MILLER BUILDING

A Reliance elevator, installed by the Weekley Elevator company is one of the features of the new A. C. Miller building, of which Mr. Miller states that he is particularly pleased. This company has operated in Atlanta for a number of years under the firm name of C. K. Weekley, but has been recently incorporated.

The company repairs all kinds of elevators, furnishing also gates and enclosures, parts, lubricants, etc. Weekley inspection service is maintained on a large number of elevators in Atlanta. Emergency service is given during the busy hours of the day on commercial elevators, or during the night on hotel and hospital elevators.

An old and expert mechanical organization is one of its most valuable assets.

The company is agent for Reliance elevators manufactured by the Reliance Elevator company, of Chicago, and has made a number of installations in the city of Atlanta and elsewhere in Georgia.

SPECIAL FIRE-PROOF DOORS IN MILLER BLDG.

In a building of the importance of the Miller factory, especially one that houses such expensive merchandise as motor cars, the very highest consideration must be given to the item of fire-proofing, as this is most vulnerable with the respect to the spread of fire. The door and shaft openings, these must be carefully protected with automobile doors, that at all times protect each section of a building from fire spreading.

These automatic sliding fire doors for the Miller building were furnished by the Richmond Fireproof Door Company, through their local representative, Mr. S. R. Hewitt, 608 Walton building, and are the highest type of construction for this purpose, bearing the underwriters' inspection labels, and may be operated at will by hand without interfering with their automatic operation in case of fire, this alone makes them one of the outstanding features so necessary in the large manufacturing buildings of today.

According to Mr. Hewitt they also handle, and are prepared at all times to erect, complete, all classes of steel doors and windows; also special folding doors, and especially passenger and freight elevator doors of all classes and have all necessary accessories to make a complete installation.

100 CARLOADS CEMENT, ETC., IN MILLER BLDG.

All of the Phoenix Portland cement, sand, gravel, common brick and maple flooring on the Miller building were furnished by the V. H. Kriegshaber & Son, local dealers for these popular brands of building materials.

There were possibly a hundred carloads of these different materials used in the construction of this building, which is probably the largest of its kind in the southeast, and the deliveries of even such large quantities were made with promptness and dispatch, and this enabled the contractors to keep going full flast at all times.

V. H. Kriegshaber & Son have been established in the building material business in Atlanta for over 35 years, and in that time have built up an enviable reputation by their ability to give the contractor, on either large or small work, prompt service and the very best grades of building material. Their slogan of "Service and satisfaction to the builder in Atlanta for 35 years" has been well earned, as has been shown by the contractor on the Miller job, in placing with them the orders for the entire line of building material that they handle for this particular work.

ROLLING ELEVATOR DOORS ARE FEATURE

Geo. Dowman, who furnished and erected the large steel rolling elevator doors in the new A. C. Miller building, is one of the Atlanta pioneers in sheet metal work and steel specialists, having completed some of the largest contracts in this branch of work in the south.

"My large plant facilities and thorough understanding of this class of work enables me at all times to give prompt and efficient service to the contractors and aside from the rolling elevator doors we specialize in designing and manufacturing fire doors, hollow metal windows, solid rolled steel sash and steel buildings, this combination making us maintain and operate one of the largest plants of this kind in the south," states Mr. Dowman.

GEORGIA LUMBER USED IN MILLER BUILDING

Having to have prompt delivery and at the same time wanting the very best heavy lumber, we selected the Homer Williams company, of Thomasville, Ga., and all the long leaf yellow pine lumber entering into the construction of the new Miller building was furnished by them," states A. K. Adams, general contractor, and we are pleased to state that everything went through without a single hitch."

Mr. Williams is also furnishing the lumber for many other large construction jobs in this vicinity, among which is the American Thread company project at Dalton, Ga., and the Summerville cotton mills at Summerville, Ga., that are to be among the largest mills of their kind in this section.

SPECIAL FURNACE FOR NEW MILLER BUILDING

"One of the most important units in our new building, and one that I am very proud of, is the furnace and heating system, designed and installed by H. M. Jackson and Company, local heating contractors.

"This in common might not seem so important, but in my line of work it is absolutely necessary that we should at all times, especially in our finishing rooms, where we paint and turn out some very expensive automobile paint jobs, keep the same temperature and I am satisfied that the plant this firm has installed for us will meet with every expectation." said Pat Miller, president of the A. C. Miller Company.

The H. M. Jackson Company specializes in this line of work and according to one of its officials, their factory connection and large local staff enables them to promptly and efficiently handle a large volume of work.

LOCKWOOD, GREEN CO. BUILDING SPECIALISTS

"In selecting the Lockwood, Green & Co. as engineers for our new building, we are sure we obtained the very best possible organization for this line of work to be had," said A. C. Miller, president.

Lockwood, Green & Co. engineers are prepared at all times to give the most complete and satisfactory service on any industrial undertaking. One glance into the new Miller building will convince one of the thoroughness of their plans, work and supervision.

This company specializes in the selection of suitable sites, the designing of new buildings or remodeling of existing plants with estimates of cost, machinery layouts which provide for the proper sequence of processes of manufacturer, the generation and application of power and the specifying of all equipment necessary to the modern industrial plant.

Lockwood, Green & Co. is also prepared to design, negotiate contracts, purchase materials on behalf of their clients and supervise construction, and to render such other service as is necessary to promptly and economically complete a project. The Miller building is just one of their many recent southern contracts.

A. K. ADAMS BUILDS MANY LARGE BUILDINGS

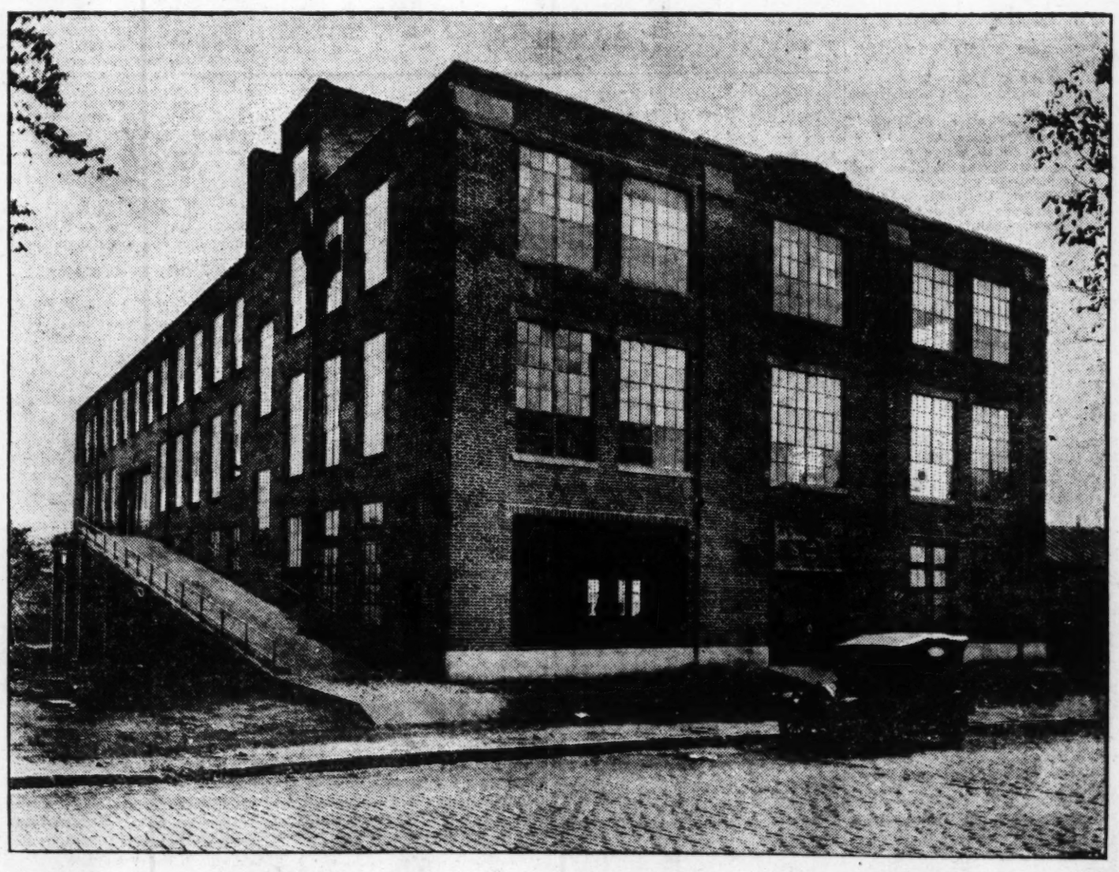

A. K. Adams & Co., the general contractors for the A. C. Miller & Co. building are recognized specialists in heavy construction and at present have under construction some of the largest contracts for mill construction in this section. They specialize in industrial buildings, reinforced concrete structures and cotton mill buildings. They have under construction at this time the New American Thread company buildings at Dalton, Ga.

Lockwood, Green & Co. engineers are recognized as leaders among the cotton mill and heavy building people of the country.

Among the recent large contracts to be completed by A. K. Adams & Co. is the Walton Cotton mills, Monroe, Ga.; Summerville Cotton mills, Summerville, Ga., and the new mill, picker building and dye house for the Canton Cotton mills, Canton, Ga. In their quarters in the Bona Allen building the affairs of the company are ably managed by A. K. Adams, president, and C. D. Crockett, vice president and treasurer.

Announcing Our New Home

115-17-19 COURTLAND ST.

It has always been our plan and practice to do it better; with this in mind before moving from our old location on Gilmer Street, we took into consideration every detail of our business, and made it a point that every department we operate would be a bigger and better one. To back up this plan we have installed in each department the very latest machinery to fit its particular needs, thus assuring our patrons absolutely the highest grade work which is so essential in our line of business.

NEW MAXWELL BY CHRYSLER READY

Harry Sommers Inc. Showing Newest Creation of Walter Chrysler and His Engineers.

A new good Maxwell, of greater power and power pliability, higher speed, more flexibility and even greater operating economy, is announced from Detroit by the Maxwell Motor Sales Corporation.

Experiments and tests reveal that outstanding features of the new models will be a gasoline average of 25 miles to the gallon, speed of 58 miles an hour and acceleration from 5 to 25 miles in eight seconds.

The new cars, comprising six models, are now on display in the showrooms of the Harry Sommers, where special showings to the public will be held all this week.

Long rumored, because of the tremendous success of the Chrysler Six, the new Maxwell represents in a four-cylinder car the ideas of the same engineering and manufacturing group that designed and is producing the Chrysler.

J. E. Fields, vice president in charge of sales of the Maxwell organization, in a statement issued in conjunction with the announcement, says:

"With a full sense of the seriousness of the statement—carefully weighinging the meaning of every word—reservation, thoroughly believe that Maxwell-Chrysler engineers, without they can promise in this new Maxwell a performance surpassing in every essential any other four-cylinder car in the world.

"To make that sweeping assurance more definite and specific, they promise in speed, power, pliability of power, in swift response, in absence of vibration, and even more particularly in riding steadiness and comfort, results no four-cylinder car has yet been able to attain.

"These engineers have been actuated by the conviction that in addition to its inherent and natural economies the four-cylinder principle possessed possibilities of power and speed capable of being translated into ease and steadiness never fully developed. They set out to overcome what have all too readily been accepted as limitations in the four-cylinder engine and to convert these limitations into positive advantages."

Bodies of all models, as well as the chassis, represent sweeping improvements, both in appearance and in general construction. They are lower, with lower running boards. Balloon tires are standard on all models. The nickeled radiator is higher and wider. There is a new instrument board. One-piece windshields are on all closed models. The visors on all enclosed cars are shrouded and integral with the roof, thus eliminating the irritating vibration always encountered at high speeds with the ordinary type visor on every priced motor car. Duco is standard finish, except for the sport touring, which retains the same gray-green paint shade as heretofore used. Open cars and the coupe are finished in genuine Spanish leather upholstery, and special leather can also be had in the Club Sedan. Appearance of the closed cars, particularly, is enhanced by new body improvements, with the standard sedan an outstanding illustration.

Coupled with the announcement comes the information that prices remain the same as before, with one exception despite the noticeable appearance, performance and economy improvements. Only the sedan price is changed, there being a slight increase in view of new body and more and finer equipment. Prices range from $895 for the roadster to $1,345 for the sedan, f. o. b. Detroit.

STATION WREO SENDS 288.3 WAVE LENGTH

Station WREO, Reo Motor Car Company, Lansing, Mich., has sent its inaugural radio program. This station with its high-powered equipment will "go on the air" at some time each day, with evening programs on Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday.

When test programs were broadcast from WREO, communications were received from 33 states assuring the men in charge that they were "coming in fine." It is believed that Lansing has a strategic geographical location for broadcasting so that even less powerful receiving sets any place in the United States will be able to tune in on the programs.

Although it is the capital of Michigan and the home of a number of large industrials, Lansing has never had a broadcasting station. It was largely with the thought of keeping the city in step with other communities that the Reo Motor company installed its outfit.

A good share of the talent on the WREO programs will be drawn from the Reo shops. The 50-piece Reo band established a number of years ago and now one of the best-known musical organizations in Michigan, will feature the program from time to time as will the orchestra, glee club and male quartet, all composed of Reo employees.

In addition there will be a program of dance music every Saturday night from 9 o'clock until 12 and an organ recital each morning from 7:30 until 8:15. Church services will be broadcast every Sunday morning, the various churches in the central part of the city alternating in furnishing this part of the weekly programs.

The broadcasting equipment and the sound-proof studio are housed in the Reo clubhouse. Behind the clubhouse, two towers raise the antenna 150 feet above the ground. Another studio separate from the soloists' room has been arranged for the band in a building some distance from the operating room. This is expected to increase the quality of results. A wave length of 288.3 meters has been assigned to WREO.

TRAIN DAMAGED AS IT HIT TRUCK SO RAILROAD SUES

Muskogee, Okla., November 16.—Claiming one of its trains was damaged to the extent of $4,500 when it struck a motor truck at a crossing near Stroud, Okla., the St. Louis-San Francisco railway today filed suit for that amount in United States district court against the owners of the truck, George Berry and Tom Hughes.

OAKLAND FIELD MEN ATTEND CONFERENCE

A. G. Millard, branch manager of Oakland, has just returned from a three-day conference of the field sales organization of the Oakland Motor Car company in the General Motors building, Detroit, Mich., November 6, 7 and 8, for the purpose of discussing new sales and merchandising plans now being inaugurated by the company.

Charles W. Matheson, vice president and director of sales, outlined a comprehensive plan to help the dealers merchandise Oakland cars and stated that the paramount concern of the company is to see that Oakland dealers make money. He told of the program of continuous improvement being carried out in the car and the exacting, close inspection given each car at the factory before it is shipped out.

The three days' sessions closed November 8 with an address by George H. Hannum, president and general manager. Mr. Hannum spoke on "Oakland Ideals," and told of the future plans of the company.

B. G. Koether, head of the sales and service division of the General Motors' advisory staff, gave a summary of what the General Motors corporation is doing to back up the General Motors units in research and standardization work and in financial help.

As a striking example of what has been done along this line, Mr. Koether pointed out that the standardization committee of the General Motors corporation had reduced the 13,000 parts used by the six General Motors vehicle divisions to 2,100 parts. He also indicated the growth in sales of General Motors cars and trucks by citing that the various units produced 246,834 cars and trucks in 1908, and that last year these same units produced 756,931 cars and trucks.

W. R. Tracy, assistant general sales manager; H. M. Robins, director of districts; W. M. Chamberlin, in charge of sales development work; A. R. Glancy, vice president and assistant general manager; Benjamin Jerome, chief engineer; Thomas Mair, comptroller; R. A. Armstrong, service manager, and Waldo E. Fellows, advertising manager, were some of the other speakers on the program.

NEW COACH PUTS BUICK AGAIN IN LIMELIGHT

The new Buick coach on display has again centered the attention of the automobile public upon Buick. This is an entirely new model and is furnished in both the Standard Six and the Master Six chassis. In Atlanta the new Buick coach can be seen at the showrooms of the Atlanta branch, Peachtree and Harris streets, and D. C. Black's showrooms at 312 Peachtree street. The Decatur Buick company also has the new Buick coach on display at their establishment on Courthouse square.

Several outstanding features in connection with the Buick coach immediately impress themselves upon the beholder. First of all, the bodies are Fisher-built, which definitely stamps them as quality cars. Perhaps the next feature to attract attention is the unusually wide door, and it is noted that even with its extra width the Buick coach door is in good proportion with the rest of the body.

The value and desirability of the extra wide door is quickly apparent. It provides easy entrance to the rear compartment of the car as well as to the front seat. It is possible for a person to conveniently enter or leave the rear compartment without more than tipping the back of the front seat slightly forward. With this arrangement it is unnecessary for a person in the front seat to get out of the car in order to let a passenger in or out of the rear compartment.

The front seats in the Buick coach are so comfortable as the rear seat. Deep cushions built over springs are used in the folding backs of the front seats, which are also officially wide from front to rear to be comfortable. The seats are coveerd with durable and attractive high-grade worsted cloth. The interiors are lined on sides and top with plain cloth to harmonize with the seat covering.

As to furnishings and equipment, both the Standard and Master coaches have the new Fisher ventilating one-piece windshield, automatic windshield wiper, rear-vision mirror, dome light, heavy nickel-plated revolving handles for operating windows, lock on left door operated by convenient latch, right door equipped with lock and key, foot rest for occupants of rear seat and rear window curtain.

The instruments are of a special shape to harmonize with the body design. They are neatly grouped in the center of the instrument panel and are indirectly lighted by a concealed instrument lamp recessed in the shroud.

The Master Six coach, known as Model 40, with 120-inch wheelbase, is finished in duco cobalt. Blue with ivory white striping, the upper part of the body being duco black. A wide black molding separates upper part and body proper, this molding being carried forward to the nickeled radiator.

The Standard coach (114 3-8-inch wheelbase) comes in Brewster green, duco finish, with duco black upper body. A wide black molding extending to the nickeled radiator separates the upper body from the body proper. Zuni red striping is used in the Brewster green. Both models have artillery type wood wheels, painted and striped to match the bodies. Buick four-wheel brakes, of course, are an integral part of the two chassis and the tires are of the low pressure type.

In speaking of the new models, B. H. King, acting manager of the Atlanta branch, expresses his enthusiasm and pleasure with the newest Buick product in these words: "In my opinion the Buick coach sets a new standard for coach type automobiles. From the standpoint of quality, comfort, style and price, we do not know of its equal."

INCREASED POWER BOOSTS SALE OF FRANKLIN AUTOS

Steadily mounting retail Franklin sales, especially notable since July 1, and indicated by a 13 per cent increase in retail Franklin business in October over September. This increase, according to one automotive business paper, is considerably in advance of the retail sales performance of the industry generally, and is attributed by Franklin officials to the appeal of the high-powered, air-cooled motor, introduced in July. Franklin reports shipping orders for November as being well ahead of October.

MILTON BREAKS RECORD WITH CHAMPION PLUGS

Tommy Milton, veteran speedway marvel, who broke the world's record for 250 miles in the opening race over the new track at Charlotte, N. C., October 25, used Champion spark plugs to help attain the record. Immediately after the race Milton wired the Champion Spark Plug company, as follows:

"Won opening race here in my Miller special at an average speed of 118.17 miles per hour—a new world's record for 250 miles. My Champion spark plugs never missed a shot. Some performance."

Milton's victory made the eighth consecutive major race this year in this country and abroad in which Champions have been in the winning car, and also the eighth consecutive race in which not a single winning car has changed a plug.

"This record has never been approached by a single piece of automotive equipment," says Robert A. Stranahan, president of the Champion Spark Plug Co.

THE CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW

:: CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF THE DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH ::

Modern Methods Required To Sell Real Property

"Modern sales methods are required to popularize a real estate development and to arouse the interest of home-seekers," said R. E. Carrigan, of the Logan Realty and Trust corporation, "and it is useless to attempt the sale of realty or any other article of exchange without first creating a demand for it. Nothing can be sold without proper advertising."

Mr. Carrigan related the experience of his company recently in disposing of a large residential development that for several years had remained dormant, seemingly without a prospective purchaser. This property was located on the south side, within a short distance of Lakewood park, and although it was subdivided and placed on the market several years ago, few, if any, of the attractive home sites were sold.

"After taking over the property," said J. L. Logan, head of the corporation, "we first gave the subdivision an attractive name—Lafayette Park. We then subdivided the tract into suitable-sized home sites, laying off the streets and causing the civic improvements to be placed upon the property.

"With the above improvements in place we were ready for an intensive sales program, which included seven auctions on the tract. With each of the auctions we sold a number of the lots, disposing of the entire tract within a comparatively short time.

"The secret of our success," said Mr. Logan," as stated above, "was modern methods, which included the finding of that class of people who would be interested in property of that type and in that locality. The only means we had of doing this was through an advertising campaign, which was put on in the daily newspapers. We used the columns of The Constitution consistently and through this class of publicity we succeeded in bringing to our auctions and to our office the people who wanted homes in LaFayette Park."

The Logan Realty and Trust corporation, one of the best-known real estate concerns in the city, following its splendid success in selling the LaFayette Park tract, has taken over a large tract of land on the north side, subdividing the big parcel into home sites that will be suited for the building of suburban estates and country homes. The plan of the corporation, as announced by Mr. Logan, is to continue the sales that are being conducted on this property until a real community of handsome country estates and beautiful suburban homes results.

With Adams-Cates Co.

WARREN BEARDEN.

Announcement has been made that Warren Bearden, well-known young business man of Atlanta, has joined the staff of the A. S. Adams-Cates company.

Mr. Bearden is an Atlanta boy, graduating from Tech High and going to Georgia Tech.

After his school days he entered the motion-picture business, and about four years ago he went with the Atlanta Georgian, rising to the position of advertising manager of the classified advertising department. Mr. Bearden is said to have made a splendid record in his business life, and has made many friends in Atlanta business circles.

Many friends have congratulated him upon his connection with the A. S. Adams-Cates company, and predictions are made that he will meet with much success in his new position.

MANY SALES MADE IN CASCADE HEIGHTS

The continued demand for Atlanta home property is evidenced by the many sales that are being made in various subdivisions of all classes and in practically every section of the city, according to leading real estate men.

"We have had splendid success," said an official of the Wey-Con company, proprietors of Cascade Heights subdivision, which is known as the Pace's Ferry road property of the south side.

In the Cascade Heights, where a recent record of 30 lots sold in four days' time, there is said to have been a decided activity during the past few weeks, and, according to a statement of the above-mentioned official, the opening of spring will doubtless stimulate sale in that vicinity to a large degree.

TAXI DRIVER KILLED IN BOOTLEGGERS' FEUD

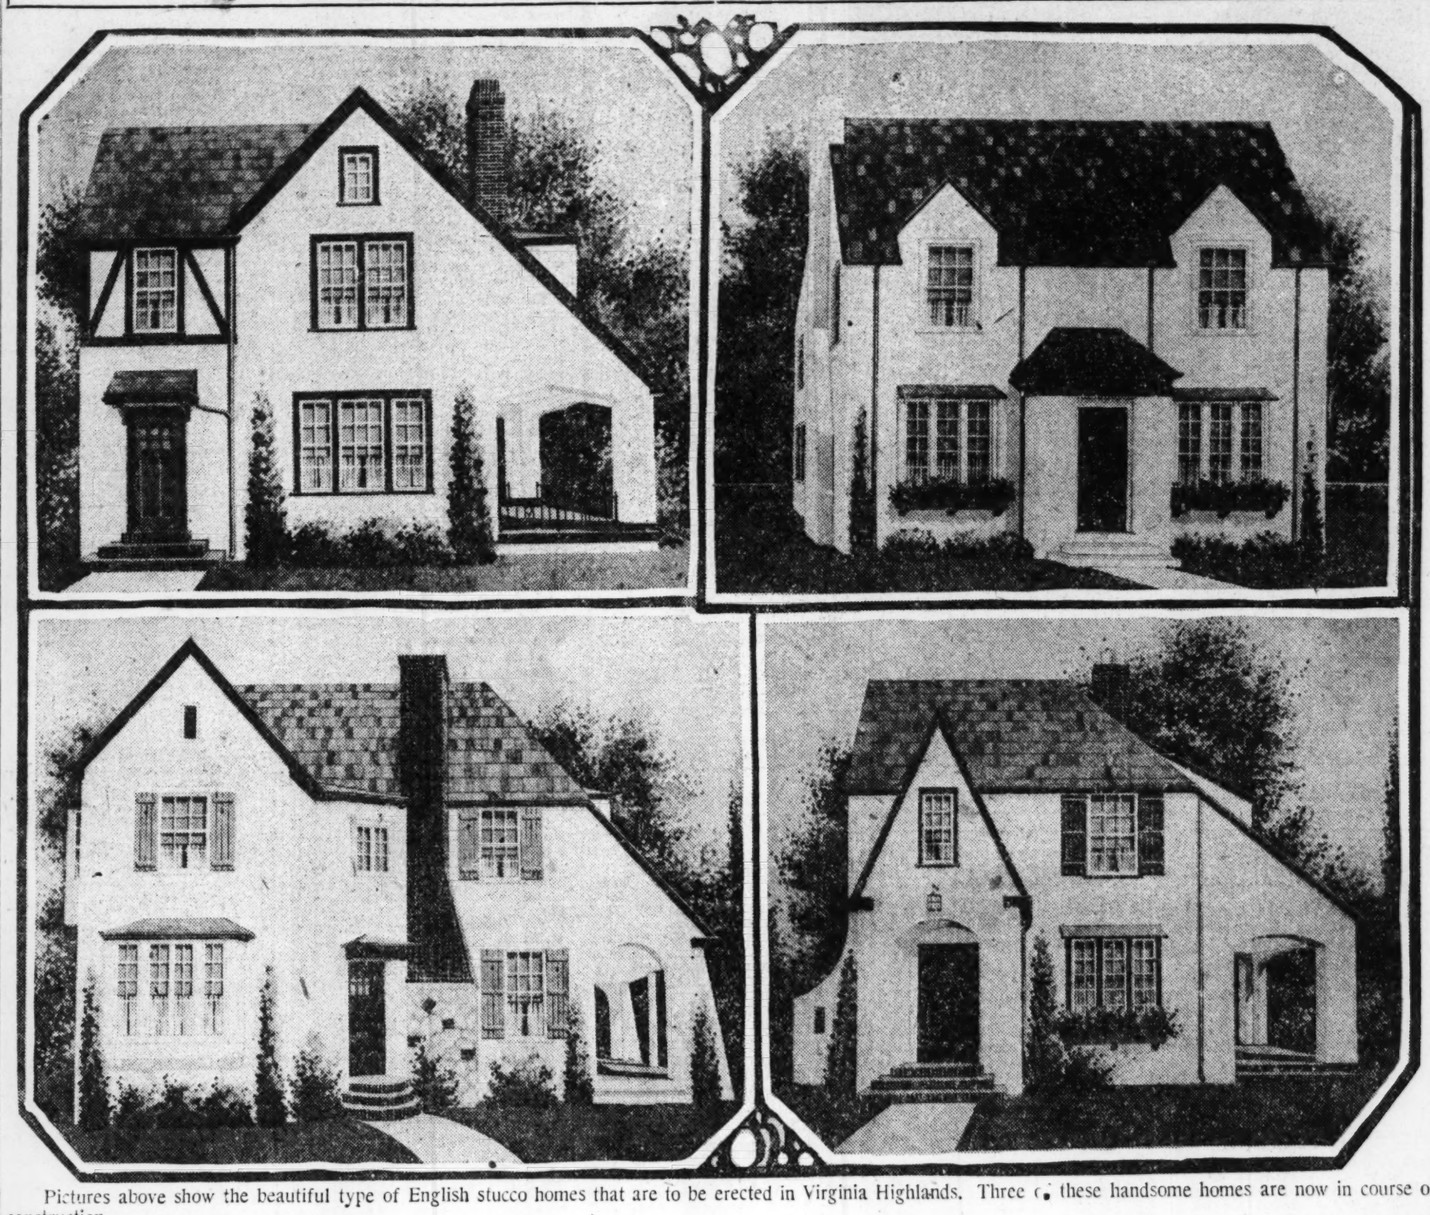

Hamilton, Ont., November 15.—The mutilated body of Fred Genesee, taxicab driver, who has been missing for two weeks, was found today on a mountainside near Stony Creek. He had been strangled with a towel. While searching for Genesee, Boy Scouts last Saturday found in the Albion Mills range the body of Roy Batoize, another murder victim.

Authorities believe the two crimes indicate a resumption of the bootleggers' feud in western Ontario two years ago during which the bodies of a score of men, mostly recent immigrants who have been murdered, were found in various places.

WAVES OF MAURETANIA FLOOD LOWER STREETS

Cowes, England, November 15.—The harbor board has asked the board of trade to curb the speed of the liner Mauretania in passing through the Solent. The last passage of the trans-Atlantic flier caused such a wash that streets and houses were flooded and ship yards damaged. The Mauretania is the only liner which offends in this manner, the harbor board declares.

Unique English Houses To Be Built in Virginia Highlands

Pictures above show the beautiful type of English stucco homes that are to be erected in Virginia Highlands. Three of these handsome homes are now in course of construction.

Virginia Highlands, regarded as one of the most attractive and popular residential developments that have been opened to the prospective home buyers of this city during the present wave of real estate activity, will be the object of an intensive advertising and sales campaign during the next few weeks, according to officials of the Grant-Jeter company, in whose hands the tract has been placed for sale.

Virginia Highlands, which has been only partially developed, but which contains a large number of modern homes erected during a former selling campaign, lies on a gently rising ridge, overlooking Atlanta's interesting skyline and presenting a vista of beauty in all directions. It has every advantage of the modern city, without the disadvantages of the crowded centers. Proximity to schools, churches and other institutions of culture and learning, and various transportation facilities, which make the tract easily accessible to the business center, add to the attractiveness of the subdivision, according to J. Clayton Burke, salesmanager of the Grant-Jeter company.

Owned by A. F. Ames.

The Virginia Highlands tract is the property of A. F. Ames, of Owensboro, Ky., a capitalist of the Kentucky city, who has been here for several days overlooking the tract and making arrangements with the Grant-Jeter company for the big campaign that is to be inaugurated at once. Mr. Ames is thoroughly sold, not only on Virginia Highlands, which he regards with pride as a possession, but upon Atlanta and her splendid promise for a prosperous future. In a statement to the writer Mr. Ames said that he expected to thoroughly improve the entire tract, erecting new homes of the most beautiful types and otherwise rendering the property attractive to home buyers and investors.

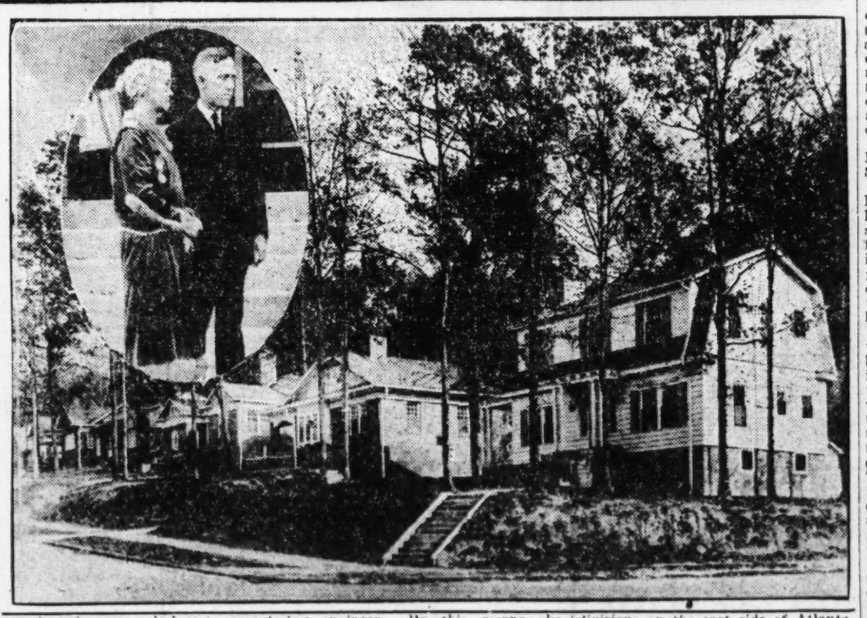

Among the features of the campaign for improvement and sales in Virginia Highlands, according to Mr. Ames and Mr. Burke, will be the immediate erection of a number of the most beautiful English stucco residences. These homes, with every modern appointment and equipment, will be the last word in moderate-priced residences. In other words, they will be so built that all of the luxuries that were formerly reserved for people of wealth can be enjoyed by the man of only moderate-sized bank account. In fact, these handsome homes will be placed on the market on such terms and at such prices that it will become possible for any man who wants a home to have one of them, according to Mr. Burke.

Types of the homes to be erected in Virginia Highlands are shown in the photograph reproduced above. There are to be many of the above general type, but varying to the degree that a tiresome sameness will be precluded.

200 Homes Erected by Atlanta Woman

Steadfastly adhering to the copy-book admonition, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again," Mrs. Nora G. Webb, architect, contractor and builder of homes, has brought victory out of her first defeat 13 years ago, and today has to her credit as a designer and builder in Atlanta, more than 200 modern residences and seven large apartment houses. Mrs. Webb, with her 65 years of experience and her remarkable supply of energy and originality, is looked upon as one of the most remarkable business and professional women in Atlanta, carrying the entire burden of her immense contracting concern on her own shoulders for several years until assistance came in the guise of her only son, E. P. Webb, who now aids her in operating the big construction company, the offices of which are in the Atlanta Trust company building.

"I came to Atlanta," said Mrs. Webb, who, like her son, is small in stature, though by no means limited in capacity for work "and without any previous experience I decided to enter into the business of constructing homes. I designed the first house as I have all the others, and I lost money on it because of several reasons, but I put the best material that money could buy into the building. A like experience, though with not quite such a loss, was encountered with the second house that I designed and erected with my own working crew. But I gained experience in the first two structures that enabled me to turn defeat into success. I have never forsaken my iron-bound rule of putting only the best quality of materials into my buildings, a rule that is evidenced throughout my work by the fact that the first house I erected stands today a much better example of the builders art than many of the newer ones around it."

Mrs. Webb, who actually makes the designs—or the initial sketch for every house she builds, and who also draws up the specifications, takes over the crew of artisans and craftsmen and supervises every step of the construction work of her houses.

Sixty-five Years Young.

"My mother, despite her 65 years," said Mr. Webb, "is to be found every working day on one or another of the projects that are in progress, and she gives every job her closest personal attention, just as would be done by the male architect of building engineer. By this means she knows herself just what goes into the construction of her houses, and if anything goes wrong she is there to meet the emergency. She has designed and worked out the specifications for more than 200 residences since coming to Atlanta, and has supervised the construction work on every one of these jobs. She has also built in the same manner seven large apartment houses that belong to the company.

The Webb Construction company, which is composed of Mrs. Nora G. Webb and her son, E. P. Webb, have erected about 50 handsome homes in Linwood, one of the prettiest subdivisions on the east side of Atlanta. These homes have been sold through the company's real estate department, which also handles the beautiful home sites in this residential tract.

"Linwood," said Mr. Webb, "is not only one of the most attractive residential subdivisions on the east side of the city, but it is proving more and more popular with the home-buying public. Out of more than 50 houses constructed out there we have only eight unsold."

Mr. Webb stated that the vacant lots that are being offered for sale by his company in Linwood are improved in every way, with streets, walks, water, gas, electric lights and lower and other civic features. The lots are located in a most advantageous way being on the crest of a gently rising ridge that forms the highest portion of Atlanta. These lots have every natural resource, it was stated, and are practically ideal for the erection of moderate-priced homes. The home sites in Linwood have the following average dimensions, 55 to 65 feet front by 150 to 300 feet deep, it was stated.

Linwood is traversed by Forrest avenue extension, lying beyond the famous "lost land lot," which is looked upon as one of the most promising residential districts.

Value of Farm Lands Is Increasing Fast, Says Forrest Adair

The value of farm lands is increasing. This is the opinion of Forrest Adair, president of the Adair Realty & Trust Co., which handles millions of dollars every year in farm lands alone. The Adair company has a representative in probably every town and city in the south, in addition to its chain-store-like offices over the entire country, and reports received lately show clearly that with the control of the boll weevil farm lands are rapidly returning to normal prices.

As pointed out by farm development agents of the Atlanta concern during the reign of the boll weevil farm lands shrunk in value, but this year has brought a healthy increase, and the demand for farms is unusually strong. Attention is called to the fact that other products can be grown, replacing cotton and bringing to the farmer much better returns for the amount expended in making a crop.

The response of business and industry to the ending of the uncertainty preceding the national election appears to have been prompt and general, according to business men and manufacturers here. They assert that the period of waiting appears to be over, and business and industry both are showing signs of a marked revival of activity.

KISER LEARNS TO SELL GROCERIES.

Holding with a firm grip to his first love, the real estate profession in Atlanta, but flirting langorously with a seductive siren in the guise of a new-fangled grocery store, Marion C. Kiser is said by his friends to be as well posted today on the price of soda crackers and peanut butter as upon the front foot value of down-town business property, or high-class homes.

While it is believed that Mr. Kiser will remain loyal to the real estate business it must be admitted that he is giving a great deal of his attention to the new grocery store chain, of which he is an official, and it is said to be as easy to locate him in one of the new grocery emporiums as it was formerly to find him in his real estate office. Marion Kiser loves the word "success," it has been explained, and it looks just as good to him when coupled with his jitney food business as when joined up with a big real estate deal. It has many friends who wish him a greater measure of success in his new venture than he has been realizing for several years in his real estate business, which is still one of the leading concerns of the city.

WEST RECOVERS FROM SERIOUS OPERATION

The many friends of H. F. West, one of the best-known real estate men in Atlanta, will doubtless be pleased to learn that he has recovered to a satisfactory degree from the recent serious operation to which he was forced to submit. Mr. West is able to be at his office in the Atlanta National Bank building, where he gave out a brief statement to the effect that business is good with his firm and that the prospects for the future are promising indeed.

LENSON PROPOSES BIG CHRISTMAS DINNER

Maurice L. Lenson, well-known head of the Atlanta Show Case company, who recently closed a contract for the big Forsyth street store and building formerly occupied by the Wilensky Leather company, has installed a complete set of modern machinery in the building and is prepared for the big run of business he confidently expects to come to his house.

Mr. Lenson, who has a bent for doing altruistic deeds, declares that he wishes to expend only a limited sum on his personal needs, and that he purposes to devote the balance of his income to charitable deeds.

Among the definite plans Mr. Lenson has in view, according to a recent statement, is a mammoth Christmas dinner, to which he purposes inviting 150 people of the city, who might otherwise go through that glad day without a dinner of any kind.

"My personal requirements are modest," said Mr. Lenson, "and I am so grateful for the fact that I have prospered in my business ventures that I am more than glad to share my surplus income with my unfortunate fellowman. I will ask 150 poor people to a Christmas dinner to be served under the happiest conditions. Several leading ladies of Atlanta have signified their willingness to aid me in giving the big dinner and they will help me to make my guests happy on that glad day."

Mr. Lenson's large business is located at 25-27 South Forsyth street.

National Head Of U. S. Realtors Will Speak Here

H. R. Ennis, of Kansas City, Mo., president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards will visit the Atlanta Real Estate board in an official capacity on Thursday, November 20, according to the announcement of President A. S. Adams, of the local board.

H. R. ENNIS.

Mr. Ennis was elected president of the national association at the Cleveland convention in June, 1923, and assumed the duties of this office at the August convention, 1924.

As president of the national association, Mr. Ennis is officially calling on the member boards of the national association during his administration. The national association is composed of over 500 boards and up to date President Ennis has traveled over 17,000 miles in his visits to them.

President Ennis is said to have had a long and successful experience in the real estate business, having attained marked success in this work in his home, Kansas City. He is looked upon as well qualified and equipped to serve in the capacity of president of this great organization and is said to be leading it in a most successful way.

A. S. Adams, president of the local board, announces that Mr. Ennis will address the members of the Atlanta Real Estate board at a luncheon to be held on the Cecil hotel roof at 12:30 o'clock, Thursday, November 20. Members of the board are given the privilege to bring all members of their organization to this meeting to hear Mr. Ennis, and all property owners of the city also are cordially invited to attend. Those desiring reservations should call the real estate board office, Walnut 1461.

Will Discuss Taxation.

President Ennis' talk will be a plea for intelligent readjustment of the taxation burden in the individual states to accompany the program already announced by the Coolidge administration for further reduction of federal taxation.

Protection of the public from unscrupulous or irresponsible real estate dealers through the enactment of real estate license laws. Further development of standards of competency for real estate brokers will also be emphasized by the national real estate board president.

Mr. Ennis characterizes the present methods of taxation as "unfair and unjust under which owners of great wealth and other forms of property virtually escape."

In spite of the fact that one-half of the wealth of our nation consists of personal property and evidences of indebtedness, real estate continues to bear more than three-quarters of the burden of public expenditures. Public authorities, under pressure from the necessary revenue, are continually increasing the burden of real estate, it is pointed out, while owners of great wealth in other forms of property virtually escape. This is considered by the realtors as unfair and unjust, and efforts should be used to correct these conditions, declares President Ennis.

Atlanta realtors are looking forward to the visit of President Ennis and will welcome him most cordially.

THOMPSON SAYS OUTLOOK FOR BUSINESS IS GOOD

That the activity in the local real estate market is of a most gratifying nature, and that the outlook for future business is extremely promising is the opinion of John J. Thompson, one of the livest and best-known real estate agents in Atlanta.

Mr. Thompson credits the steadily-increasing population of the city with the continued demand for homes here, which he declares promises to continue for many months. "The people are coming to Atlanta in large numbers," said he, "and they must have homes of some kind. The continued efforts that are being made to educate the people to a higher standard of living has stimulated the desires of many family heads toward the ownership of their homes. The people also are demanding better type homes, and that accounts for many of the demands we, and other agencies, have for modern residences. The people are learning more and more the value of money, and they are learning also what to do with money when they get it. The fact that so many people are investing their savings and their profits also in home property is a most encouraging feature of the present economical situation."

EVANS & DODD ADD NEW SALESMAN TO STAFF

R. A. Tomlinson, well known to many of the business people of Atlanta, and regarded as one of the livest realty salesmen in the city, has joined the staff of the Evans & Dodd Co., of the Candler building, according to recent announcements.

Mr. Tomlinson, with more than 15 years of experience in real estate here, has gained a splendid knowledge of locations and values, and he is said to be equipped otherwise for success as a realty man. Many friends have congratulated Mr. Tomlinson upon his new connection, it was stated.

OUTLOOK HIGHLY PROMISING SAYS J. S. LARRAMORE

"Not only has there been a business activity for several weeks that has been greatly encouraging to our company," said J. S. Larramore, of the L. W. Rogers Realty and Trust company, "but we are basing upon this activity a prediction that the coming spring will open up a real estate market that will become one of the best periods through which the real estate interests of Atlanta have ever passed."

Mr. Larramore stated that his firm has sold out almost completely in the large subdivisions that were marketed through this real estate house, but that with a limited number of vacant lots and several home properties yet available the company has experienced decided activity. He said that all indications are for a greater demand than ever for homes and home sites during the coming spring, and declared further that he expects to witness a greater activity in all lines of the real estate business.

WILSON GOES ON FLORIDA TOUR.

Walter M. Wilson, familiarly known to the realters as "Skeet" Wilson, who is head of the lease department of Calhoun company, left last night for St. Petersburg and other Florida resorts. Many friends and associates in the local realty world have extended sympathy to Mr. Wilson because of the recent death of his wife, who was ill but a brief time.

MANY INNOVATIONS FOR BLUE ROCK HEIGHTS.

Improvement and developments of a novel nature are being worked out for the elegant residence section that is to be opened at once under the name of Blue Rock heights, according to Berry Collins, who has placed the splendid property in charge of the sales department of the Grant-Jeter company for sale.

Not only will the homes to be built in this beautiful subdivision be of the highest type, architecturally speaking, but they will contain every modern device and appointment that could in any way add to the comfort of the homes or the convenience of their arrangement. The subdivision itself will also be developed to the highest degree, white light posts and other innovations so far as suburban property is concerned.

In the houses the builders will use only the highest quality of every item of material, and everything that is new and approved for use in elegant homes will be included, it was declared, such as oil furnaces, insuring clean and smokeless heat, electric ranges, and other devices of that nature. "We are going to make this the subdivision par excellence," said Mr. Collins, "and nothing but the successful building of the very highest type of modern home will be considered. Of course we do not contemplate the useless expenditure of money for things not really needed," said Mr. Collins, "but we do not mean to permit the question of expense to stand in the way of the consummation of our plans to make this one of the most magnificent residential communities to be found in the south."

"ATLANTA NO PLACE FOR THE CROAKER"—Ewing.

Atlanta has no room for the pessimist," said Morris Ewing, head of the renting department of J. H. Ewing & Sons, "and conditions do not begin to justify anything but the most optimistic prophecies with reference to real estate, as well as other business activities, here. We have been exceedingly busy within the past few weeks seeking locations for prospective business firms, finding new locations for existing concerns and locating newcomers in suitable residences, and when there is activity in real estate it practically always follows that other lines of business are doing well."

Mr. Ewing stated that inquiries are coming in to his firm with great frequency asking about new locations, seeking to find suitable sites for removal and for homes. That there are many big things in store for the coming year and that greater real estate activity than ever before is destined for Atlanta during the coming year, Mr. Ewing confidently believes.

SHARP & BOYLSTON OCCUPY NEW OFFICES.

Work is about completed on the new quarters of the Sharp & Boylston renting agency, and this popular concern is preparing to welcome its friends and clients into handsome new quarters on Luckie street. For many months this company has occupied an office on the ground floor at the corner of James and Forsyth streets, its identity being assured by the unique stuffed figures of a black cat and a sable-hued dog, both rampant, and both muchly moth-eaten, it was discovered on close examination. Whether the cat and dog will remain a part of the display window equipment at the new office, remains to be seen. It is understood, however, that some one in that popular office is much attached to the pathetic little figures and it will be difficult to relegate them to the garbage heap despite their motheaten condition, it is believed.

Miss Powell Weds Mr. Burckhardt At Quiet Ceremony in Newnan

John William Powell announces the marriage of his sister, Lutie Nimmons, to John George Burckhardt, Jr., of Atlanta, the wedding having taken place Saturday, November 15, at noon, at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Welborn Burroughs Davis, on Greenville street in Newnan. The ceremony was witnessed only by the immediate families and a few close friends.

The bride's little niece, Miss Mary Davis, was the flower girl, and the groom's small nephew, Master Richter Smith, Jr., was the ringbearer. Charles Richter Smith acted as best man. There were no other attendants.

The bride was lovely in a charmeen ensemble costume of midnight blue trimmed in touches of red. Her hat was a smart model of black panne velvet. She carried a bouquet of orchids and valley lilies.

The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion with gorgeous white chrysanthemums and ferns. The improvised altar was banked with ferns and palms, and the colors of white and green were carried out in decorations throughout the house.

The ceremony was followed by a delicious wedding breakfast, after which the bride and groom left on a motor trip to Florida.

The wedding will be of interest to a large circle of friends of the young couple. Mrs. Burckhardt is the eldest daughter of the late Judge and Mrs. John Stephen Powell, of Newnan and the Philippine Islands, granddaughter of the late Judge John W. Powell, of Newnan, and great-granddaughter of John Powell, one of the first settlers of Coweta county. The Powells have lived continuously in Newnan for nearly a century—since 1826—and have contributed much to the social and civic growth of the town. Her father, Judge John S. Powell, was judge of the court of first appeals of the Philippine Islands for 18 years, besides rendering brilliant and valued service in the Spanish-American war as captain of the third Georgia volunteers in Cuba, and later as captain of the 41st United States volunteers in the Philippines. Her grandfather, Judge John W. Powell, was first judge of Coweta county, and also of the city court of Newnan, occupying the bench continuously for more than 20 years.

On her mother's side the family is equally prominent, the Storeys and Nimmons being old and valued families. Her mother was a charter member of the Newnan chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and was organizer and first president of the Civic league, she being a woman of great charm and talent.

The bride was educated at Agnes Scott, Columbia College and Emory, being the first woman to receive a Ph.B. degree from Emory, which she won last August.

Mr. Burckhardt is one of the most prominent and best known young business men in Atlanta, being credit manager of the Atlanta Loan and Savings company. He was educated abroad, where he lived for many years, and he later completed his education with an A.B. degree from the University of Georgia, where he was a member of several honorary and social clubs. He served in the navy in the world war.

His father, John G. Burckhardt, is one of the most prominent men in Atlanta, always taking an active part in civic enterprises. His mother, the late Mrs. Burckhardt, was formerly Miss Katherine Bunker, and was one of the most beautiful and cultured women in Atlanta. He is a direct descendant of the owners of the Bunker estate near Boston, where the battle of Bunker Hill was fought in the revolutionary war. The Bunkers were among the first settlers in Massachusetts, and assisted liberally in the founding of Harvard university.

Miss Pittard Weds Mr. Mulherin.

Mrs. Matilda Frances Pittard, of Jacksonville, Fla., announces the marriage of her daughter, Sara Lucile, to John Francis Mulherin, of Augusta, which occurred Wednesday, November 5, in Jacksonville.

Miss Morgan Weds Mr. Holliman.

A very interesting marriage of the past week was that of Miss Lillie Agnes Morgan and George M. Holliman which was solemnized Tuesday afternoon at the pastorium of the North Augusta Baptist church. The ceremony was said Dr. H. Floyd Surles in the presence of a few friends. Mrs. Holliman is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Morgan and is a girl of exceptionally charming personality. Mr. Holliman is well known in the business and social world.

Miss Bell To Wed Mr. McGarry At Sacred Heart Church

Cordial interest centers in the wedding plans of Miss Mary Elizabeth Bell, to Maurice Sweetman McGarry, which will take place Saturday, November 29, at high noon at the Sacred Heart church. Rt. Rev. B. J. Keiley, former bishop of Savannah, who officiated at the wedding ceremony of the bride's parents, will be the officiating minister. The bride will be given in marriage by her father. Miss Marjorie Gallaher, of Denver, Col., will be the maid of honor, and the matron of honor will be Mrs. E. Rollin Carson, Jr., of Savannah. The bridesmaids will be Miss Elise Hill, of Sylvania, Ga.; Miss Carolyn Holliday and Mrs. Charles Woodard. Miss Anne McGarry will be the junior bridesmaid, and the flower girl will be Miss Margaret Bell.

Mr. McGarry will have as his best man William Lynch, and the groomsmen will be John Daly, Edward Holliday, William Martin and Nelson Martin. The ushers will be John Bell, Jr., William McAlpin, Dick Reynolds and Edwin Liddell.

Immediately after the ceremony, the bride's parents will entertain at a wedding breakfast at their home on Park lane, in Ansley Park, in honor of the bridal party and for the two families.

Mrs. J. S. Moss entertained at a shower and bridge party on Saturday afternoon, November 15, at her home on Ponce de Leon avenue in honor of Miss Bell.

Monday evening, November 17, Mrs. J. A. Higgins and John Higgins will entertain at a bridge party at their home in Ansley Park.

Tuesday afternoon, November 18, Miss Carolyn Holliday will entertain at a bridge-tea at her home on Myrtle street.

Wednesday evening, November 19, Misses Kate and Anne Londergan will entertain at a supper party in honor of Miss Bell and Mr. McGarry.

Saturday afternoon, November 22, Miss Marie Donnelly will compliment Miss Bell at a shower and bridge-tea at her home on Myrtle street.

Mrs. J. H. Hines will honor Miss Bell and Mr. McGarry at a bridge party on Monday evening, November 24, at her home on Woodcrest avenue in Brookwood Hills.

Wednesday evening, November 26, Mrs. Charles Woodard will entertain at a bridge party at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood Higgs, in Ansley park.

Several other parties are being planned for Miss Bell, the dates of which will be announced later.

Miss Bradley Weds William Brewton at Church Ceremony

A wedding of wide interest to a large circle of friends was that of Miss Frances Marion Bradley and William Wade Brewton, which was solemnized Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the First Methodist church in College Park in the presence of a large company of friends and relatives.

The church was handsomely decorated in yellow chrysanthemums, with a background of ferns. Southern smilax was used effectively around the chancel railing.

While the guests were assembling, Mrs. Hugh Couch sang "O Promise Me" and "I Love You Truly," with Miss Eloise Olds, accompanist, who also played the wedding music. Schubert's serenade was used as a prelude. The bridal party entered to the bridal chorus from Lohengrin. "Liebstraum" was rendered softly during the ceremony and Mendelssohn's march was used as the recessional.

Bridal Party.

Miss Floy Bradley, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a handsome dress of gray crepe draped in silver lace. Her flowers were pink Columbia roses, and her hat was made of silver lace.

Mrs. Frederic Beers was matron of honor. She was gowned in brown satin-back crepe with cascades of old lace. Her hat was of gold lace and her flowers were Ophelia roses.

The groomsmen were: Major Oscar Palmour, Judge Garland M. Watkins, Frank Schaefer and Edgar F. Center, Jr. Arva O. Brewton, brother of the groom, was best man.

The attendants entered singly from opposite aisles. The bride entered with her father, John F. Bradley, who gave her in marriage. They were met at the altar by the groom, Dr. Henry C. Brewton, father of the groom, performed the ceremony, assisted by Rev. Irby Henderson, pastor of the church.

Lovely Bride.

The bride was beautiful in her going-away gown of midnight blue crepe satin, with trimmings of beaver fur. Her hat was of blue crepe, trimmed in gold lace. She carried a cascade bouquet of bride roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Bradley entertained the bridal party and out-of-town guests at a wedding breakfast. Mrs. Bradley wore a handsome gown of brown satin trimmed in bands of lace and embroidered in blue flowers.

The home was decorated in yellow chrysanthemums. The breakfast table was overlaid with lace and was graced in the center with a mound of roses.

The bride is a popular and beloved young woman and is a talented musician. She has a wide circle of friends throughout the state.

The groom is secretary to Judge Hines, of the supreme court, and is well known in social and business circles.

Mr. and Mrs. Brewton left immediately after the ceremony for Chicago and other cities of interest, and after their return they will be at home at the Bonaventure apartments in Atlanta.

Psi Omega Fraternity Dance.

One of the most brilliant affairs of the Thanksgiving season will be the dance at the Capital City club on November 18, in honor of the entire freshman class, given by the active members of Psi Omega fraternity of the Atlanta-Southern Dental college.

Dr. Loveridge Will Give Lecture Series.

Dr. Blanche Grosbec Loveridge announces a new series of lectures on "The Unseen World," beginning in the Biltmore hotel Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Of pleasing interest and fundamental importance will be Sunday's lecture in which Dr. Loveridge will introduce the outstanding features marking the activities in the unseen world. "Every phase of life on the material plane," says Dr. Loveridge, "has its origin in the unseen. If you would control events, acquaint yourself with the powers which make events." Miss Goldie M. Pugh will play several selections on the violin.

Miss Epstein Is Guest of Honor.

A number of social functions have been given in honor of Miss Vellie Beatrice Epstein, a bride-elect of November 23.

On Saturday, November 15, Miss Alice Smith entertained at a matinee party, followed by an afternoon tea. Seven guests were invited. A miscellaneous shower will be given on Saturday, November 22, by Miss Lucile Hamby at her home in honor of Miss Epstein. On Thursday, November 20, the "X" club will entertain for the bride-elect at a dinner, followed by a theater party.

Invitations have been issued for the marriage of Miss Vellis Beatrice Epstein, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Epstein, to Sol Berman, of Birmingham, Ala., which will take place at the home on the bride's parents on November 23.

Mrs. Beckham Hostess To Bride-Elect.

Mrs. Lucius Beckham entertained Saturday afternoon at her home on Highland avenue in compliment to Miss Ruth Breck whose marriage to John O. Graves will be an event of this month.

The house was beautifully decorated in fall flowers. A color scheme of lavender and green was carried out in all details. The prize for top score was a pair of wisteria candle holders and the consolation a hand-painted telephone pad. Miss Breck was presented with a yellow novelty perfume bottle.

The guests were: Miss Ruth Breck, Miss Virginia Ashe, Miss Hazel Lamar, Miss Helen Lamar, Mrs. Howard Graves, Mrs. Lamar Pierson, Mrs. Luther McGee, Mrs. E. E. Ruffin, Mrs. T. T. Tucker, Mrs. Mamie O'Sullivan, Mrs. Howell McGuaghey Mrs. Arthur Sumner, Mrs. M. L. Semon, Mrs. Ross Cheshire, Mrs. Frank Merryman, Mrs. Colquitt Meacham, Mrs. W. C. Hodnett, Mrs. Charles Cromer, Mrs. Warren Davis, Mrs. McDonald, Mrs. Rickert, Mrs. John P. Gilchrist, Mrs. Ed van Valkenburg Jr., Mrs. E. A. Fowler and Mrs. Malvin Conway.

Recent Bride Is Guest of Honor.

Mrs. Richard Denny King, a recent bride, was entertained by her sister, Miss Zack Layfield, at her home in West End Tuesday afternoon.

A profusion of mauve and russett chrysanthemums was used in decorating the home throughout.

Mrs. Layfield was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. H. E. Williams, Mrs. C. H. Layfield and Mrs. H. Glover Tillis.

The invited guests were: Mrs. H. E. Williams, Mrs. C. H. Layfield, Mrs. E. Wiley Harrington, Mrs. Paul E. Newborn, Mrs. Richard Denny King, Mrs. Harry Woodard, Mrs. O. H. Akers, Mrs. R. C. Terrell, Mrs. Sam Beam, Mrs. J. Laramore, Mrs. C. H. Nolan, Mrs. L. W. Adams, Mrs. Jack Kelt, Mrs. H. Grover Tillis, Mrs. Jack Snelling, Mrs. B. H. Reynolds, Mrs. L. C. Varnadoe, Misses Mary Lane, Thelma Eding, Sara Baker, Mabel Combee, Francis and Annette Poindexter, Thelma Dunn, Ethel Sneed and others.

Music Study Club Studies Ibsen.

The College Park Music Study club held its study-class meeting on Wednesday afternoon and a large and enthusiastic class greeted the instructors in both the drama and the music-study classes.

Miss Mary Jo Merritt presided during the first hour and the subject for study was "Ibsen, His Life and His Works." Mrs. R. T. Aderhold, with the aid of maps and pictures, gave a graphic view and review of the man and his work. Miss Wills gave a synopsis of his play, "The Doll's House." Miss Merritt will give readings from this play at the next study class and the members of the class will continue the study of Ibsen's plays.

Miss Helen Knox Spain charmed her audience with her interpretation of the chapter on rhythm in the adopted course of study in the "Fundamentals of Music." At the next study class Miss Spain will introduce some of the most talented artists of the city who will assist her in presenting the subject of harmony.

At the next meeting of the club a beautiful program on Beethoven will be given. A number of accomplished musicians are preparing this program. Mrs. Willard See is the chairman in charge.

Woman's Circle Holds Meeting

An interesting meeting of the Business Woman's circle of Westminster Presbyterian church was held on Tuesday evening. Following the supper and transaction of business, Mrs. Robert M. McFarland, secretary of spiritual life of the auxiliary, conducted the study of women of the Bible, which is proving most interesting and helpful. During the social hour Mrs. Lessie McMichael, mezzo-soprano, sang several groups of songs, accompanied by Mrs. D. Earl Ahlers.

The general meeting of the Woman's auxiliary of Westminster Presbyterian church will be held on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock. All members are urged to attend.

Miss Turner Is Feted Bride-Elect.

Mrs. Charles William Harwell entertained Saturday afternoon at a lovely tea at her home on Ridgewood drive in honor of her sister, Miss Vivian Turner, a bride-elect, whose marriage to Dr. Herman Walter Cook will be solemnized November 19.

Mrs. Harwell was assisted in receiving by Mrs. John Roberts Turner and Miss Vivian Turner.

The tea table had as its centerpiece a vase filled with yellow chrysanthemums. Crystal candlesticks held yellow unshaded tapers. Placed at intervals on the table were comports filled with yellow and white mints. About 50 guests called during the afternoon.

Endeavor Society Is Entertained.

Miss Christine Hunt entertained members of the East Atlanta Christian Endeavor society at her home on Flat Shoals avenue Saturday evening.

Tall baskets and vases of beautiful fall flowers were placed in the rooms where the guests were received. Miss Hunt was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. J. M. Hunt.

A business meeting was held during the evening when plans were made for the bazaar to be given in December by the Christian Endeavor.

Miss Nelly Rapier Bricken, whose engagement was recently announced to William Arnold Knapp, of Thomasville, Ga., the marriage to take place at an early date.

Miss Leary Weds John L. Ryan At St. Anthony's in West End

Dignity and simplicity characterized the marriage of Miss Marguerite Leary and John L. Ryan, which was solemnized Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock at St. Anthony's cathedral, in West End. The Rev. Father King, pastor of St. Anthony's parrish, performed the ceremony in the presence of a number of relatives and friends.

An unusual and lovely bit of sentiment was the fact that the marriage service of Miss Leary and Mr. Ryan was the first to take place at St. Anthony's.

Preceding the ceremony, Miss Nell Jentzen, organist, and Mrs. G. B. Adair, soloist, gave appropriate musical selections.

The bride was by attended Miss Marie Long as maid of honor. Miss Long wore a gown of dark brown satin crepe with hat to match. Her corsage bouquet was Ophelia rosebuds and valley lilies.

Louie E. DeLoach, Jr., and Wilbur DeLoach were the two ushers.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Louie E. DeLoach. They were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Charles J. Lynch

The bride wore a beautiful ensemble costume of rosewood charmeen, trimmed in mink fur. Her hat was a French model of gold cloth with mink fur trimmings. Her corsage bouquet was of white rosebuds and valley lilies.

Mrs. DeLoach, aunt of the bride, was gowned in russet-brown satin beaded in bronze. She wore a wide brimmed hat to match and her corsage bouquet was pink rosebuds and valley lilies.

Following the ceremony an informal reception was given at the bride's home on Lee street in West End.

O. E. S. Chapter To Hold Bazar.

Gate City chapter, O. E. S. No. 233, will hold its Christmas bazar at Franklin & Cox Drug Co., corner Whitehall and Alabama streets, on Wednesday, November 26. There will be for sale aprons of all kinds, hand-embroidered towels and beautiful hand-made pillow cases. The public is invited to come and do their Christmas shopping.

Lovely Home Ceremony Marks Harris-Bechtel Wedding

Of cordial interest to a wide circle of friends is the marriage of Miss Ina Louise Harris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Clifton Harris, to Perry Richards Bechtel, of Cincinnati, Ohio, which was solemnized Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents. The beautiful marriage service was read by Dr. F. M. Wilcox, rector of St. Luke's Episcopal church, in the presence of an assemblage of friends and relatives.

The entire lower floor of the home was decorated with quantities of palms, ferns, southern smilax and feathery white chrysanthemums. The altar of palms was banked at one end of the long living room and standing in relief against this were white wicker floor baskets alternated with seven branched candelabra holding white burning tapers. Further adding to the beauty of the scene was the white satin prie-dieu upon which the bride and groom knelt during the ceremony.

Prior to the ceremony a beautiful musical program was rendered: Byron Warner sang "I Love You Truly" and "All for You," accompanied by Miss Will Nell Logan at the piano.

The bridesmaids entered first in pairs and took their places at the altar, holding white tulle streamers to form an aisle for the bride. Miss Irene Colwell and Miss Lucile Settle entered first and were followed by Miss Dorothy Cook and Miss Meta Fitchett.

Bridesmaids' Gowns.

The lovely gowns of the bride and her attendants reflected the autumn shades of brown, tan and gold. Miss Colwell's gown was of bronze lace fashioned over gold cloth, trimmed with broad bands of brown fur and gold ribbon. Miss Settle's gown was of tan satin crepe combined with gold cloth, fashioned along straight lines. Miss Cook wore brown satin crepe combined with gold lace and gold ribbon. They wore quaint gold cloth hats draped with brown tulle and brown lace and wreathed in tiny French flowers with streamers of brown tulle. Their flowers were sweatheart roses and valley lilies.

Mrs. John T. Morris, of Norman Park, Ga., formerly Miss Marcelle Lyons, of this city, was matron of honor and entered next. She wore a handsome gown of tan crepe romaine gracefully draped with chiffon of the same shade and her hat was a becoming model of tan faille faced with orange georgette. Her flowers were yellow chrysanthemums tied with yellow tulle.

Beautiful Bride.

The lovely bride entered with her father, Edgar Clifton Harris, and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Edward Barksdale.

The bride was never lovelier than in her wedding gown of rosewood charmeen fashioned along straight lines and elaborately braided in gold braid. The sleeves were fashioned of gold lace and were drawn in at the wrists with narrow gold ribbons. Her hat was a becoming model of gold cloth gracefully draped with filmy brown lace and trimmed with tiny rose, blue and gold velvet flowers. Further enhancing the costume was a handsome beige fox fur and her flowers were a bouquet of bride's roses and valley lilies. Her only ornament was a handsome platinum and diamond dinner ring, an heirloom in the Bechtel family and which was the groom's wedding gift to the bride.

Informal Reception.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Clifton Harris entertained at an informal reception. Assisting them in receiving were the bride and groom, the members of the bridal party, Mrs. Lewis T. Simmons, Mrs. Charles Jackson, Mrs. Andrew Cranford, Mrs. W. Alexander Milne, of Rochester, N. Y., the groom's aunt, and Mrs. Donald D. Warner, also of Rochester, N. Y., the groom's cousin.

Assisting in entertaining were Miss Hazel Cooper and Miss Mary Anchors.

Mrs. Carl La Fell kept the bride's book.

Mrs. Edgar Clifton Harris, the bride's mother, was gowned in black velvet trimmed with jet and a corsage of pink roses.

Following the reception Mr. Bechtel and his bride left for a wedding trip east, after which they will be at home in Cincinnati, Ohio. Completing the bride's costume for traveling was a seal skin coat with collar and cuffs of gray squirrel.

Mrs. Bechtel is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Clifton Harris and a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Albert Price, of Adairsville, Ga., and of the late Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Harris, of Dalton. She is a lovely blonde and possesses a charming personality and graciousness of manner which have won for her a wide popularity not only in her home city but wherever she has visited. She spent last summer touring the west and visiting in California. She is a graduate of the Atlanta Normal school and has been a popular teacher in the Atlanta public schools.

Mr. Bechtel is the only son of J. F. Bechtel and the late Mrs. Bechtel, of Binghamton, N. Y., and is connected with the Head family of Maine and the Bechtels of Pennsylvania, both prominent in the business and social life of those states.

T. E. L. Class Is Entertained.

Mrs. Ruby Delaprierre entertained the T. E. L. class of the Druid Hills Baptist Sunday school Saturday afternoon, at her home in Druid Hills, with a delightful reception which was given in honor of the new officers of the class.

Mrs. Backus and Mrs. Reeves played a number of piano selections. Mrs. O. D. Martin and Mrs. R. L. Adams assisted in entertaining.

DANCE and DINNER GOWNS THAT FLARE

This model shown in Vogue and Harper's, November French Models.

IN this youthful gown—for dinner and the dance that follows, copied from Patou's famous "Lucille," the new fullness which does not break the straight, slim silhouette, is obtained by overlapping godets in the skirt. The material is heavy silk crepe in maize and coral. A dance frock that is really planned for dancing—a skirt that ripples gracefully and affords ample freedom of motion. . . . It fits snugly about the hips and has an utterly plain bodice—both notable points that accompany the flare in this season's mode.

Beautiful Macon Bride

Photograph by Warlich Studio, of Macon.

Mrs. Linhart Fields McMullin, who was before her marriage Miss Margaret McKenney, beautiful daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee McKenney, of Macon. Her marriage was a brilliant event in Macon society, and was solemnized in Mulberry Street Methodist church. Mr. and Mrs. McMullin will make their home in Macon.

Miss Singer Weds Albert J. Stubbs.

Lumpkin, Ga., November 15.—A lovely wedding was that of Miss Lennie Singer and Albert Jefferson Stubbs, both of Macon, which was solemnized in the living room at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Singer, parents of the bride, in Lumpkin, at 10:15 o'clock Wednesday morning, in the presence of a number of friends and relatives, Rev. W. M. Carmichael officiating.

The home was decorated for the occasion with palms and chrysanthemums in yellow and white, being used artistically. Preceding the ceremony Mrs. Fred S. Singer sang "You and Love"; Miss Jessie Streyer rendered Mesdelesohn's wedding march as the bridal party entered, then softly played "To a Wild Rose," by MacDowell, during the ceremony.

The bride was charming in her traveling costume of wood-brown charmene, with furs and other accessories to match. She carried a bouquet of bride's roses and valley lilies.

Mrs. S. C. Kimbrew, of Macon, was matron of honor, and wore a gown of black satin, carrying a bouquet of Columbia roses.

J. Lewis Singer, of Columbus, brother of the bride, was best man. As Miss Lennie Singer, the bride, is well known and much admired in Lumpkin where she resided until a few years ago when she became interested in business in Macon, since which time she had made her home in that city. Mr. Stubbs occupies an important position with R. S. Thorpe and Sons.

Mr. and Mrs. Stubbs left immediately after the ceremony and will visit various points of interest in Florida, after which they will be at home to their friends at 760 First street, Macon, Ga.

Miss Naomi Sharman Weds Mr. Sykes.

Opelika, Ala., November 15.—A pretty home wedding was solemnized on Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock, when Miss Naomi Sharman, of Blanton, Ala., became the bride of John Douglas Sykes, of Troy, Ala., at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Sharman. Dr. W. P. Smith, of the First Baptist church, Opelika, performed the ceremony.

The reception rooms were tastefully decorated with crimson salvia and ferns, baskets of roses and baskets of white chrysanthemums.

Miss Lois Fullerton, of Columbus, Ga., played the wedding music, and Mrs. Curtis Roberts sang O Promise Me."

Miss Alice Sharman, as her sister's maid of honor, entered alone. She wore a green evening dress with trimmings of silver, silver slippers and chrysanthemums tied with tulle. Next came little Rebecca Roberts as dainty ring-bearer. She was dressed in blue and carried the ring in the heart of a chrysanthemum.

The bride and groom entered together. The bride wore an elegant ensemble suit of rust charmeen with hat, slippers and gloves to match. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and valley lilies.

Immediately after the ceremony an informal reception was held. Mr. and Mrs. Sharman were assisted in entertaining by Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Roberts, Opelika; Mr. and Mrs. Columbus Roberts, Columbus, and Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Lavender, Atlanta.

Mr. and Mrs. Sykes left immediately for a short wedding trip, after which they will be at home to their many friends in Troy, Alabama.

Mrs. Wallace Hostess For Mrs. Kimball.

Mrs. Will Cobb Wallace was hostess at an afternoon and evening bridge party Tuesday, in honor of Mrs. R. H. Kimball, of Winder, the attractive guest of Mrs. E. V. Snipes.

The house was decorated with rose and yellow chrysanthemums.

Mrs. Kimball was presented with a hand-made handkerchief.

Mrs. W. H. Perrin was hostess at a party Wednesday evening in honor of Mrs. Kimball.

Miss McKenney Weds L. F. McMullen In Macon, Ga.

Of state-wide interest in social circles was the marriage of Miss Margaret McKenney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee McKenney, of Macon, to Linhart Fields McMullen, of Philadelphia, taking place Wednesday evening at 9 o'clock at the Mulberry Street Methodist church in Macon.

Bishop William N. Ainsworth performed the ceremony, assisted by the Rev. Walter Anthony, pastor of the church.

The handsome church was adorned for the occasion with quantities of tropical palms and ferns, combined with tall floor vases filled with feathery white chrysanthemums. White cathedral candles burned in massive brass candelabra.

Mrs. Monroe Ogden presided at the organ, and just before the entrance of the bridal party Mrs. Willis Sparks, Jr., sang "O Promise Me." Mrs. Ogden played Mendelssohn's wedding march as processional and recessional, and "Meditation," from Thais, during the ceremony.

Hubert Block and Elliott Dunwody, groomsmen, entered first down opposite aisles. They were followed by Miss Mary Elizabeth Stifel, of Wheeling, W. Va., and Perry Mahone, also advancing down separate aisles.

Next came Miss Martha DeBow, of Nashville, Tenn., with Dr. William Ainsworth, Jr., opposite.

Mrs. Robert Lee McKenney, the bride's mother, was matron of honor, and she preceded Miss Louise McKenney, an only sister, who was maid of honor.

Little Miss Ruth Mahone, as flower girl, came next.

The bride entered with her father, Robert Lee McKenney, and met the groom and his best man, Thomas Barkdull, of Miami, Fla., at the altar.

Miss Stifel's blond beauty was enhanced by a gown of orchard crepe, beaded in pearls and crystals. She carried a bouquet of Russell roses tied with pink tulle.

Miss DeBow was handsomely gowned in a French model of gold cloth trimmed in shaded ostrich. Her flowers were also Russell roses.

Mrs. McKenney's lovely toilette was of French blue crepe and crystal beads, and her bouquet was of Columbia roses and valley lilies.

Miss Louise McKenney wore rose chiffon, a bouquet of bronze-colored roses and lilies of the valley adding a note of beauty.

The bride was radiantly lovely in her white duchess satin. Ruffles of white velvet trimmed the skirt, and a long court train fell from the shoulders and was edged in band of tulle and velvet. A lavish design of rose point lace trimmed the bottom of the veil, which fell in graceful array. Her flowers were a cascade of valley lilies.

Immediately after the ceremony at the church Mr. and Mrs. McKenney entertained with a brilliant reception at their home in Vineville.

During the evening Mr. and Mrs. McMullen left for Miami and Palm Beach.

Mrs. McMullen's traveling suit was an ensemble model of brown, trimmed in mink.

Mr. and Mrs. McMullen will be away for several weeks, and on their return will be at home at the Dempsey hotel.

Agnes Scott Day Students Begin Building Campaign

The day students of Agnes Scott college are conducting a vigorous campaign which is hoped to result in the realization of a long-cherished plan—a day students' cottage. The campaign was formally opened last Saturday night by the presentation of a musical comedy, "The String 'em Girl." The play, written by Mary Lyons, directed by Mary Ben Wright, and staged under the management of Mary Knox and Elizabeth Chapman, was a splendid success. One hundred and forty-five dollars were cleared. To add to the funds on hand, a tag week is going on at the college, during which time "bricks" will be sold at 10 cents each. Each purchaser of a red oblong card may feel that a brick in the building to come is his own property. The day students are under the leadership of Isabelle Clark, president, and Juanita Greer, secretary and treasurer.

Agnes Scott is very much pleased over the recent appearance of the Aurora, the quarterly magazine, published by the students of the college. The table of contents includes short stories, poems, book reviews and essays. The staff of the magazine is as follows: Elizabeth Cheatham, editor-in-chief; Grace A. Ogden, assistant editor; Araminta Edwards, business manager; Sarah Shields, assistant business manager; Georgia May Little, associate editor; Elizabeth Griffin, associate editor; Susan Clayton, exchange editor; Lucile Gause, circulation manager.

Pi Alpha Phi, the debating club of Agnes Scott, held its regular meeting November 6, Olivia Swann, the vice president, presiding. The program consisted of a debate, "Resolved, That the Parliamentary System is a Better Form of Government Than the Presidential System." The decision was given in favor of the affirmative. The affirmative was upheld by Isabel Ferguson and Mary Davis; the negative by Pocahontas Wigert and Helen Lewis. The judges were: Miss Gooch, Dr. Good, Miss Hearon, and Mr. Stukes, all members of the Agnes Scott faculty.

The hockey season at Agnes Scott college this year has been a great success. Nine games have been played between the seniors, juniors, sophomores and freshmen. Up to date the seniors, not defeated this year, hold first place with four games won and one tied. The junior come next, with two games won, one tied, and two lost; the sophomores rank next with one game won, one tied and two lost. The freshmen have tied one game and lost three.

HOME ECONOMICS DEPARTMENT OF WOMAN'S CLUB TO ENTERTAIN

Economics Department To Honor State Officers at Luncheon

The home economics department of the Atlanta Woman's club with Mrs. J. A. Carlisle, the chairman, will entertain at a luncheon Wednesday at 1 o'clock. This affair will be in honor of the state officers of vocational work, including F. E. Land, state director; Miss Epsie Campbell, state supervisor of home economics; Paul Chapman, supervisor of agriculture; T. E. Cannon, supervisor of industries and trades, and Professor T. W. Clift, city chairman of the vocational work. Other honor guests will be Miss Clara Cone, of the Girls' High school; Miss Erna Proctor, of Athens, Ga., and Professor Willis Sutton, superintendent of the city schools.

The banquet hall will be elaborately decorated with autumn leaves and fall flowers and Mrs. Harold Roberts will be in charge of the decorations. Mrs. Ernest Covington, chairman of hospitality, will be assisted in welcoming the guests by Mrs. H. E. Jessup, Mrs. Calvin Stanford and Mrs. H. A. Manning.

All the club members are invited to attend this luncheon and will please call Mrs. Simmons, the club hostess, to make their reservations which will be $1 per plate. The members of the department are urged to make their reservations as soon as possible.

Immediately after the luncheon the regular meeting will be held at 3 o'clock in the auditorium. At this time the department will be honored by a talk from Miss Epsie Campbell on the subject, "The Home Made More Efficient by Means of Labor-Saving Devices and Necessary Conveniences." Another distinguished speaker will be Miss Erna Proctor, who will talk on "Cooperation in Home Economic Work." Mr. Lonzberg, of the Binder Gift Art shop, a cook book advertiser, will talk five minutes and has offered a very valuable oil painting to the department to be given to the winner of a most interesting contest that will be put on during the month. Another feature of the afternoon will be the explanation of the unit system and the awarding of the certificates by Professor Clift.

A display of the work of the vocational classes will be put on in the banquet hall, and Mrs. T. G. Delph, the chairman, will be in charge. Millinery, interior decorations, arts and crafts, batik work, basketry and everything made in the classes will be exhibited. The work will be judged by the state officers, and prizes will be awarded. This same exhibit at the Biltmore hotel during the past week attracted widespread attention.

The usual attendance prize, donated by the Henard Mayonnaise company, will be drawn for by all those who arrive promptly at 3 o'clock. Mrs. George Roberts, the cook-book chairman, will conduct the discovery contest, and the most helpful household hint will be awarded a beautiful cake, donated by the American Bakeries.

The chairman of the department, Mrs. J. A. Carlisle, was signally honored during the past week by receiving an appointment to the executive committee of the state Home Economics association.

Acts as Official Hostess At Home Economics Exhibit

Mrs. T. G. Delph, who has been appointed official hostess for the exhibit to be staged by the home economics department of the Atlanta Woman's club, to begin on Wednesday at the clubhouse.

One of the outstanding features of the club work during the past week was the magnificent display of the vocational classes of the home economics department of the Atlanta Woman's club. This was held in one of the rooms of the Biltmore hotel and attracted great attention among the visiting clubwomen.

Mrs. T. G. Delph, chairman of the classes, was the official hostess of the occasion, and was assisted by Miss Mary Olive Whitehead, the instructor in interior decoration; Mrs. Mae Bailey, teacher of millinery, and a large committee.

All sorts of hats were on display, hats for morning wear, hats for the afternoon, and even a few evening hats, showing that the pupils of the millinery class are capable of turning out some of the most exquisite creations ever seen in the city.

Too much cannot be said of the work in interior decoration, as the first impression upon entering the room was that one had entered the interior of a very fine interior decorating shop. Everywhere could be seen lovely candlesticks, lampshades, beautiful book-ends, magnificent scarfs done in batik work, hand-painted fire-screens, card tables with all sorts of elaborately painted designs, and many other articles.

The display included not only the work of the vocational classes of the Atlanta Woman's club but the work of all the classes of Mrs. Bailey and Miss Whitehead.

The committee assisting Mrs. Delph during the convention were Mrs. J. A. Carlisle, chairman of the home economics department; Mrs. C. D. Dickinson, Mrs. Ernest Covington, Mrs. J. R. Bachman, Mrs. H. W. Roberts, Mrs. Holbrook, Mrs. W. W. Alexander, Mrs. John Turner and Mrs. F. E. Johnson.

Decatur Fine Arts Club Will Meet Tuesday, November 18

The Fine Arts club of Decatur will meet Tuesday, November 18, at 3 o'clock in the Agnes Lee chapter house.

The program will begin with the reading of selected verses appropriate to the wonderful autumn now passing, and to music. These will be given by Miss Frances Amiss, the gifted young instructor of expression at Agnes Scott college. Then will follow a soprano solo, "Oh, Do Not Go, My Love," Hoursmann, sung by Mrs. Lewis H. Johnson, accompanied by Mrs. J. Geda Addy, well-known musicians, both.

Mrs. John C. Candler will speak on "The Beauty and Excellence of Modern Music." Mrs. Candler has charm of manner, a thorough knowledge of her subject and is purely a finished performer on both violin and piano. After this discussion several illustrative numbers, music from various nations, will be played by Charles Fry, a master violinist and an experienced concert performer. His chief selection will be French—a poeme by Chausson—which has only recently been performed in America by Ysaye and Maud Powell.

Mr. Fry will be accompanied by Mrs. Candler.

A quite new Spanish dance, "Rosita," in exquisite costume, will be shown by Mrs. Sara Shamp, one of Mrs. Spiker's advanced pupils.

The final number will be a Creole song, "Lily Strickland," sung by a double quartet from the Agnes Scott Glee club. Music—ancient or modern—from these young throats can only be fresh and beautiful.

Miss Evelyn Sheffield Will Play Leading Role at Shorter

Rome, Ga., November 15.—One of the leading roles of "Dulcy," clever three-act comedy by George S. Kaufman and Marc Connelly, which will be presented on Monday evening, November 17, by the Shorter players, will be played by Miss Evelyn Sheffield, of Atlanta. Hers is a leading male role, that of William Parker. As Dulcinea, Miss Margaret Hendricks, of Tifton, will play the part of heroine and opposite her will play Miss Edith Hughes, Bartow, Fla., as Gordon Smith. Other members of the cast include: "C. Roger Forbes," Miss Mabla Kent, Savannah; "Angela Forbes," Miss Lucy Shivers, Eatonton; "Schuyler Van Dyke," Miss Frances Johnson, Washington; "Tom Sterrett," Miss Vara Cochran; Camilla; "Vincent Leach," Miss Mildred Clover; "Blair Patterson," Miss Elizabeth Bryan; "Henry," Miss Mildred McCord. It is probable that "Dulcy" will be presented at an early date under the auspices of the dramatic club of Mercer university.

At the monthly meeting of the International Relations club held on Wednesday evening, several national subjects were discussed as follows: "Calvin Coolidge, Summary of His Presidency," Miss Ida Young, Cedartown; "Dawes, The Man and His Work," Miss Helen Methvin, Eastman; "The Republican Platform," Miss Dorothy Ryan, Martin, Tenn.; "Analysis of the Recent National Election," Stephen Cornish, professor of social sciences.

The social event of the week in which general interest was centered was the annual Y. W. C. A. party which took place at Maplehurst, President and Mrs. D. J. Blocker, acting as hosts. A charming little play written in verse by one of the students, Miss Lucy Shivers, of Eatonton, was presented. Love, Truth, Friendship, Faith, Happiness, Beauty were impersonated by students in costume. Miss Louise Rumble, president of the Y. W. C. A., acted as queen and the cast of characters included: Love, Miss Shivers; Truth, Miss Natalie Barton, Loanoke, La.; Faith, Miss Ruby Mae Sherard, Rome; Beauty, Miss Mary Lynn Brogden, Kenwood; Happiness, Miss Caroline Jelks, Quitman; Friendship, Miss Jewel Henry, Cordele; fairies, Misses Margaret Mustin, Savannah; Leila Mae Bonner, Godfrey; Agnes Ketchersid, Eatonton; Katherine Gaines, Doctan; Eleanor Joiner, Camilla; herolds, Misses Margaret Haynes and Marah Sanford; pages, Dan Blocker and Dora Ware.

Miss Cecile Huff, of Savannah, who attended the State Baptist Volunteer convention held in Macon November 1-3, was honored with election to the vice presidency of the organization. Miss Agnes Ketchersid, of Eatonton, was recently elected student treasurer of Shorter, a signal honor.

Armistice day was appropriately celebrated at Shorter with a service at the chapel hour, Dr. W. M. Seay, of Atlanta, being the speaker. The subject of the eloquent address was "Armistice Day in Its Relation to Christian Patriotism."

West End Woman's Club To Give Benefit-Bridge Luncheon

The West End Women's club held its regular business meeting on Wednesday, November 12. Mrs. E. W. Brogden, president, presided.

Mrs. A. R. Burt, chairman of the music department, whose committee sponsored the Mayer concert at Wesley Memorial hall on Friday, November 7, reported that the concert was a success and the proceeds were given to the building fund.

Mrs. George Grant, treasurer, stated that dues for the year 1924-25 were payable and might be sent to her by mail at No. 9 Wellington street.

Miss Willie May Brooks, chairman of public welfare department, reported upon the pancake supper of Tuesday evening, and stated that the proceeds will go to the community chest.

Division 3 of the building committee will sponsor a bridge-luncheon on Friday, November 21, at 1 o'clock at the Elks' club. The proceeds will go to the building fund of the club and to the Tallulah Falls school. A silver spoon will be given as table prize for high score and many draw prizes have been donated by club members. Reservations must be made in advance and may be made by calling Mrs. L. M. Stanley at West 2613-J or Mrs. M. B. Jones at West 2182-W, or Mrs. H. H. Turner at West 1405-J.

Mrs. A. D. Gregory, chairman of ways and means, who was chairman of the committee of souvenirs of the state federation, announced that her committee would sponsor a play to be given during the first week in December, the proceeds to go to the building fund of the club.

During the past week the state federation, assembled, indorsed the movement initiated by the literary department of the club to modernize the registration laws of the state of Georgia.

Mrs. L. F. McClelland has donated to the club two silk indoor United States flags. A committee has been appointed to select suitable flag-staffs for these flags and present them at the next meeting of the club, at which time the literary department will conduct a study of patriotic American ballads. This regular meeting of the literary department will be held Wednesday, November 19, at 3 o'clock in the club rooms at 305 Gordon street.

Woman's Civic Club of West End Will Have Literary Program

The literary committee of the Woman's Civic club of West End will hold its regular monthly meeting Wednesday, November 19, at 3 o'clock, at the club, with Mrs. J. W. Mozley, chairman, presiding.

The subject of the afternoon discussion will be "Told by an Idiot," by Rose Macaulay. In addition to vocal and instrumental numbers, the following program has been arranged: "Social Life in England"—(a) "During Victorian Period," Mrs. W. C. Meredith; (b) "During Edwardian Period," Mrs. J. C. Landers; (c) "During Georgian Period," Mrs. R. C. Bradford.

"Women of the Novel," by Mrs. Murray Howard.

Round-table discussion of "Told by an Idiot," by Mrs. Arthur Merrill, leader.

The hospital committee, Mrs. C. C. Shipley, chairman, has undertaken to supply a section for the Needlework guild. In order to do this, 144 new garments and $2.50 in money must be in the hands of the committee before Thanksgiving. Mrs. Shipley asks that each club member either give or secure two new garments and get them to the club next Wednesday, between the hours of 3 and 5, or notify her at West 1226-W. These garments will be distributed to the different charitable institutions of the city.

Friday November 7, the welfare committee, Mrs. H. M. Simpson, chairman, was entertained at a spend-the-day party by Mrs. O. M. Bowing. The object of the gathering was to complete articles for the bazaar which is to be held December 1, under the direction of Mrs. A. H. McDonald. A delightful luncheon was served at noon, those present being: Mrs. H. M. Simpson, Mrs. A. R. Kirby, Mrs. Rogers Lively, Mrs. C. C. Chamberlin, Mrs. Ella Roberts, Mrs. George Tumlin, Mrs. Murray Howard and Mrs. O. M. Bowling.

Mrs. J. A. Murphey, chairman of music, will present a radio program during the week, date and numbers to be announced in the radio column of WSB.

The executive board will meet Wednesday, November 26, at 2:30 and will be followed by the regular business meeting, at which time the report of the convention will be given by Mrs. Arthur Merrill.

PEACH TREES TO BE PLANTED BY COMMITTEE

Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the Atlanta Woman's club, will launch a movement at an early date through the forestry committee of the Woman's club, of which Mrs. Guy Woolford is chairman, urging all residents and property owners of Peachtree street and Peachtree road to plant flowering peach trees on their property.

Peachtree is a thoroughfare, perhaps known over the entire country, and it is Mrs. Sharp's cherished desire to see a real object in the name. One can imagine what a gorgeous sight this widely-famed street would present if during the early spring months in every yard, lawn and estate, from the business section of the city out as far as Peachtree road extends, there were blossoming peach trees.

There is a variety, according to Mrs. Sharp, that is more noted for its blossoms than fruit and is said to blossom with much more profusion. A committee meeting will be held by the forestry division of the club at an early date, when Mrs. Woolford, as chairman, will invite the people of Peachtree to attend and hear a discussion and plans for this interesting movement, which is especially in line with a "city beautiful" scheme for Atlanta.

At a meeting of the flower-lovers' division of the Woman's club recently, it was decided to adopt some definite activities, such as beautifying the grounds of some special charitable institution of the city, and a committee was appointed to investigate the needs of these institutions along these lines and to start work as soon as possible.

Social Notes From Bessie Tift.

The Theta Chi Omega, honor society of Bessie Tift college, made its annual debut to the student body Thursday morning when the members of the society had charge of a program at the regular chapel hour. The members of Theta Chi Omega at present are: Emory Drake, Griffin, president; Inez Shaw, Ethel Key, Krema Bonner, Edna West, Mary Willis, Dorothy Holland. The honorary members are Miss Ragan, of the history department, and Dr. Mary S. Steele, head of English.

The Writers' club held initiation ceremonies last Saturday afternoon and entertained the new initiates afterwards with an informal tea and program. Members of the organization are chosen on the basis of literary attainments.

Following are the members: Edna West, president; Verna Moody, vice president; Sara E. Durham, secretary and treasurer; Annie Barton, critic; Amanda Harrison, reporter; Junia Burke, program committee; Evelyn James, Ethel Key, Katy Wade, Charlye Watson, Nelle Cobb and Mrs. A. B. Bonsteel. The honorary faculty members are Miss Junia Osterhout, of the English department; Dr. Mary S. Steele, head of English, and Rabun Brantley, of the department of journalism.

The junior class basketball team won the fall tournament when they took the first-year team into camp by the count of 6-5 in the final game played Thursday afternoon.

The lineup for the juniors: West and Goodwin, forwards; Hudson, center; Davis and Watson, guards. For the freshmen: Allen and Woodall, forwards; Hill, center; Kirkland and Taylor, guards.

Soccer activities have taken on new life since the ending of the basketball season for the fall. The soccer field has been completed and nearly every afternoon Dr. Kurtz, athletic coach, has charge of a large squad of candidates for instruction in the game.

Mrs. O. P. Ensign, of the voice department, gave a vocal concert under the auspices of the Atlanta Musical club at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel Wednesday morning.

Thursday, Mrs. Ensign sang for the Rotarians of Macon.

Miss Ethel Abbott, of the department of music, accompanied Mrs. Ensign.

Three freshmen and two juniors won berths on the varsity basketball team selected by the athletic board of control during the week. The freshmen are Mae Hill, of Forsyth, center; Sol Woodall, of Milner, and Lucille Allen, Marietta, forwards; Bill Davis, Douglas, and Charlye Watson, Baconton, guards.

The varsity is chosen by the board each year. The board is composed of two representatives from each class and the heads of all the athletic teams. Dean Alfriend and Dr. Kurtz represent the faculty.

Miss Ethel Abbott, of the piano department, announces a new musical composition, "In My Canoe," which she dedicates to Miss Dora Brinson, head of piano at Bessie Tift.

Miss Abbott will receive the song from the publishers at an early date and hopes to make a wide distribution of them throughout the state of Georgia. She has written several songs heretofore that have proven popular with the public, one of which she dedicated to Mrs. O. P. Ensign, head of voice.

Cecilians To Give Comedy Drama.

The Cecilians, dramatic organization of the North Avenue Presbyterian school, will present their first production of the season Friday evening, November 21, at the Georgia Tech Y. M. C. A., at 8 o'clock. The selection to be given is a charming comedy-drama by Ernest Denny, "All-of-a-Sudden Peggy." This is a Samuel French publication of note and has proved successful with amateur dramatic clubs.

The officers of the club for this semester are: Miss Mary Ellis, president; Miss Dorothy Fluker, vice president; Miss Margaret Cochran, secretary; Miss Flora Mae Tumlin, treasurer.

MRS. STRIPLIN WILL PRESIDE ON WEDNESDAY

The citizenship department of the Atlanta Woman's club will meet Wednesday morning at 10:15 o'clock in the palm room of the clubhouse. The chairman, Mrs. R. M. Striplin, will preside.

The study of the "Constitution" is the theme for the year's program. The first lesson paved the way for the beginning of this present more intensive study. The speakers will introduce each state in the order it signed the constitution; give a short sketch of the men who signed; the particular thing each state contributed to the constitution; something of its early settlers and something outstanding connected with that state. On Wednesday the first state to ratify, Delaware, will be discussed.

The program is as follows:

"The Early Settlers," Mrs. W. D. Farnham; "The Part Delaware Contributed to the Constitution," Mrs. Paul LaBlanc; "Sketch of the Life of John Dickinson, Signer for the First State, Delaware," Mrs. Ben Simcox; "Why Delaware is Called the 'Blue Hen State,'" Mrs. Charles Loridans.

Miss Sara Hogg will link up this early study of Delaware with the present, giving us the political and economic viewpoint. Her subject will be "Concentration or Consolidation of Business," discussing the Delaware corporation charters and some changes following the recent election. "Current Events," Mrs. A. G. Holmer.

Miss Hogg, who has consented to address the citizenship department on the national and political question that this department has outlined, is eminently qualified to handle these questions. Miss Hogg was a student for three summers at the University of Georgia, is a graduate of George Washington university, at Washington, D. C., receiving her bachelor of arts degree. She has her master's degree from the University of Wisconsin.

While in Washington Miss Hogg resided at the Colonial Dames Club and as a member of the American Association of University Women saw much of interest in the national capitol during the war. The senate debates on the treaty, suffrage, railroads, Pershing's return, Wilson's retirement to private life and the disarmament conference. Last summer Miss Hogg attended the Institute of Politics at Williams college, Williamstown, Mass, where a group of 300 of the leading people in various fields—college professors, diplomats, army and navy officers, with many others distinguished in other fields—met for discussion of public issues. She is able to direct this citizenship department into a broader field of thinking and stimulate a deeper interest in world events.

She is a Georgia girl and is teaching civics in the Hoke Smith school.

Mrs. Ashby To Lecture.

A meeting of unusual interest on psychological lines will be held Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the mahogany room of the Ansley hotel. Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby, psychologist, will give the lecture on "The Conscious Use of Mind, and How It Develops Personality." There will be questions and answers on current psychological topics. The poems, "Each in His Own Tongue" and "The Name," will be interpreted.

This meeting is open to the public and both men and women who are interested are invited to attend.

SHORT-STORY CLASSES WILL BE STARTED

Mrs. W. F. Melton, chairman of the literature division of the Atlanta Woman's Club, announces the classes in short-story writing will begin Tuesday afternoon, November 18, in the palm room of the clubhouse.

Mrs. Adelaide Howell Bower, well-known newspaper woman, will conduct these classes and already several have registered as members. There will be a class held every Tuesday afternoon for eight weeks, making a total of eight lessons in the course. The hour for study will be from 3 to 4 o'clock and Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the club, urges the women and young ladies who have an ambition to write short stories, to register for the classes before Tuesday of the coming week.

East Point Woman's Club.

The club met Friday afternoon in the Central school building with Mrs. George Christain, acting president pro tem. Dues were collected, the minutes of the last meeting read and stood approved. Reports from chairmen of committees were submitted, and unfinished business disposed of.

Mrs. Ed L. Humphreys was appointed chairman of paper sale. It was moved and carried that the club have a class in basketry in the near future, and plans for the annual bazar were discussed.

Mrs. J. C. McKenzie was unanimously elected president. Mrs. McKenzie has served in this capacity before, and the club is to be congratulated upon her acceptance of the leadership. Mrs. McKenzie, who was a charter member of the club, has been away for a few years, and the members extend to her a warm welcome.

College Park Club To Meet Wednesday.

The College Park Woman's club will hold its next regular meeting on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Presbyterian church.

Mrs. L. O. Freeman, president of the club, will preside at the business session, when matters of vital importance will be discussed. Final arrangements for the bazar which is to be held in a vacant store across the street from the passenger depot on November 21 and 22 (Friday and Saturday) will be completed. At this bazar there will be on sale articles of needlework, both fancy and practical, art novelties, jams, jellies, cakes, at very reasonable prices. Dinners will be served at noon and night on both days. Generous plates will be served for 50 cents each.

Wednesday's program is in charge of the home economics department and Mrs. L. M. Love is the chairman in charge. She will present Miss Rosa Spierman, of the department of home economics of the Atlanta Girls' High school, an authority in her department, who will be the principal speaker of the afternoon.

Docena Club Is Entertained.

Mrs. Glyndon Catlin was hostess Thursday afternoon to the members of the Docena club. There were several visitors also.

After a game of rook, Miss Annie Maude Hudson was presented with prize for top score, Mrs. S. S. Howie winning guest prize.

Those enjoying Mrs. Catlin's hospitality were Mrs. S. S. Howle, Mrs. S. W. Hatton, Mrs. James Stones, Mrs. E. B. Townson, Mrs. J. C. Meaders, Mrs. L. J. McGee, Mrs. Claud Roark, Mrs. F. H. Camp, Mrs. Robert Catlin, Miss Annie Maude Hudson, Mrs. A. M. Chestnut and Mrs. A. J. Ivie.

WOMAN'S CLUB TO ENTERTAIN DISABLED VETS

The hospital committee of the Atlanta Woman's club will entertain the disabled soldiers at Government Hospital 48 with an elaborate program next Tuesday evening, according to Mrs. C. R. Justi, chairman of the committee.

Mrs. E. Raymond Johnson has been appointed as program chairman for the occasion. There will be an orchestra to furnish music, several vocal numbers will be given and Miss Nellie Sullivan's dancing pupils will stage a very spectacular program of dancing.

These programs are given the soldiers by this committee every month and it is an occasion greatly anticipated by our disabled service men.

Mission Society Plans Program.

The November literary and social meeting of the Woman's Missionary society of Druid Hills Methodist church will be held on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Sunday school auditorium.

The Bible study for the afternoon will be a continuation of the study in stewardship, and the topic, "The Steward and the World," will be discussed by Mrs. Comer Woodward, who has recently come to Atlanta from Dallas, Texas.

Under the division of the program dealing with the home base, Dr. R. B. Eleazer will discuss the subject, "The Biggest Business in the World." In the foreign division, China will be featured by radiograms in which a number of members will take part. Mrs. Floyd Jennings will sing.

The members are asked to respond to roll call with Bible quotations in praise and thanksgiving.

Tea will be served during the social half hour following. The public is invited.

Mrs. Callaway Honored By Y. W. C. A. Directors.

In the appointment of Mrs. S. Clayton Callaway as chairman of the Y. W. C. A. cafeteria, the directors of the local body state that they have honored her with one of the most responsible positions in the association, as the cafeteria is one of their income bearing departments of which all revenue above running expenses is used in the promotion of Y. W. C. A. work with girls. Last year the total number served when the cafeteria was located in the Peachtree arcade reached 171,463, with the average price for a meal reaching 31 cents. The cafeteria is now located in the Calhoun building, third floor, and with the increase in patronage, Mrs. Callaway's responsibility as chairman will require much of her time and attention. Serving food at the lowest possible rate in order to keep prices within the income of employed girls is only one of the problems of the cafeteria.

For eight years the honored woman served as secretary of the association. She did an outstanding war-time service and was one of the leaders in the enlarged work that the association management has accomplished since the world war period. Serving with Mrs. Callaway as a cafeteria committee are Mrs. Stephen Barnett, Mrs. Guy Woolford and Mrs. W. R. Prescott.

Season of Prayer To Be Held.

The Christian women of Atlanta are invited and urged to be present at the "season of prayer" in behalf of the year's work. "The Volunteers of America," 32 Garnett street, beginning Tuesday, November 18, from 2:30 to 3:30 o'clock, lasting through Friday, November 21, the same hours.

Mrs. Ashby To Lecture.

A meeting of unusual interest on psychological lines will be held Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the mahogany room of the Ansley hotel. Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby, psychologist, will give the lecture on "The Conscious Use of Mind, and How It Develops Personality." There will be questions and answers on current psychological topics. The poems, "Each in His Own Tongue" and "The Name," will be interpreted.

This meeting is open to the public and both men and women who are interested are invited to attend.

A 12-in-One Cream

Applies my best beauty helps

By Edna Wallace Hopper

In my Youth Cream alone my experts combine a dozen great beauty helps.

The basis is an ideal cream. Then it contains products of both lemon and strawberry. Then all the best modern science knows to foster and feed, to soften and protect the skin.

My marvelous complexion shows what such cream does. My rosy and girlish complexion at my age. No mere cold cream could do that.

My Youth Cream comes in two types—cold cream and vanishing. I use the cold cream as a night cream. The vanishing cream daytimes as a powder base. So this cream is always on my face to foster and protect.

All toilet counters now offer that identical cream to you—Edna Wallace Hopper's Youth Cream—at 60c per jar.

You will be amazed to learn how much a cream can do. A cream with multiple effects. Yet all these things together cost no more than common cream alone.

Mail this coupon for a sample to try. My Beauty Book comes with it. Let it bring to you what it brings to me.

Dean Southwick Speaks at Wesleyan.

Dean Henry Lawrence Southwick, of the Emerson School of Oratory, read Othello in the Wesleyan chapel Saturday night, November 15, before a large and interested audience. Dean Southwick has been for many years the foremost and best-known interpreter on the American platform.

A Wesleyan banquet, including the boarding, the conservatory and town students, will be given in the Wesleyan dining-room Monday evening, November 17, at 7:30 o'clock.

Wesleyan college has completed within a little over half the allotted time its contract with the General Education board, of New York. The board signed a contract with Wesleyan in 1922 promising to give $100,000 if Wesleyan would raise $200,000 in return. The contract allowed five years for raising the money, but it was raised in two years and seven months. The working endowment of Wesleyan is now, including the conference appropriations, approximately $600,000. "It is through the generosity of R. J. Taylor, Macon, who advanced the college a $100,000 loan on the endowment fund, and through other collections made on the same fund that Wesleyan is able to fulfill the contract so early," announced Dr. Quillian.

The freshman commission, which consists of 20 girls from the freshman class whose duty is to assist the executive committee in the minor offices, has been selected by the president of student government and Y. W. C. A. The following were chosen: Misses Sara Clyde Adams, Lavonia; Frances Allen, Moultrie; Helen Cannon, Cordele; Louise Clark, Cartersville; Sara Crittenden, Shellman; Mary Edna Dowling, Miami, Fla.; Le Vert Franks, Sandersville; Anna Hoyle, Columbus; Mary Lou Martin, La Grange; Amelia McAlloater, Winter Haven, Fla.; Wattin Mitchell, Como, Miss.; Vivian Pinson, Sylvester; Sara Sheppard, Cordele; Mildred Tarver, Lorraine Wilson, Bartow, Fla.; Edith Belcher, Cairo; Virginia Cooper, Demopolis, and Frances Perry, Jacksonville, Fla.

Captains of the four basketball teams have been elected, who with the aid of the physical directors will select the teams to play Thanksgiving. They are as follows: Senior, Ruby Tanner, of Wrens; junior, Louise Stubbs, of Macon; sophomore, Mary Michaux, of Miami, Fla.; freshman, Ruth Ricketson, of Macon.

The "Heart Strings," including the girls from the sixth district, form the newest home-town club to be definitely organized at Wesleyan. The president is Loulie Forrester, who holds the same office in the Macon Girls' association. Other officers include Elizabeth Coates, vice president; Adlie Beall Early, counsellor; Mamie Harmon and Freida Kaplan, junior leaders.

Miss Jennie Loyall, alumnae secretary of Wesleyan college, has returned from the annual board meeting of the Southern Woman's Educational alliance, which was held in Richmond, Va., October 31.

College Park Voters Conduct Campaign.

Under the leadership of its president, Mrs. Dan C. Lyle, the College Park League of Voters is conducting an active campaign for the registration of all the voters in College Park. The question most often asked is, "What must the men and women of College Park do in order that they may register and vote for the new mayor and three councilmen on December 1."

The answer is: First, one must have been a resident of College Park 30 days, Fulton county six months and Georgia one year; second, one must have paid all state, county and College Park taxes for 1923, including poll tax (men and women over 60 years old are exempt from poll tax); third, one must register in both Fulton county and in College Park.

The county registration books are always open at the tax collector's office at the Fulton county courthouse. For the convenience of College Park voters, a Fulton county deputy will be at the College Park city hall on Tuesday, November 18, from 10 to 4 o'clock. The College Park registration books will be opened only until 6 o'clock Thursday, November 20, after which time they will be closed until December 2.

Andrew College News Notes.

The Athletic association entertained the student body Saturday evening with a tacky party in the gymnasium. The students entered wholeheartedly into the occasion, and various and unique costumes crowded the floor. Prizes, a large stick of candy and a package of chewing gum, were awarded to the tackiest couple. The winners were Misses Julia Jenkins Maud McGregor. Miss Lottie Lewis acted as master of the games, and kept things moving at a lively rate. Miss Pauline Pike gave a humorous reading. "The Crooked-mouth Family" and Miss Mae Walker played the saxaphone. Delicious punch was served during the evening.

Dr. Chas. Lane, of Macon, is conducting the annual fall revival in the Y. W. C. A. hall.

The sophomores were victors over the juniors in the last test game to decide which team should play on Thanksgiving. The big game of the season will be played Thanksgiving between the seniors and sophomores.

Bottoms, L. C. Grant, Jr., L. A. Coffey, T. G. Phillips and W. O. Bass.

There were 40 young ladies present, including several from out-of-town schools.

The chaperons were: Dr. and Mrs. Stevens Lancy, Dr. and Mrs. Lamar Taylor, and faculty member, Dr. Hoyt Simpson. The Dixieland Serenaders furnished the music.

Cosmopolitan Club Is Entertained.

On Friday afternoon the Cosmopolitan Study club met with Mrs. Ernest G. Bentley and Mrs. W. B. McClary at the home of Mrs. Bentley on Peachtree road. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Josephus Camp, the business session was presided over by Mrs. J. D. Conley, vice president.

"Merton of the Movies," by Harry Leon Wilson, was the subject for the afternoon. "The story of the book" was told by Mrs. Conley. A paper, "Screen Favorites," by Mrs. C. G. Trowbridge; piano solos, "Barcarole," from Oberon, air from "Il Trovatore," by Mrs. Bentley; a paper, "The Miracle of Modern Photography," was read by Mrs. McClary.

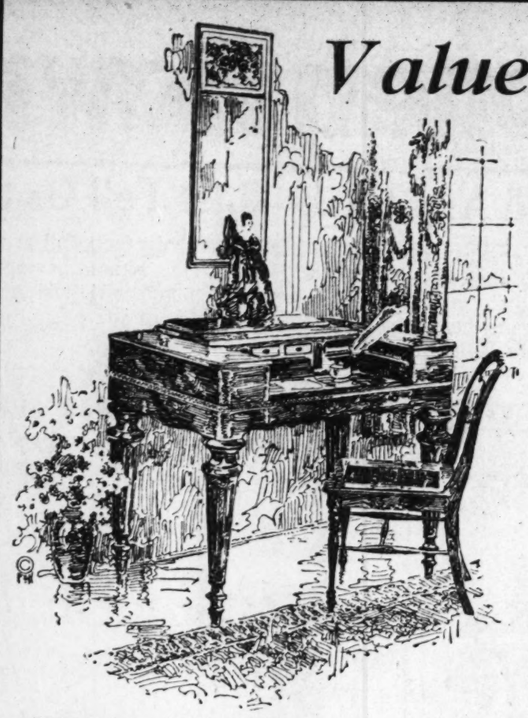

A contest was held and the first prize was won by Mrs. J. D. Conley, while Mrs. Durant Smith was awarded the consolation.

Mrs. Williams Is Hostess to Club.

Mrs. R. E. Williams entertained her bridge club at her home on Poplar circle during the past week.

The house was beautifully decorated with autumn flowers. Mrs. L. F. Johnson was awarded top-score prize and Mrs. O. Y. Layton the prize for low score.

Those present were: Miss Gussie Vandergriff, Mrs. L. F. Johnson, Mrs. Paul Urban, Mrs. O. Y. Layton, Mrs. Paul Garcia, Mrs. Rowe Brinkley, Mrs. W. R. Freeman, Mrs. E. E. Broughton, Mrs. W. T. Walker, Mrs. Mayo, Mrs. Sally Nort, Mrs. DeLoach and Mrs. J. C. Tenick.

Classes Will Be Conducted at Y. W. H. A.

The classes of the Young Women's Hebrew association are well under way and are bringing enthusiasm and interest to the members. Classes in cooking, interior decorating, basketball, physical education, reduction classes, child psychology, etc., are being conducted in the Jewish Educational alliance at 90 Capitol avenue until the new building, which is being altered, will have been completed.

The first class on child psychology met Wednesday morning with Mrs. Edith Wing Peacock in charge. She is a noted psychologist and gave a most interesting lecture on "Why Mothers Should Study Child Psychology." The next class will be held Monday between 11 and 12 o'clock. Her subject will be prenatal culture, physical development of the child and how mothers may stay young and keen their health. The textbook used by the class will be "Psychology of Childhood," by Worsworthy Whitley, of Columbia university. The various leaders have splendid plans for the winter's work.

The youngest member of the "Y" was enrolled this week. She is the daughter of the president of the Y. W. H. A., and is just two weeks old, Miss Symabelle Bach. A recent feature added to the work of the above organization is an employment bureau for its members. Mrs. Victor Kriegshaber is in charge.

New officers for the coming year will be elected at the December meeting.

All classes will be held at 90 Capitol avenue until the remodeling of the clubhouse is completed. After Monday, November 10, classes will assemble according to schedule. Classes will begin promptly.

Athletics—Miss Lucy Adams, instructor. Basketball, Wednesdays from 7 to 8 p. m.; physical education, Saturdays from 7 to 8 p. m.; reduction class, Mondays and Thursdays from 11 to 12 a. m.

Domestic Science—Miss Mary Olive Whitehead, instructor. Cooking, Tuesdays from 6 to 8 p. m.; interior decorating, Thursdays from 6 to 8 p. m.

Child Psychology — Mrs. Wesley Peacock, instructor. Child psychology, Tuesdays from 4 to 5 p. m.; Wednesdays from 10:30 to 11:30 a. m.

Dramatics—Dramatic club, 7 to 9 on Saturdays. A competent instructor will be in charge. Classes will be formed upon request of ten or more people.

Miss Schaid's Class Goes on Hike.

On Friday evening, October 13, the Sunday school class of Miss Helen Schaid from Capitol Avenue Baptist church held their monthly get-together meeting. The class hiked from the church out to Kill Kare kamp on Lakewood drive, where they found large bonfires set and burning, and everything in readiness for the wiener roast, which was the feature of the evening.

Among those present were: Messrs. Hutchins and Durant, who furnished some splendid music; Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Hardman, Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Garrett, Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Monroe, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Milner and little son, Miss Helen Schaid, Miss Margaret Householder, Miss Sara Hardman, Miss Eva Birch, Miss Grace Hardman, Miss Jimmie Lester, Miss Pauline Barton, Miss Kate Meadows, Mrs. J. D. Tuten and Mrs. N. D. Johnson.

Mrs. Williams' Pupils Give Joint Recital.

The violin pupils of Mrs. Jack Williams and the piano pupils of Mrs. J. B. Johnston gave a joint recital on November 10 at the home of Mrs. Johnston in East Atlanta. Those taking part were: Marguerite Pefinis, Evelyn Sherrill, Elsie Jones, Grace Langley, Sarah Ryan, Ethel Crowley, Allene Crowley, Hugh Fitzgerald, William Welb, Pete Pefinis, Lamar Godwin, Dorsey Flowers, Theron Storey and Marion Rice.

Habersham Chapter, D. A. R., Honors Birthday of Mrs. Peel

Habersham hall was the scene of a most beautiful memorial service on Saturday afternoon, November 15, when the birthday of the late Mrs. William Lawson Peel was honored by the Joseph Habersham chapter, D. A. R., she having founded this chapter.

Dr. Blanche Loveridge spoke most eloquently of what Mrs. Peel meant to Atlanta, of her enthusiastic patriotism, of her unbounded zeal in all works for the benefit of her city, state and her country, and the general uplift of humanity.

Beautiful Music.

Frank Cundell, who is widely known for his cultured and beautiful voice, sang "Crossing the Bar," by Willeby, and "Recessional," by Dekoven, two favorite hymns of Mrs. Peel. Mr. Cundell was ably accompanied on the piano by Miss Eda Bartholomew. These songs so beautifully rendered touched deeply the hearts of all present and brought the irreparable loss of Mrs. Peel very close to her loved ones, her friends, and to all the chapter members who feel keenly the loss of her great personality and able leadership.

Dr. Loveridge also spoke eloquently on the subject of armistice day, expressing a regret that this great day did not as yet seem fully appreciated by the American people, but believed that its broad and deep significance would be more deeply felt as the years go by.

The program was arranged by Mrs. John A. Perdue, an ex-regent of the Habersham chapter, and at present chairman of birthdays.

An interesting business meeting was held preceding the memorial program, it being the regular monthly meeting, and was presided over by Mrs. Walter Scott Coleman, regent of the Joseph Habersham chapter. Many matters of importance were discussed and plans perfected for the Georgia products dinner to be given at Habersham hall during the first week in December, the date to be announced later.

Very interesting reports were made on the various lines of work represented in the chapter by the following chairmen of the different committees: Mrs. C. Decker Tebo, chairman of Armistice day; Mrs. Patrick Bray, press chairman; Mrs. Earl Kimbell, correct use of flags; Mrs. Hugh Powell, memberships; Mrs. A. L. Milligan, telephone committee; Mrs. J. C. Gentry, house committee; Mrs. A. R. Colcord, Americanization.

New Members.

An enjoyable event was the reception of eight new members, presented by Mrs. C. D. Tebo, registrar, as follows: Mrs. J. Wayne Moore, Mrs. Ebenezer F. Pharr, Mrs. James Waddell Setze, Mrs. Ira P. Stone, Mrs. William H. Taylor, Mrs. Elizabeth Mitchell, Mrs. F. O. Stone and Miss Wyndall Price.

Mrs. Allison Greene, assisted by the reception committee, received the guests.

Better Homes Committee Plans Exhibit at Food Exposition

The national Better Homes in America committee, which is represented locally by the Better Homes in Atlanta board, of which Mrs. Newton C. Wing is chairman, will have an educational exhibit at the Atlanta Pure Food exposition taking place at the auditorium armory this week.

A suit of rooms consisting of a dining room, breakfast room and kitchen will be furnished and equipped in the most efficient and artistic manner. It will be remembered with pride by Atlantans that in 1923 the local committee won the third prize in the national "Better Homes week" campaign, which is headed by President Coolidge and the Hon. Herbert Hoover; and in 1924 carried off the second prize, so that much interest will be taken in the auditorium exhibit.

Representing educational, civic and club agencies on the Atlanta committee are Mayor Sims, Willis A. Sutton, G. C. Bowden, Mrs. H. G. Hastings, Mrs. T. T. Stevens, Mrs. George Howsmon, Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, Roy Mather, Mrs. Arthur Hazzard, treasurer, and Mrs. J. H. Lorenz, secretay.

Mrs. Wing has appointed Mrs. Stacy Ernest Hill as special chairman for this week's exhibit. Mrs. Hill is well known in Atlanta as an authority on equipment and was vice chairman of the committee on furnishings, which had charge of the prize-winning better homes exhibit last May. Mrs. Hill is securing splendid cooperation from Ray Bergen, state secretary of the Retail Food Dealers' association, and from leading Atlanta merchants.

In addition to the members of the advisory board, who will assist in receiving at the Better Homes headquarters this week at the auditorium, a hostess committee has been appointed under Mrs. J. H. Lorenz, secretary of the committee, and Mrs. Edward Hardaway Smith, who was "house mother" at Better Home No. 2 last May.

Serving each afternoon from 2 to 6 are Mrs. J. L. Wheeler and committee on Tuesday, Mrs. P. C. Fabel and Mrs. Ben Perryman on Wednesday, Mrs. W. D. Williamson and Mrs. Arthur Hazzard on Thursday; on Friday, Mrs. Arthur Merrill and her committe, and on Saturday, Mrs. DeLos Hill and committee.

On the evening committee under Mrs. Smith are Mrs. Pierce Power and Mrs. W. B. Savell for Tuesday night; Mrs. J. W. Mozely and Mrs. Sefton Strickland on Wednesday night; on Thursday night, Mrs. Tully Brooks and Mrs. Otis Witherspoon; Mrs. L. Horace Presson and Mrs. A. L. Smith on Friday night and Mrs. Murray Howard and Mrs. T. S. Sells on Saturday night.

The following chairmen of the 1924 subcommittees are asked to assist whenever possible during the week: Mrs. James Logan, Mrs. Henry Bernard Scott, Miss Clara Lee Cone, Miss Maud Greene, Mrs. Cleve Webb, Mrs. Roger Wilson, Mrs. Verna O'Neal Watkins, Mrs. George Ripley, Mrs. Calvin Stanford, Mrs. J. C. Landers and Mrs. Frank Naedele.

Preparations for the 1924 work of the Better Homes committee will begin the latter part of November.

Brenau College Social News.

The first symphony concert of the college year was given on Sunday afternoon by the members of the Brenau orchestra, under the direction of E. B. Michaelis. The members of the orchestra who were on the program Sunday afternoon were Misses Bertha Thalley, Dorothy McDonald, Eva Buckner, Carrobel Nelson, Dorothy Lawrence, Mittie Steen, Lyda Bowers, Mary Wilkinson, Willie Ogden, Marjorie McElreath, Doris McDonald, Louise DuBose, Marion Lindsey, Sibyl Strickland, Edra Hess, Mary Estes, Margaret Palmour, Anna Bryant, Catherine McQuary, Vestina Smith, Ruth Andrews, Susan Mathis, Bessye Allen, Minnie Nelson, Velma Hollingsworth, Geraldine Ellis, Adelaide Atherton, Eugene Michealis and Herbert Michaelis.

The "faculty party," which was given at the gymnasium on Friday evening by one of the endowment fund teams, under the direction of Miss Ethel Bowers, was a costume party.

On Saturday evening, November 8, the members of Delta Zeta sorority entertained in their lovely new home, which is a typical Swiss lodge, at a dinner-dance. The members of the chapter and guests who were present were Misses Leah Beth Conner, Lorene and Gladys Wakefield, Sarah Bridge, Marie Newsome, Sibly and Cecile Strickland, Nina Jones, Ruth Stoner, Louise Schoolfield, Mildred Hunt, Georgia Cornelius, Jonnie Aiken, Pearl Jones, Thelma Peterson, Edith Jones, Louise Stokes, Miss E. B. Mason, Miss Maude Fisk, Miss Winfield, Mrs. Hendricks, Miss Grace Jean Salls, Miss Annie Nell Daniel, Mr. Reid, Mr. Griffin, Mr. McCormick and Misses Ruth ann Stovall May Hurst, Virginia Wells, Juanese Collier, Elizabeth Harper, Marion Brown, Una Cornelius, Minna Schoolfield, Lavinia Sewell, Beulah Bayte, Nan Swan, Doris and Dorothy McDonald, Mary Peck, Elsie Kuck, Sara Hooks, Freddie Pilcher, Janie Lee Hardy, Dorothy Lawrence, Virginia McGaha, Marie Fry, Elizabeth Felts, Florence West, Candace Bryant, Mary Jane Oliver, Ruth McMurray, Ione Parkinson, Patsey Jane Williams, Mary Wood, Bernice White, Pauline Foute, Katherine McQuary, Austine Haralson.

On Thursday at the noon hour, D. J. W. Daniel, dean of Clemson college, was introduced to the student body by Professor C. W. Griffin.

The first student recital of the year was given on Thursday evening at 8:30 o'clock in the auditorium to an enthusiastic audience. The following students made their initial bow to a Gainesville audience: Misses Bertha Thalley, Catherine McQuary, Lena Deaver, Dorothy Thurmond, Kelsey Howington.

Dr. Henry Lawrence Southwick, dean of the Emerson School of Expression, was presented by the Cushman club Monday evening in one of the most delightful of the Shakespearean comedies, "Twelfth Night." Immediately after the recital, Dr. Southwick was tendered an informal reception in studios in Overton hall by the members of the Cushman club. During the hours punch and cakes were served by Misses Louise Edwards, Marie Fry and Elizabeth Felts.

"Armistice day" was observed in a very appropriate manner on November 11 by uniting with the citizens of Gainesville in the program which was given by the Baptist church.

The members of the Zeta Phi sorority of the school of oratory were in charge of the vesper service of the Young Woman's Christian association on Sunday evening. Miss Elizabeth Felts conducted the service.

A recent dramatic art play was given by the members of the school of oratory under the direction of Miss Elsie Buckner, "Six Who Pass While the Lentils Boil." In this play appeared the following students, who did some exceptionally fine work: Misses Lucile Clark, Sarah Frances Lowe, Mary Jim Oliver, Rosalie Reiter, Hazel Smith, Robbie Anderson, Ruby Duke and Eleanor Secor.

A very happy party of students and several members of the faculty spent the week-end at Lake Burton. Fishing, possum hunting and hiking whiled away the hours. In the party were Misses Cecile Ramsey, Mary Agnes Raines, Carrie Belle Robertson, Irene Eldridge, Ruth and Pauline Barron and Mrs. Ross McConnell.

Mrs. C. H. McRea, of Blackshear, Ga., spent several days at the college recently with her daughter, Miss Frances McRea.

Mrs. James Frazer and little son, of Atlanta, are visiting Miss Mary Josey Walton.

Miss Gertrude Rosenthal had as her guest during the past week her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Rosenthal, of New York city.

Mrs. Henry Julian Reiter has returned to New York after a pleasant stay with her daughter, Miss Rosalie Reiter.

Miss Mary Frances Turner had as her guest on Sunday her sister, Mrs. Cullen, and Miss Haynes, of Atlanta.

Miss Pauline Terrell, of Greensboro, Ga., spent the past week-end with her sisters, Misses Annie Hopie and Mamie Terrell.

Miss Dorothy Zoellers and Mildred Groff have returned from a pleasant stay in Augusta.

Miss Mary Wilkinson and Miss Cornelia Brewster are spending several days at their homes in Birmingham, Ala.

Mrs. White Will Speak on China.

Mrs. Hugh White, of Virginia, who has been a missionary in China for 30 years, will address the Woman's auxiliary of the North Avenue Presbyterian church at the church house Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Twice in her life Mrs. White has had the unusual experience of being the first foreign woman to enter a Chinese city. In 1896, on Christmas day, she entered the city of Hsu-Cho-Fu and in 1912 she entered the city of Yencheng, which makes her the pioneer woman missionary in both of these cities. Mrs. White is an unusually gifted and animated speaker, and her wide experience and long residence in China will make her talk highly illuminating and extremely interesting. All the women of the North Avenue Presbyterian church and the women of other churches are invited to hear her. While in Atlanta Mrs. White is the guest of her sister, Mrs. G. F. Nicolassen, 176 Westminster drive.

Merry Needle Club Given Luncheon.

The Merry Needle club held a business and social meeting Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Hugh Cates, Mrs. T. W. Beiter, vice president, presided in the absence of the president, Mrs. W. M. Dodd. Mrs. Cates was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. J. D. Harp, Mrs. W. J. Warren, Mrs. J. W. Harris, Mrs. W. B. Roberson. The daintily-appointed table had as its centerpiece a crystal vase holding yellow chrysanthemums. At intervals were placed candlesticks holding yellow-shaded tapers.

The club members present who enjoyed Mrs. Cates' hospitality were: Mrs. M. A. Beiter, Mrs. C. E. Cameron, Mrs. Candler Brinsfield, Mrs. T. W. Beiter, Mrs. W. H. Chambers, Mrs. A. E. Cooley, Mrs. T. C. Jerome, Mrs. Ed Gifford, Mrs. Harry Greer, Mrs. Arthur Park, Mrs. L. C. Varnedoe, Mrs. Hugh Cates.

As it is a custom of the club to remember the members' birthdays, Mrs. C. E. Cameron was presented a very handsome baking dish.

Mrs. W. H. Chambers will entertain the club at her home, 165 Park drive, Wednesday, November 19, at 10:30 o'clock.

Service League To Give Dance.

The Young People's Service league of All Saints' Episcopal church will give its first dance of the season on Saturday evening, November 22, in Egleston hall, corner West Peachtree and North avenue. This being the opening dance, and the beginning of a series of dances to be given by this league during the winter season, it is expected to be a most popular occasion.

The patrons of these dances are Miss Rosa Woodberry, Miss Bessie Lambert, Mrs. John C. Hart, Miss Grace Chalmers Thomson, Deaconess Katherine Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Sam E. Finley, Mr. and Mrs. Hinton Hopkins, Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Alston, Mr. and Mrs. Slaughter Lunthicum, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Dargan, Dr. and Mrs. John G. Wilkins, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Memminger, Mr. and Mrs. John F. MacDougald, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Hancock and Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Dobbins.

Lecture To Be Given Wednesday Evening.

The subject of the regular theosophical lecture Wednesday evening will be "Evolution of Life and Form." Mrs. Annie Besant in "The Ancient Wisdom" says, "Theosophy teaches that physical evolution has been brought about by the efforts of life to use its latent powers, and that the struggle to use an inborn faculty has slowly shaped matter into an organ through which that faculty can be more fully expressed. To reverse Buchner's statement: We do not walk because we have legs; we have legs because we wanted to move."

The points discussed during the lecture will be involution and evolution, the question is the belief in a sudden creation of the earth and universe a plausible one, and the ordinary conception, "I am a body and I have a soul," in contrast to the theosophical teaching, "I am a soul and I have a body." The lecture is free and will be given at 7 o'clock at 314-16 Grand theater building. All interested are cordially invited.

Trio of Season's Lovely Buds and Beautiful Alabama Visitor

Miss Bankhead, beautiful daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Bankhead, Jr., of Jasper, Ala., and niece of Senator Bankhead, of Alabama, who will arrive this week to be the guest of Miss Catherine Raine. Miss Bankhead made her debut in Birmingham, Ala., and Washington, D. C., last winter. She has been a frequent and popular visitor in Atlanta and will share honors with Miss Raine at the reception which Mrs. Joseph Raine will give in honor of her debutante daughter on Saturday, November 22. Miss Hunter is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Hunter and a popular member of the Debutante club. Miss Lipscomb is the charming debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rutherford Lipscomb, while Miss Harper is the lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Harper and one of the season's loveliest debutantes. Photograph of Miss Bankhead by Underwood & Underwood, N. Y. Atlanta Music Club To Give Musicale.

The morning musicale to be given by the Atlanta Music club Wednesday, November 19, will be in the form of an illustrated lecture, the second in a series of study programs under the leadership of Miss Madeline Keipp, the subject to be "The Function of Rhythm in Music."

Mrs. DeLos Hill, former president of the club and chairman for the morning, has arranged an interesting program illustrative of the different kinds of rhythm as an aid in the recognition of this most essential element in music. The program, given as usual at the Atlanta Biltmore, 10:30 o'clock, will comprise two numbers for violin, the Boccherini Minuet in A and The Swan of Saint-Saens, played by Mrs. Mary Miller Trownsell with Miss Helen Schaid at the piano; a group of songs by Mrs. William F. Shallenberger, a Brahms song, an old French and an old Creole song, with Miss Ethel Peyer accompanying; three piano numbers by Mrs. Hill, Anitra's Dance and "In the Hall of the Mountain King," from the Peer Gynt suite, and The Juggleress, by Moskowsky, and at the close, a demonstration of visible rhythm by Miss Gertrude Kelly. Mrs. Pierpont Spiker at the piano.

Mrs. Cliff Hatcher, membership chairman, will be present at 10 o'clock to receive new members. Those desiring to attend the morning program may do so by paying the regular membership fee of $5 per year, or 50 cents for single admission.

Dancing Clubs To Entertain.

The Hurst club dance will be held on Wednesday evening, November 19, and the Tango club dance on Saturday evening, November 22, at Hurst hall, Peachtree street and North avenue. Pomar's Bohemians will furnish the music. Prof. Edward S. Hurst will be in charge of both dances.

Hadassah To Give Benefit Party.

The Hadassah Chapter on Tuesday, November 18, will entertain members and friends at the Robert Fulton hotel, mazzanine floor, with a benefit bridge. The money raised at this affair will be used for the hospitals and sick.

All Hadassah hospitals are nonsectarian, doing excellent work in Palestine, and all members and friends are urged to participate in this affair and help to make it a success. Beautiful and valuable prizes will be given for each table, including consolation prizes. Visitors may play bridge, mah jong or anything they wish. Call Mrs. Solomon Romm, Ivy 3960-J, for tickets.

BRILLIANT SOCIAL AFFAIRS WILL MARK THANKSGIVING SEASON

Debutante's Ball Friday At Atlanta Biltmore Is Center of Interest

With the approach of the Thanksgiving season a gay and festive spirit suffuses the air and society in general loses itself in a whirl of holiday entertaining. Numerous parties, teas, luncheons and dances will fill each day, the buds of society flitting from one affair to another in breathless delight, anxious lest they miss even one of the charming events planned in their especial honor.

The outstanding event of the week will be the brilliant debutantes' ball to be given Friday evening at the Atlanta Biltmore. Already whispers of most unique and elaborate decorations, lovely, airy evening frocks, fragrant corsage bouquets galore and fascinating favors fill the air. Society will assemble en masse to pay tribute to this loveliest group of the winter's buds and to enjoy their charming hospitality.

Two of the most attractive members of the Debutante club will make their formal bows to society during the week. Mrs. Joseph S. Raine will entertain at a large reception Saturday afternoon and evening at her home on West Peachtree street to introduce her lovely daughter, Miss Catherine Strode Raine, to the married contingent of society. Miss Donna Stone, charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fenn O. Stone, will be honored with an elaborate reception and dance Tuesday afternoon and evening at the handsome new home of her parents, "Paradisio," in Druid Hills.

A number of smaller parties will be given, complimenting members of the Debutante club. Prominent among the list will be the dinner-dance at which Mr. and Mrs. Mell R. Wilkinson will entertain Wednesday evening at the Biltmore hotel, honoring Miss Rebecca Ashcraft, one of the most popular members of the club. Another lovely affair honoring Miss Ashcraft and Miss Catherine Raine will be Mrs. Thomas Hinman's luncheon on Wednesday. Miss Aileen Harris will be honor guest at Mrs. George W. Forrester's tea on Tuesday, and the entire Debutante club will be the guests of Miss Lucy Harper, Wednesday afternoon at tea at the Piedmont Driving club.

A bevy of lovely visitors will claim attention at the social affairs of the week. Miss Martha Maie Allen will arrive from Chattanooga, Tenn., Monday to be the guest of Miss Valeria Manley and will be extensively entertained. Miss Pauline Ware will have as her guest Miss Laura Greene, of Jackson, Miss. Miss Katherine Leslie has already arrived from New York and is being feted with her hostess, Miss Douglas Paine, at a round of pretty parties.

A prominent wedding featuring the week's calendar will be that of Miss Anne Foote to Jonathan Huff Woody, which will be solemnized Wednesday evening.

Miss Louise Inman and Miss Mary Frances Cooledge, two lovely brides-elect of December, continue to be feted each day at a series of parties.

Around the college set will revolve a number of parties, teas and dances during the week-end, one of the largest of which will be the informal dance to be given by the members of the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity at their chapter house Saturday evening.

A new social club is added to the roster of clubs already formed in Atlanta. The Forest Hills Golf club will initiate a series of concerts this afternoon from 5:30 to 8:30 o'clock, thus marking the debut of this newest social venture. The members and friends of the club are invited to attend these concerts, which will be held each Sunday afternoon. Hardin's orchestra will render an entertaining program of music for each occasion. The club at present is composed of 150 members, among whom are many prominent Atlanta citizens.

Miss Catherine Raine To Be Introduced.

Mrs. Joseph Shelton Raine will entertain at one of the largest and handsomest receptions of this week, the occasion being the formal introduction of her lovely debutante daughter, Miss Catherine Strode Raine, to the married contingent of society, the reception to be given at her home on West Peachtree street Saturday, November 22. The calling hours are from 4 to 6 o'clock.

Receiving with Mrs. Raine and Miss Raine will be Miss Louise Bankhead, of Alabama; Miss Douglas Paine and her guest, Miss Katharine Leslie, of New York; Miss Henrietta Tupper and the members of the Debutante club, including Misses Harriet Shedden, Eudenia Buchanan, Aileen Harris, Corday Rice, Lucy Elizabeth Harper, Ethel Hunter, Donna Stone, Ida Saddler, Constance Cone, Rebecca Ashcraft, Maria Brown, Mary Ballenger, Telside Pratt, Ellen Newell, Mary Ann Lipscomb, Valeira Manley, Louise Nelson, Frances Webb and Margaret Elder.

Misses Edna Raine, Augel Allen and Virginia White will serve at one of the punch bowls; and serving at the other will be Misses Dorothy Raine, Phoebe Rhett, Hazel Stamps and Helen Noble.

A group of married friends of the hostess will assist in receiving. At 7:30 o'clock a group of young men and the husbands of the married friends will join the receiving party for the buffet supper which will follow the reception.

Miss Nell Helene Richards, daughter of Mrs. Callie E. Richards, whose engagement is announced today to Tye Carter Sanders, the marriage to be solemnized on January 1.

Fort McPherson Chapel Is Scene Of Brilliant Military Wedding

The chapel at Fort McPherson for the first time in many years was the scene of one of the loveliest weddings on Saturday evening when Miss Juliet Haskell, daughter of Colonel and Mrs. Ernest Eddy Haskell, was married to Lieutenant George Cabell Carrington, of the Twenty-Second infanty. The ceremony was performed by Chaplain Luther D. Miller, of the Twenty-Second infantry, in the presence of a large number of friends. An appropriate selection of music was played by Miss Thomas, organist of the cathedral in Atlanta, and an orchestra of stringed instruments from the Twenty-Second Infantry band.

The chapel was decorated with quantities of southern smilax, palms, fern and chrysanthemums, the altar forming a rich background for the tall pedestal baskets holding lovely white chrysanthemums. At the entrance the regimental colors were placed. The pews reserved for the family were marked by white satin streamers.

Lovely Attendants.

Miss Eleanor Chase, of Cincinnati, a classmate of miss Haskell, acted as maid-of-honor, and was gowned in shell pink tulle, carrying a spray bouquet of rainbow-tinted chrysanthemums. The bridesmaids were Miss Marie Williams, of Fort Barancas, Fla., wearing a gown of blue tulle; Miss Marion Darrah, wearing rose tulle; Miss Jean Darrah, gowned in lavender tulle, and Miss Elizabeth Humphrey, wearing a gown of green tulle. The gowns were fashioned alike, the skirts formed of gaudets and the waists being in draped effect. They wore silver wreaths of flowers in their hair, and all carried the same flowers, lovely sprays of rainbow-tinted chrysanthemums.

Captain Bird Little acted as best man, and the groomsmen were Lieutenant William C. Saffarans, Lieutenant C. E. Smith, of Camp McClellan, Ala.; Lieutenant W. L. Isaacs, Lieutenant Charles B. Irwin.

The ushers were Lieutenant Logan C. Berry, Lieutenant L. V. H. Durfee, Lieutenant Jesse T. Treywick, Lieutenant Percy E. Hunt.

Little Josephine Bolling was the flower girl, wearing a hand-made frock of pink georgette over pink satin, and she carried a basket of dresden shaded flowers.

Beautiful Bride.

The bride was a regal figure in her gown of rich white satin fashioned in a style becoming to her girlish slenderness and falling in straight lines from the shoulder, forming a circular skirt at the bottom. A yoke of hand embroidery, pearls and brilliants extended down the left side, and being finished with a lovely ornament of crystal beads which fell to the bottom of the skirt. The wedding veil of tulle fell from a coronet of real lace held to the hair with orange blossoms, the veil being showered with fragile lace butterflies and banded at the end with a band of real lace. She carried a bouquet of white roses showered with swainsona. The old custom of forming the arch of sabers as the bridal party left the chapel was revived at this wedding, and added an impressive military touch to the scene.

After the wedding the guests were entertained at an elaborate reception at the Officers' club, which was artistically decorated with quantities of smilax, palms, ferns, chrysanthemums, and hundreds of softly shaded lights. Mrs. Haskell received the guests wearing a gown of black chiffon embroidered with crystal beads and rhinestones, and wearing a corsage bouquet of pink roses. She was assisted by Mrs. W. C. Carrington, mother of the groom, who wore a gown of yellow satin, and a corsage bouquet of rosebuds. Mrs. Sparkman, of Spartanburg, a sister of the groom, was gowned in rose velvet and Mrs. W. G. Bleyer, aunt of the bride, wore a gown of pale green chiffon embroidered in gold beads.

The bride's table was covered with an imported cloth of Venetian lace over palest green, the lovely bride's cake forming the central decoration. The cake was later cut with the groom's sabre. Surrounding the centerpiece were silver candlesticks holding unshaded candles. Mrs. David C. Shanks presided at one side, wearing a gown of black velvet combined with silver, and Mrs. Dwight W. Ryther at the other side wearing a gown of pale pink beaded georgette.

Wedding Gifts.

Among the many lovely wedding gifts was a handsome silver basket presented by the officers of the fourth corps area, and the silver fruit service, which was the gift of the officers of the Twenty-second infantry.

Lieutenant and Mrs. Carrington left during the evening for a trip through Florida, after which they will return to Fort McPherson for a visit before leaving for a three years' detail in Panama.

The bride is connected with many families who have been prominent in the making of history. She is the daughter of Colonel and Mrs. Ernest Eddy Haskell, well known figures in South Carolina, Georgia, Virginia and the New England states. On her paternal side, she is a direct descendant of Stephens Hopkins, and Frances Cook, who came over on the Mayflower. She is a talented musician and a graduate of Abbott academy at Andover, Mass.

Lieutenant Carrington is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Carrington, of Spartanburg, S. C., formally of Virginia. He is a graduate of the Citadel, from which institution he came into the regular army. He is a direct descendent of the famous Mary Chilton.

Guild Directors To Be Honored At Lovely Tea

A tea in honor of the directors of the Atlanta Needlework guild will be given by the officers and section presidents of the organization Tuesday afternoon in the banquet hall of the Atlanta Woman's club.

Preceding the tea, which starts at 4 o'clock, there will be a half-hour business session commencing at 3:30, when reports from the section presidents will be heard and other important matters discussed. Mrs. B. M. Boykin, president of the guild, will preside at this session.

In the receiving line with Mrs. Boykin, the president, will be Mrs. Arnold Broyles, honorary president; the four vice presidents, Mrs. Benjamin Elsas, Mrs. George L. Bell, Mrs. Christian Perkins, Mrs. D. I. Carson; Miss M. A. H. Smith, secretary, Mrs. Fred Patterson, assistant secretary; Mrs. F. J. Stewart, treasurer, and the section presidents, who are: Mrs. W. Cothran, Mrs. Parker Hord, Mrs. F. R. Stokes, Miss Emma Stephens and Mrs. W. D. Nicholls.

Miss Patrick Weds Mr. McCauley.

The wedding of Vina Norwood Patrick and William Francis McCauley, formerly of Savannah, Ga., but now of Spartanburg, took place Wednesday afternoon, November 12, at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Carrie McCully on Greenville street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. W. Taylor, rector of Grace church, this city.

Mr. McCauley had as his best man John Major, of Spartanburg. Mrs. William Ross Halliday, of Atlanta, was maid-of-honor.

The bride entered with her brother, Jack B. Patrick, of the United States army. Her wedding gown was of heavy brocaded silk with crystal trimmings and en train.

Immediately after the ceremony, an informal reception was held, the guests including the families and closest friends of the young couple.

Hostesses at Dancing Party.

A lovely event of Thursday evening was the dance given by Miss Sarah McKinney and Miss Estelle McNeal at the home of Miss McKinney. Chrysanthemums and other fall flowers were used in decorating the rooms where the guests gathered. Mrs. Harry L. McKinney served punch during the evening.

The guests included: Miss Martha Anderson, Miss Maude McNeal, Miss Eva Lee, Miss Margaret Hauffman, Miss Sarah McKinney, Mrs. Harry L. McKinney and Miss Estelle McNeal; Charlie Henson, Dr. Patrick, Westbrook, Bryant, Malcom Bardwell, Geady A. Lee, Nelson Willis, Ralph Carson, Pitt Hutchinson, Wylie McKinney, Walter McNeal.

Ansley Park Civic League Welcomes Gov. and Mrs. Walker

A gracious compliment to Governor and Mrs. Clifford Walker was the buffet supper at which the Ansley Park Civic league entertained Saturday evening as a welcome to Governor and Mrs. Walker, who have recently taken possession of their new home, 205 the Prado, the old Ansley home, which is now to be the home of the present state executive.

The handsome home was beautifully and artistically decorated with chrysanthemums and autumn leaves.

Receiving with Governor and Mrs. Walker were Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Hoffman (Mr. Hoffman is president of the Ansley Park Civic league), Mr. and Mrs. Hope Tigner, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hutchinson, Mr. and Mrs. D. F. McClatchey, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Harrington and Mr. and Mrs. Lott Warren, Jr.

Serving coffee and punch were Mrs. Herbert Oliver, Mrs. Grady Clay, Mrs. Stanton Therrell, Mrs. Sam Lumpkin, Mrs. John Westmoreland and Mrs. Julian Thomas.

Mrs. Walker wore a handsome gown of blue chiffon fashioned over satin of the same color.

Mrs. McClatchey's gown was of beautiful green beaded crepe.

Mrs. Hoffman was gowned in black chiffon worn over black satin.

Mrs. Warren's gown was of black tulle fashioned over black satin and trimmed with torquoise-blue ribbon.

Mrs. Harrington wore a beautiful dinner gown of tan chiffon.

Mrs. Hutchinson was gowned in a black beaded chiffon over red satin.

About 400 guests were present.

Mrs. Black and Mr. Paine Will Lead Grand March

Plans for the dance which is to follow the formal opening reception and dinner to be given at the Henry Grady hotel on Tuesday evening, November 25, have been completed by Mrs. John A. Perdue, president of the Atlanta chapter, U. D. C., under whose auspices the event is being staged.

The grand march, reminiscent of the stately dignity of the old state functions of a former day, which will inaugurate this part of the evening, will be led by Mrs. Eugene Black, daughter of the late Henry W. Grady, and Thomas B. Paine. Participating in the march will be many dignitaries of the state and city, in addition to high officials of the Daughters of the Confederacy and many Atlanta people who were prominent in the social life of Henry Grady's day.

Following the grand march a number of charming pupils of Mrs. William Claer Spiker will give illustrations of old-fashioned dances, costumed in period gowns. The numbers will include the minuet, a gavotte and an old-fashioned waltz. Mrs. Spiker is staging these dances in compliment to the Atlanta chapter, U. D. C.

Dancing will then become general among the assembled guests, with modern steps replacing the slower figures of a past era. Unusually effective music has been provided both for the special dances and the modern dances which follow.

A large number of reservations have been made for the dinner which is to be held immediately after the reception at 8 o'clock. This occasion will introduce to the city a cuisine that is cosmopolitan in character and which will be a regular feature of the Henry Grady dining rooms. The management is accepting only a limited number of reservations.

Buffet Supper At Villa De Sapp.

A most elaborate affair of the season was the house warming and buffet supper given at the Villa de Sapp, Morningside drive, Thursday, November 13, by the W. O. E.'s, a newly-organized social order, consisting of the most prominent young men of the city.

The newly-built Saperstein mansion was decorated with spreading palms, golden autumn leaves and a brilliant array of flowers.

The guests were greeted on their arrival by little Miss Frances Saperstein giving her own conception of a little French maid, and Master Meyer Saperstein impersonating Wesley Barry. A special feature of the occasion was a few vaudeville numbers by Sam E. Pear, a well-known comedian from New York City. Prizes were given for several contests, the main prize being won by Max M. Cuba.

Among those present were: Misses Sara Bernstein, Bess Bodne, Pearl and Evelyn Levinson, Ruth Mendelson, Gertrude Raben, Pauline and Rose Spielberger, Claire Saperstein, Cecelia Tesler; Messrs. David L. Barnett, Ben B. Clein, Max M. Cuba, Morris Manning, R. Reuben Meltz, Sam E. Pear, Irwin L. Robinson, David L. Spielberger and Leon and Dr. Sanford Saperstein.

East Atlanta Society Notes.

The Young Matrons' class of Martha Brown Memorial church was delightfully entertained Friday evening at the home of Mrs. McWilliams.

Mrs. Z. V. Peterson and son, Z. V., Jr., spent the past week-end in Carrollton as the guests of Mrs. Cobb.

Mrs. W. C. Satterwhite and little Henry Weber Satterwhite spent Wednesday with Mrs. Nannie L. Weber.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Rogge, of Chicago, are visiting their sisters, Mrs. Lula Callaway and Mrs. J. H. Ozmer.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Ozmer were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Ozmer.

A musical will be given Saturday evening, November 22, at 8 o'clock by the sixth grade of John B. Gordon school. The musical will be give in the school auditorium, and the public is invited.

Mrs. Katherine Satterwhite had as her guests Sunday Mrs. N. L. Weber and Miss Henrietta Weber.

Mrs. R. P. Littlefield and children were recent visitors in Columbus.

A luncheon was given Tuesday afternoon by the mothers of first grade John B. Gordon school. A feature of the entertainment was a very interesting lecture by Dr. Freeman. Dr. Freeman's subject was "The Child Six Years Old."

Practical Results of State Convention

Efficiency in carrying on the routine business of the 28th annual convention of the Georgia federation, interest demonstrated in world problems, unlimited potentialties for making life in Georgia happier were shown through the maze of reports and activities which crowded the hours during four busy, delightful days.

Comradeship with men was proven by the Armistice day observance which opened the convention. An attentive ear lent to the problems of the moving picture men, at a luncheon which accorded recognition to the friendliness of the press, was a high light on Wednesday. Protective action for the benefit of children was brought out by a resolution asking the legislature to limit the working day of children to eight hours and to raise the age at which they may enter regular employment to 16 years from 14 1-2 years.

It was revealed through the report of Mrs. H. B. Wey that 283 girls of Georgia have been given their chance to train into self-supporting citizens through the students' aid fund, which is constantly growing from the contributions of clubwomen. Friendship toward all women was declared by a motion expressing sympathy with the approaching meeting of the International Council of Women, to be held in Washington in May.

Blessings enjoyed by everyone in Georgia and often lost sight of in the hurry of each day's affairs were emphasized at a program which was worked out in support of the caption, "Have Faith in Georgia."

And education was easily the prevailing thought of the convention. Tullulah Falls school and its triumphant progress toward solving the illiteracy problems of the state, dealt with education directly carried to the world from within the organization. Dr. Willis A. Sutton brought to the organization a message from without regarding the endless possibilities for developing the character of future generations through continued "working together for good."

All in all, looking at the 28th annual convention of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, it proved a fitting climax for 28 annual meetings. Biennials will have to be keyed high and strung taut to surpass the completed record of annual conventions.

District Presidents Who Attended Convention

Federation Makes Amendments On Constitution and By-Laws

Mrs. Price Gilbert, chairman of constitution and by-laws, and Miss Rosa Woodberry, parliamentarian for the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, presented the following amendments which were unanimously adopted at the business session of the convention Wednesday afternoon, November 12, at the meeting held at the Atlanta Biltmore during the recent convention. These amendments were recommended by the executive board, having been proposed when that body met in September at state headquarters in the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce building.

FORMER CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE VI.

The Executive Board.

Section 2: The board shall meet on or about the fourth Thursday in January and September, at a time and place designated by the president and advisory committee. There shall also be a session of the board immediately preceding the annual convention.

ARTICLE VII.

Representation.

Section 1: Each per capita paying club, group 1, shall be represented by its president or appointee, and by one delegate for each hundred members.

Section 2: Clubs classified as Groups 2 (affiliated organizations), or Group 3 (charitable organizations), paying dues of only $3.00, also city and county federations, shall be represented only by the president or appointee.

Section 3. Members of the executive board are entitled to vote. No person shall have more than one vote, and no proxies are allowed. No club in arrears shall be entitled to representation.

Section 4: This federation shall be represented at the general federation biennials by its president and general federation state director, by reason of their office. The remaining delegates shall be appointed by the president.

ARTICLE VII.

Elections.

Section 1: Election of officers shall be held biennially, and shall be by ballot. No officer shall be eligible for the same office for more than two terms, and each officer shall hold office until her successor is elected and qualified.

ARTICLE IX.

Meetings.

Section 1: The federation shall meet annually, the time and place to be announced not later than the spring meeting of the board.

ARTICLE IX.

Quorum.

Section 1: A quorum of the annual convention shall be 100.

Section 2: A quorum of the executive board shall be 10.

ARTICLE XI.

Dues.

Section 1: The annual dues for each per capita paying club (Group 1), shall be $3.00 for a club of 30 members or less; 20 cents per capita for each additional member. Of this amount 10 cents per capita shall be paid as dues to the general federation.

Section 2: Clubs classified as Group 2 (affiliated organizations), or Group 3 (charitable organizations), also city and county federations which so desire, shall pay the annual dues of $3.00. The classification of all clubs shall be decided by the membership committee, but any club may have the privilege of being a per capita paying club, if it so desires, provided such club requires no sectarian or political test for membership and is not a secret organization.

Section 3: All city and county federations desiring to belong to the general federation may do so by paying annual dues of $3.00 to the state federation, and by complying with the general federation constitution, which reads as follows: "Dues for city and county federations with a membership of 20 clubs or fewer, shall be $5.00; with a membership of more than 20 at the rate of 25 cents per club.

Section 4: The fiscal year shall be October 1 to October 1. A club shall be delinquent if its dues are unpaid for the current fiscal year 30 days prior to annual convention. No delegate may be seated whose club is in arrears.

AMENDMENTS ADOPTED.

ARTICLE VI.

The Executive Board.

Section 2: Insert "on or about," preceding "fourth Thursday." Strike out "April" following "January." Strike out "annual" preceding "convention" and add 'and council" after "convention." So that section 2 shall read:

Section 2: The board shall meet on or about the fourth Thursday in January and September, at a time and place designated by the president and advisory committee. There shall also be a session of the board immediately preceding and following the convention and council.

ARTICLE VII.

Representation at State Convention.

Section 1: Each per capita paying club at 100 members or less shall be represented by its president or appointee, and by one delegate, and for each additional 100 members, or fraction thereof, each club shall be entitled to one additional delegate.

Section 2: Clubs classified as group 2 (affiliated organizations), or group 3 (charitable organizations), paying dues of $3.50, also city and county federations, shall be represented by the president or appointee.

Section 3: Members of the executive board are entitled to vote. No person shall have more than one vote, and no proxies are allowed. No club in arrears shall be entitled to representation.

Representation at General Federation Biennial.

Section 4: This federation shall be represented at the general federation biennials by its president and general federation state director, by reason of their office. The remaining delegates shall be appointed by the president.

Add Section 5.

Representation at State Council.

Section 5: The voting body of the state council shall consist of the members of the executive board, presidents of clubs or alternates appointed by the clubs. The council shall have the right to vote on all questions, except the election of officers and amendments to constitution and by-laws.

ARTICLE VIII.

Elections.

Section 1: After the word "ballot" insert, "except the corresponding secretary, who shall be nominated by the president at the meeting of the board, immediately following the biennial convention. The nomination shall be endorsed by the board," so that section 1 will read:

Section 1: Election of officers shall be held biennially, and shall be by ballot, except the corresponding secretary, who shall be nominated by the president at the meeting of the board, immediately following the biennial convention. The nomination shall be endorsed by the board. No officer shall be eligible for the same office for more than two terms, and each officer shall hold office until her successor is elected and qualified.

ARTICLE IX.

Meetings.

Section 1: (Substitute) "The convention of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs shall be held biennially in the spring on years of even date, the time and place to be announced not later than the preceding fall meeting of the board. The council of the Georgia federation shall be held on years of uneven date, at the same season."

ARTICLE X.

Quorum.

Section 1: Strike out "annual" preceding "convention" and insert "biennial," so that Section 1 will read:

Section 1: A quorum of the biennial convention shall be 100.

Section 2: A quorum of the executive board shall be 10.

Add section 3.

Section 3: A quorum of the biennial council shall be 20.

ARTICLE XI.

Dues.

Section 1, substitute: Each club (group 1) shall pay annual dues of 30 cents per capita. Twenty cents of this shall be appropriated to Georgia federation, and 10 cents to general federation.

Section 2: Strike out "$3.00" after annual dues and insert "$3.50," so that section 2 will read:

Section 2: Clubs classified as group 2 (affiliated organizations), or group 3 (charitable organizations), shall pay the annual dues of $3.50. Also city and county federations which desire to join the state federation shall pay annual dues of $3.50. The classification of all clubs shall be decided by the membership committee, but any club may have the privilege of being a per capita paying club, if it so desires, provided such club requires no sectarian or political test for membership and is not a secret organization.

Section 3: Strike out "$3.00" after annual dues and insert "$3.50," so that section 3 will read:

Section 3: All city and county federations desiring to belong to the general federation may do so by paying annual dues of $3.50 to the state federation, and by complying with the general federation constitution, which reads as follows: "Dues for city and county federations with a membership of 20 clubs or fewer, shall be five dollars ($5.00); with a membership of more than 20 at the rate of 25 cents per club.

Section 4: Strike out "October 1 to October 1" and insert "January 1," so that section 4 shall read:

Section 4: The fiscal year shall be January 1 to January 1. A club shall become delinquent if its dues are unpaid for current fiscal year 30 days prior to convention and council. No delegate may be seated whose club is in arrears.

Winder Woman's Club Makes Drive for Tallulah School

The Winder Woman's club, with Mrs. A. D. McCurry as president, has begun its new year's work with unusual zeal, and have already accomplished a number of things of which they are proud. One of the most active departments f the club is the educational department, of which Mrs. H. A. Carithers is chairman.

In September and October the Tallulah Falls school division, Mrs. W. L. DeLa Perriere, chairman, with the following committee: Mrs. J. W. Burch, Mrs H. H. Sohard and Mrs. G. W. DeLa Perriere, made a most successful drive for the building fund for the school. One hundred and fourteen dollars and 75 cents has been sent to Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, who has this in charge. This amount was donated by members of the club and friends of the club who are interested in this great work in our mountain district.

The library of modern fiction, sponsored by this department, continues to grow and is a source of a great deal of pleasure, not only to members of the club, but to others in town interested in reading. During the summer months a curb market was sponsored by the thrift division with Miss Cleo Bush as chairman, and was a great help both to the farmers and housewives.

The home economic division, with the domestic art division, is sponsoring a cooking class, which is being held twice a week in the domestic science room of the school building, with Miss Martha Clark as teacher. This class is to be followed by classes in sewing and interior decorating.

Aftermath of the Convention

At the close of this twenty-eighth annual convention I am deeply impressed by the revelation of the power of woman in club life, her individual and corporate power. Can any one ever forget that remarkable opening program of the convention when the voice of the state and the city, the church, the country through American Legion and noble commanders of our army, the fine idealism of our womanhood and manhood united in tribute to the federation? It was a tribute so earnest, so sincere, so lofty, that we may well feel that through the years of organization, of service, and of faith we now stand equipped to be a tremendous force in human betterment. And shall we not love to remember in these busy convention sessions, the beautiful courtesy, the splendid ordeliness that characterized our sessions and made for expedition in handling our club business. With so many departments and divisions of work to report, with deliberations on resolutions, forward work, and organization, this was a fine achievement. The change to biennial sessions was a notable step in club efficiency, and the financing of state headquarters will vastly increase our capacity for service. I truly overwhelmed with the boundless hospitality of our hostess city and clubs. And I am grateful beyond measure for the labor of love that has made our entertainment so perfect in every detail.

To you, my dear clubwomen from all over the state, I again express my gratitude for your presence and your loyal support. Again I pledge you my best efforts for the work in the year before us and it is with happy anticipation of service with you that I send you one and all my best wishes.

Faithfully yours,

ELLA F. BRANTLEY,

President of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Education Week Called to Attention Of Georgia Women

Mrs. Archibald P. Brantley, president of Georgia federation is in receipt of the following communication from John J. Tigert, commissioner, United States department of the interior, bureau of education:

"I am inclosing herewith a letter prepared by Mrs. John D. Sherman, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, regarding the observance by the members of that organization of American Education week, November 17 to 23, inclusive. I deeply appreciate this very generous cooperation, for I am certain that your efforts in the promotion of American Education week will go far towards its success and therefore promote educational progress.

"There are certain phases of education which, it is generally agreed, require emphasis from a national standpoint. Among these are respect for constituted authority, patriotism, better trained and better paid teachers, improvement of rural schools, more adequately equipped school buildings, eradication of illiteracy, and health education. In order to give these phases of education prominence in the observance of American Education week, it has been agreed to designate certain days in the week for calling particular attention to them. Monday, November 17, will be Constitution day; Tuesday, November 18, Patriotism day; Wednesday, November 19, School and Teacher day; Thursday, November 20, Illiteracy day; Friday, November 21, Physical Education day; Saturday, November 22, Community day; Sunday, November 23, For God and Country day."

Mrs. Sherman's letter follows:

"The president of the United States will designate November 17-23, 1924, as American Education week in our schools. The bureau of education in cooperation with the American Legion and the National Education association has prepared a program which has been sent to all state, county and city school superintendents. Undoubtedly your club can be of help in carrying out these programs.

"It is hardly necessary to call the attention of the clubwomen to the need for constant emphasis upon the ideals of citizenship we wish to implant in the minds of our children. Respect for constituted authority and obedience to it are essential to the preservation of our nation. The children in our schools today will soon be called upon to administer the present laws and to make new ones. We can greatly assist the schools in the effort to give preparation for this vital responsibility. It is only as the ideals taught in the schools are brought into practice in the home and community that they become real forces in the life of the child.

"Clubwomen can also assist materially by becoming better acquainted with the teachers in their leisure time. Many of them are away from home and find it difficult to make congenial friendships. Are we doing all we can to prevent the loneliness which impresses the weight of their responsibility as teachers of our children?

"The General Federation of Women's Clubs has always been eager to cooperate with the schools of the country. American Education week gives us splendid opportunity to do so. I am confident that each club will do all in its power to make this week a distinct contribution to the welfare of the community.

"Faithfully yours,

"MARY SHERMAN,

(Mrs. John D. Sherman).

President, General Federation of Women's Clubs."

Thomasville Study Class To Entertain Second District

The Thomasville Study class has issued invitations to the meeting of the Second District Federation of Women's Clubs to be held in Thomasville Tuesday evening, November 18, and Wednesday, November 19.

Mrs. J. E. Craigmiles, of Thomasville, Ga., requests a reply to this district invitation, of which Mrs. Robert A. Heinsohn is president.

Thomasville Study Class Has Musical Program.

The Thomasville Study class had a most delightful surprise Thursday afternoon, October 30. Mrs. Merry and Mrs. Robert Balfour, Jr., were in charge of the program. Instead of home talent they brought to us two of their friends from other cities —Miss Elizabeth Gilbert, of Bainbridge, delighted the audience with the beauty of her voice and graciousness of manner. Miss Gilbert, who is chairman of music in the second district, has had unusual musical advantages, having been an instructor at Peabody. Again and again she responded to the applause of her audience.

No less enjoyable were the readings given by Miss Gammage of Pelham, the guest of Mrs. Merry. Miss Gammage is young and pleasing in appearance and her selections were bright, witty and much enjoyed.

The following program was rendered:

"Dawn," by Pearl Curran; "Rain" —Miss Gilbert. "The Winds of the South," Scott; "The Lane to Ballybree," Ohey Speaks—Miss Gilbert. Come, Child Beside Me"—Blerchman; Floods of Spring," Rachmanoff; "Over the Steppe," Gretchenoff—Miss Gilbert. "Pirate Dreams," Charles Hueter; "The Answer," Terry; "At the Well," Richard Hogeman; Words by Tagore, Indian poet—Miss Gilbert. Mrs. R. C. Balfour, Jr., accompanist. "Indian Love Song," By the Waters of the Minnetonka"; Just a Wearyin' for You"—Sung and played by Miss Gilbert.

Miss Gammage, of Pelham, gave "The Sun." "A Hindoo's Paradise," "Ideal and Real." A musical reading, "When I Was One and Twenty," accompanied by Miss Twitty.

Following the program refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed by the class and visitors.

Seeks To Market Natural Products.

Mrs. J. K. Ottley is in receipt of a communication from Miss Juliet Tuggle, home demonstration agent in White county for extension work in agriculture and home economics, in which Miss Tuggle solicits aid in finding a market for rhodendron laurel, white pine, holly and spruce pine. Miss Tuggle states that the proceeds from these sales will be used for promoting her work in the county, for which there is a great need, and that there are now available many young plants for delivery.

Miss Tuggle writes: "I am trying to get kitchen sinks, some kind of water supply less burdensome than lifting each bucketful, and a good stove in each school building."

Clubwomen who desire some of these shrubs, or who can be of help in any way, may write Miss Tuggle at Cleveland, Ga.

Col. and Mrs. Barnes Suffer Fire Loss.

The many friends of Colonel and Mrs. Don T. Barnes will sympathize with them in the loss of their beautiful home, which was destroyed by fire November 2, in Canon, Ga.

Mrs. Barnes is president of the Franklin County Federation of Women's Clubs, one of the most progressive organizations in the state.

Mrs. Walter Lamar Leads Campaign For $3,000 in Macon

Led by Mrs. Walter Lamar, vice president of the board of trustees of Tallulah Falls school for mountain girls and boys, Macon clubwomen have recently undertaken to raise $3,000 for the school's building fund. Mrs. Lamar is widely known and her able leadership has been frequently demonstrated both in Federation, U. D. C. and D. A. R. circles.

As an opening feature of the campaign in Macon a crafts exhibit from the school was displayed in a downtown department store window, drawing a vast amount of favorable comment from the passer-by. This exhibit was later placed on view at the state fair in Macon and there proved equally effective as a drawing card. Prizes awarded this exhibit further aided in attracting attention to the school and its vocational training. A blue ribbon was awarded for the fans in the arts department, and another for the rugs in the arts and crafts department. In this department a second ribbon was won by a table runner. The committe assisting with this exhibit at the fair included Mrs. J. A. Selden, chairman; Mrs. B. J. Taylor, Mrs. T. N. Baker, Mrs. Osgood Clarke, Mrs. S. C. Moore, Mrs. C. A. Hilbun, Mrs. B. E. Roughton, Mrs. B. F. Sutton, Mrs. C. C. Hinton, Jr., Mrs. Grant Fuller, Mrs. J. E. Walker, Mrs. C. C. Harrold, Mrs. E. Ulman.

A follow-up pamphlet was sent to sent to various people throughout the city appealing for help in raising Macon's quota of $3,000 and setting forth the needs of the school, the expansion program contemplated and other information of general interest about the school. Among the various committees appointed were Mrs. L. I. Waxelbaum, who was appointed chairman of a committee to secure donations of merchandise, and Mrs. S. C. Moore, as chairman of the children's committee, to help with the raising of this fund. Backed by the city federation, the building fund campaign of Macon clubwomen for Tallulah, is going forward with great strides, and the entire amount of $3,000 is expected to be in hand within a short time.

Rocky Creek Club Adds New Members.

Luella, Ga., November 15.—The Rocky Creek Woman's club met at the country home of Mrs. James W. Sanders, with Mrs. Ina Brown, joint hostess, on Wednesday, November 5.

The home was colorfully decorated with quantities of chrysanthemums, the color scheme of yellow and white prevailing.

This proved an interesting meeting as much business was transacted. The club also planned to entertain their families Thanksgiving. Four new members were added.

After the business session Mrs. T. D. Weems gave a reading on forestry, a poem. "The Whippoorwill," was rendered by Miss Bernice Hilly. A social hour followed the business session, during which tea was served.

California Women Aid Development.

Clubwomen of California are throwing their energies into practical work for California development. Mrs. A. P. Brantley, president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, is in receipt of a communication from Mrs Geoffrey Holt, press chairman of San Francisco federation and director of California hospitality, enclosing a copy of the California Journal of Development, said to give due recognition to women's activities in the development of California.

Mrs. Holt also states that she is sending gladiolus bulbs, "nourished in California sunshine, to perpetuate our greetings."

In ancient Egypt the scarab was regarded as the symbol of eternal life, and for this reason designs of scarabs are frequently in the tombs there.

Young Matrons' Federated Club Of Winder Honors Educators

The Young Matrons' Federated Club of Winder was hostess at one of the loveliest parties not only in its history, but in that of the social life of Winder, on Monday evening at the spacious home of Judge and Mrs. G. A. Johns. The honor guests were the Winder public school faculty and the local board of education.

The entire lower floor of the always-hospitable Johns home was thrown together and was never lovelier with its elegant, tasty furnishings enhanced with artistic decorations of colorful autumn leaves, gorgeous blossoms and brightly-burning fires at every hearth stone.

Winder's matchless orchestra rendered a most enjoyable program, at the close of which Mrs. Johns, in a most pleasing manner, welcomed the large assemblage and introduced Chief Justice Richard B. Russell, who, in turn in a masterly way, introduced Dr. Park, of the English department of the University of Georgia.

Dr. Park's address was pronounced a gem, and was deeply appreciated by all present, the forceful effort endearing him more sincerely, if such be possible, in the minds and hearts of every attentive hearer.

Beautiful and appropriate solos by Mrs. Mac Potts and J. T. Walden completed the program. As the delicious frozen salad course was being served an amusing musical contest was enjoyed, in which Miss Kilgore was the successful contestant, being presented with an armful of huge chrysanthemums tied with the school's colors, red and black.

Mrs. Johns, president of the club, announced three splendid gifts: a number of chairs to the American legion to be placed in the legion hall; a number of attractively-arranged sign posts to the Junior chamber of commerce to be placed in the neighboring vicinity of Winder, and a generous gift to our schools.

This occasion combined beauty and dignity and centered the most sincere interest of a large number of citizens. Throughout the evening the entire club membership assisted in making the event one of happiest memory.

A distinguished group of out-of-town friends were present, among them being Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Maddox, of Greensboro; Mesdames Kelly, McGarity and Lewis, of Monroe; Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Yow, of Martin. Delicious punch was served throughout the evening.

Molena Woman's Civic Club Holds October Meeting

The October meeting of the Woman's Civic club of Molena was held at the home of Miss Edna Brooks with Mrs. Ralph Brown and Mrs. J. C. Wilkes joint hostesses. The house was attractively decorated with a profusion of garden flowers, yellow and white being the predominant colors.

After a lengthy business meeting an enjoyable program on the life and writing of Frank L. Stanton was presented.

"Just a Wearyin' for You" and "Mighty Lak a Rose" were sung by Miss Cleo Carreker, soprano, and Mrs. W. O. Jordan, alto.

Several piano solos were rendered by Miss Christine Wilkes. At the conclusion of the program refreshments were served.

Lesche Club Holds Important Meeting.

The Lesche Woman's club, of Dalton, met Monday evening at the home of Mrs. L. Buchholz. Mrs. W. C. Martin, first vice president, presided. Mrs. G. M. Cannon, Jr., was named president's appointee to attend the annual meeting of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs to be held in Atlanta, November 11-14.

Miss Mary Louise Horan presented to the club seven books given by the relatives of the late Mrs. Flo Herron Clark. Each of these books contains a lecture delivered before the Lesche by Mrs. Clark some 15 to 20 years ago, and the collection is a valuable addition to the library and a priceless treasure to all Lescheans who remember the splendid programs Mrs. Clark's talent and effort furnished the club. The Lesche is indeed pleased to have these lectures to complement records of its early days. At the conclusion of the business session, Miss Mildred Herrin introduced J. J. Copeland, speaker of the evening.

The meeting being on the eve of the national election, Mr. Copeland chose for his subject the two predominant American political parties. With the ability of a historian he traced the lineage of the democratic and republican parties and with discernment made clear the fundamental differences between the two. Toward the close of his address, Mr. Copeland paid a beautiful tribute to womanhood and the home. He indorsed the franchise of woman, but especially urged that the home be not neglected for the ballot.

Mrs. C. H. Fraker thanked the speaker for the club and on behalf of the committee, Misses Herrin, Longley, Sarah Davis and Mrs. C. H. Fraker. The membership of the club, by a rising count, made known its intention to go to the polls Tuesday to cast its individual votes.

The women of the Lake Tchad region of central Africa vie with one another as to who can possess the longest lips.

Time To Forget 'Marching Thru Georgia.'

Mrs. Walter D. Lamar thinks that "Marching Through Georgia" should be forgotten. She writes:

"The brilliant, patriotic address so stirringly delivered at the U. D. C. convention in Quitman on Tuesday, October 28, by Mrs. R. K. Rambo in response to the many cordial welcomes from various social organizations as well as the civic and patriotic societies of the city, was the best conceived and most appropriate speech of its kind that has been made before a patriotic society in many a day.

"Mrs. Rambo is claimed with pride by Forsyth, where as Miss Annie Trippe, daughter of Judge Trippe, she was known and loved; by Macon, where she had many friends when she lived here during her first marriage to Gee Simmons; and now she is one of the most valued women that Atlanta contributes to the various women's activities over the state.

"While the opening exercises at the state convention at Quitman were notable for eloquence, intelligence, reverence for the old south and devotion to all that makes for a forward-looking south, while all the speeches were received with evident appreciation, none won more applause than did that of Mrs. Rambo. Particularly that portion of her speech in which she reminded the Daughters of the indignity put upon southern delegates at the national democratic convention by the playing "Marching Through Georgia."

"This song, like the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," was conceived in hate of the south and can never fail to irritate any southern person who has any love for his people, any person whose sense of fitness is superior to his desire to startle gentility.

"The Battle Hymn" was written by Julia Warde Howe to celebrate the expected victory of federal troops over the Confederate army at the battle of Bull Run. As the battle was a great and signal victory over the northern army by the southerners, it was put in pickle and brought out when the federal army became victorious.

"Marching Through Georgia" was written to memoralize the shameful holocaust from Atlanta to the sea. For the sake of good feeling between the sections, it should be forever silenced.

"When a few years ago, the son of General Sherman, a priest, desired the government to furnish him a military guide to conduct him along the line of Sherman's march to the sea, the powers refused the request, on the ground that such a procedure would arouse anew the feeling of estrangement between the north and the south.

"These facts in mind, Mrs. Rambo sounded a timely note in expressing the hope that the song, that can only make southern people feel a bitterness they would like to overcome, should be relegated to the land of nevercome-back.

"Macon people are looking forward to a visit next week from Mrs. Rambo when she will be the distinguished guest and speaker at the house-warming of Y. W. C. A. residence on Second street."—Macon Telegraph.

State Chairman Announces Social Hygiene Institute

Mrs. B. H. Sullivan, chairman of social hygiene, Georgia Branch Congress of Parents and Teachers, has issued the following statement: "The work of the social hygiene committee is one of the most important branches of parent-teacher work, and has for its chief duty the education of men and women for better parenthood.

"Individual character development, fidelity in marriage and responsible parenthood are in a large measure dependent upon the early establishment of a wholesome attitude toward sex. Therefore we are urging a careful study of such social hygiene material as will help to develop the highest ideals of family relationships. This could be best accomplished through a study circle in each Parent-Teacher association. A number of helpful books are recommended by the national chairman, Dr. Parker, which the state chairman will gladly furnish anyone asking for them or any other suggestions or information.

"The state board of health has some very interesting and attractive booklets on this subject, also the American Social Hygiene association, New York City, and the national office of the Congress of Parents and Teachers at Washington will supply literature when requested.

"Our aim for this year is to have a social hygiene chairman for each district and a social hygiene committee in every Parent-Teacher association in the state, all busily at work. Until we have this cooperation, this department cannot function properly.

"A letter was sent each district vice president asking for a district chairman, and now the state chairman is appealing to the president of each and every association to appoint a local chairman of social hygiene and send her name, with the school and district which she represents, to the state and district chairmen.

"The citizens of Atlanta, realizing the importance of this work, have subscribed a fund of $500 to provide a social hygiene institute for the state, to be held at the Central Congregational church during Thanksgiving week, November 24-29 (except Thursday). All the Atlanta social and religious agencies are uniting under the leadership of the Christian council to arrange this institute, which will be put on by the American Social Hygiene association with a staff of experts.

"Dr. Newell W. Edson, department educational measures; Dr. George E. Worthington, department legal measures, and Dr. Valeria H. Parker, department of protective measures, will speak each day. The round table discussion will be conducted by Miss Mary Dickinson on Monday. Dr. W. H. Faust, pastor of the Gordon Street Baptist church, will lead the discussion on Tuesday morning and Miss Annabel Horn, of Girls' High school, at the afternoon session.

"Wednesday, Mrs. Alonzo Richardson will conduct the round table, while Miss Ada Woolfolk will lead it Saturday.

"Mrs. Clifford Walker, Miss Rhoda Kaufman, Mrs. Norman Sharp, Mrs. Sanford Gay, Mrs. R. M. Striplin and Mrs. George M. Howsmon are among the prominent clubwomen who will take part on the program.

"The members ofthe Parent-Teacher association are not only cordially invited but urged to participate in making this institute a success."

Mother Study Clubs Are Organized by Sam Inman P.-T. A.

Mrs. Raymond H. Wolfe, pre-school chairman Samuel M. Inman school, reports the organization of the following mother study clubs in the school district:

Club No. 1, of which Mrs. J. M. Nicholson is chairman, held its first meeting at the home of the chairman, 48 Boulevard circle, Wednesday, November 5. Officers were elected and committees appointed. The regular meeting of the club will be held on the first Tuesday of each month at 3 o'clock. The December meeting will be held with Mrs. B. T. Wilkinson, 55 St. Charles avenue.

Club No. 2 held the first meeting for organization at the home of Mrs. Fred M. Bell, 29 Greenwood avenue, on Thursday morning, November 6. The following officers were elected: Mrs. Fred M. Bell, chairman; Mrs. H. C. Wylie, first vice chairman; Mrs. H. E. Sandford, Jr., second vice chairman; Mrs. Frank D. Wesley, secretary-treasurer.

The first Thursday of each month has been chosen for the date of the regular meeting of the club. The hour is 10 a. m. The December meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. W. J. Gower, 89 Greenwood avenue. An interesting program is promised.

Club No. 3, or the third of the mother study clubs for this district, was organized Friday, November 7, the first meeting being at the home of Mrs. Randall Satterwhite, 119 Park drive. The first Friday of each month is the date of the regular monthly meeting; 10 o'clock is the hour. The December meeting will be with Mrs. Randall Satterwhite, chairman; Mrs. Morris Steinheimmer, first vice chairman; Mrs. W. R. Branham, second vice chairman; Mrs. W. L. Mewborn, secretary-treasurer.

The fourth mother study club of the Samuel M. Inman pre-school circle was organized November 11. The meeting was called by Mrs. B. N. Harris and held at her home, 102 Rosedale road. Officers of the club are as follows: Mrs. Joseph Prendergast, chairman; Mrs. B. N. Harris, first vice chairman; Mrs. Joseph A. Holland, second vice chairman; Mrs. E. J. West, secretary-treasurer.

The club was invited to the home of Mrs. Joseph Prendergast, 62 Rosedale road, for the December meeting. This meeting will be held on the second Tuesday of December at 2:30 o'clock. The second Tuesday of each month has been chosen for the regular monthly meeting of the club.

Every mother in the Samuel M. Inman school district is urged to cooperate with the club leaders and the Parent-Teacher association in this great foundation work for better babies, better children and a better nation. Join the club nearest you or the club which will soon be organized in your community. If you are not certain "what it is all about," ask someone to tell you.

Crew St. P.-T.A. Hears Talk by Council Head

A most enthusiastic meeting of the P.-T. A. of Crew Street school was held Wednesday afternoon in the school auditorium, Mrs. J. A. Beall, president, presiding.

Mrs. George M. Howsmon, president of the Atlanta Parent-Teacher council, was the speaker of the afternoon. Mrs. Howsmon gave a delightfully interesting talk on the "Aims and Purposes of the Parent-Teacher Association."

Miss Bagley, of the Girl Scout movement, gave an instructive outline of the work of the Campfire Girls.

The report of the treasurer, Mrs. F. A. Risse, showed a balance on hand of $120.14.

Mrs. Lyons, chairman of the finance committee, reported a net profit of $8.98 from the paper sale.

Mrs. Clifton, chairman of the grounds committee, announced that the work of putting out plants and flowers on the school grounds would start soon.

A rising vote of thanks was given Mrs. R. E. Thomas for her report from the Fifth District council.

Mrs. Gunn, chairman of the citizenship committee, announced that her committee expected to have the flag pole repaired at an early date.

Mrs. A. Kahanow, chairman of the pre-school age committee, said she expected to organize a pre-school age circle in this association by the first of the year.

Mrs. Catts reported on the teachers' luncheon committee.

Mrs. R. E. Thomas was elected vice president to take the place of Mrs. Laura Haney Reisner, who sent in her resignation on account of leaving the city.

A motion was passed to pay $1 a year dues to the Better Films association, which would entitle the P.-T. A. to ten copies of The Bulletin each month and the free tickets for the winning grades as heretofore.

Enjoyable numbers on the program were a piano solo by little Miss Dinie Taiz, a group of poems by Miss Beatrice Dupree, and a piano duet by Misses Louise and Maureen Beall.

Mrs. Geleason, Miss Cook and Mis Jarrell's classes tied for the grade prize for the classes having the most mothers present of the grammar grades, and low third, Miss Waddey's class, won for the elementary grades.

At the close of the meeting an egg sale was conducted, from which $8.15 was netted. A ticket was put in one of the bags of eggs which entitle the winner to a pound-box of Norris candy, and which was won by Mrs. H. Mendell.

Mrs. Clifford Walker Addresses Glennwood P.-T. A Upon Schools

On Wednesday afternoon a meeting of unusual interest and attendance was held in the Glennwood school auditorium, this being the regular November meeting, with Mrs. P. H. Jeter presiding.

The reports from the various committees showed that the entire association was working with unwonted zeal and cooperation. Mrs. O'Neal reported that every mother of the school was a member of the P.-T. A. except eight. Mrs. Napier reported that two large and well-equipped school lavatories had been installed and thereby enabling every child to properly wash his hands before lunch is served. Also a sheet containing menus for seven days sent out by the health department of education at Washington had been given to every pupil with the request that he tack it in mother's kitchen. Mrs. Gardner reported $125 collected from the 'Children's fair" and the recent paper sale.

Glennwood is proud of the electric light sign, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Kimbrough, that has been installed. Three beautiful fiber flower boxes have been added to the school home.

The afternoon program was filled with attractive features. The Mandolin club has been well organized under the direction of Miss Henrietta Fulton, who furnished several numbers. Eleanor Fuller and Elizabeth Jackson gave a pleasing piano duet.

Mrs. Clifford Walker, who spoke on the work of the pre-school circle, was greeted by a large and appreciative audience. The association pledged itself to take up this work at once.

Miss Thomason, of the national Camp Fire organization, spoke of her work and her desire to form a Camp Fire in the Glennwood school.

Miss Brunner, from the Cole Book company, in the interest of Book week, displayed an interesting exhibit of books suited to elementary school children. These displays have become an annual event at Glennwood and are very helpful to the mothers. Miss Brunner, as a courtesy to her little friend, Myra O'Neal, presented six handsome books to the fifth grade.

The president called attention to the November bulletin issued recently, which outlined all work for November and December.

Preceding the meeting an elaborate dinner was served the teachers by Mrs. Douthit, Mrs. Dallas and Mrs. Rainey. Mr. Glausier and Mrs. Jeter were guests of honor.

Jas. L. Key P.-T. A. Holds Splendid Meeting at School

The regular meeting of the James L. Key P.-T. A. was held Thursday afternoon at the school, Mrs. H. C. McCutcheon presiding.

The treasurer's report showed that our organization is in a thriving condition.

It was voted to have a towel shower, and all mothers were urged to send an all-white hand towel to the school.

It was also decided to hold a carnival at the school, this carnival to be held in the evening so that the fathers may be enabled to come and enjoy the fun.

Miss Maud Steedman, teacher of the special class, gave a splendid talk on the fine work her class is doing, and thanked the association for its help and cooperation, financial and otherwise. She extended a cordial invitation to patrons to visit the class and become acquainted with the kind of work this class is doing. Miss Steedman told how necessary it is for her class to have a sewing machine and an electric iron. A committee was appointed to look into the matter of the purchase of a sewing machine. Mrs. Nieman, one of the newest patrons very graciously donated an electric iron.

Mrs. Thompson, of the grounds committee, reported 1,200 hedges planted, and an order given for planting a tulip bed 4 by 9 feet. Arbor day will be observed by planting twelve dogwood trees on the school grounds, these trees to be named the Lulu Johnson Dogwood grove in honor of the beloved principal.

The sunshine and family service committee will hold a rummage sale, the proceeds to help finance this branch of the association's work.

Announcement was made of the formation of a school orchestra under the leadership of Mrs. Munger.

Miss Freeman's grade presented a fine program, which was enthusiastically received.

A social half hour followed the program.

Moreland P.-T. A. To Entertain.

Moreland P.-T. A. will entertain in the auditorium of the school Friday, November 21, at 7:45 p. m. An interesting program has been arranged.

The addresses of the evening will be given by Willis A. Sutton and Mrs. George Howsmon.

Musical numbers will be given by Miss Hazel Powell and James R. Duncan.

All parents who have children attending Moreland school, and others interested are invited to attend this meeting.

Many compliments have been expressed over the success of the girls and boys of the sixth grade Moreland school. The pupils made the poppies and the girls sold the emblems and cleared $60.25 by 9:30 a. m. Mrs. Black, principal of Moreland school, presented the sum to the chairman of the civic drive committee.

Emory P.-T. A. Holds Meeting.

There was a joint meeting of the mothers and fathers of the Emory elementary and junior high school on Wednesday night at 8 o'clock at the school building. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. M. T. Benson, Mrs. T. R. Allen, the secretary, read the minutes of the last meeting. Mrs. Roberts gave the financial report of the Halloween party given by the P.-T. A.

Mrs. Arthur Tufts read an interesting paper on "The Aims and Spirit of the P.-T. A." W. D. Thompson told in a delightful way of the history of the school. Dr. Box, president of Emory university, spoke earnestly of the educational needs of Georgia.

This was followed by a musical program. Mrs. Earl Quillian sang two solos with Mrs. Robert Ruffell as her accompanist. Miss Trownfell gave several violin numbers with Miss Randall at the piano. Mrs. Reed sang two solos, after which a quartet composed of Professor Goodyear, Mrs. C. E. Boyd, Mrs. McNelly and Mr. Pixton sang with Mrs. N. A. Goodyear acting as accompanist.

At the close of the meeting a social half hour was enjoyed during which time Mrs. W. D. Thompson, assisted by Mrs. R. C. Rhodes, Mrs. W. H. Lee and Mrs. C. F. Hamff served punch and sandwiches.

Enthusiastic Fathers Attend P.-T. A.

The Parent-Teacher association of the Spring Street school held its first daddys' meeting in the school auditorium Friday at 8 o'clock. Mrs. Porter Langston, president, presided and the secretary's and treasurer's reports were read and approved.

Mrs. Langston opened the meeting with a very appropriate welcome to the many fathers and then asked a few of the standing committees for their reports.

Mrs. Roy Merry, chairman of the milk committee, reported the milk sales to be continuing as usual and that much credit is due to the mothers who faithfully helped her in this work.

Mrs. Robert Crumley, chairman of the grounds committee, reported that she hoped our yard will be beautified shortly by the trees, shrubs and hedge which is very much needed.

Mrs. Provano, chairman of the paper sale, reported she was well pleased with the progress they are making and suggested that instead of bringing papers to the school after they have accumulated, bring some each day.

Mrs. Tom Brooks, chairman of the citizenship committee, reported the following suggestions from the city committees: Daily reading of the Bible in the school; study of the Constitution of the United States; have the flag float every day and teach the children to salute it; have at least one P.-T. A meeting to the idea of teaching thoughtfulness and good fellowship in the children and also announced the training class in leadership of girls to be given by the national field secretary of the Camp Fire girls. Further information may be obtained from the Camp Fire girls' office in the chamber of commerce building.

Mrs. Mahoney, chairman of the executive committee, read the four recommendations of the committee which was voted on and passed at large.

Mrs. Langston called upon Miss Beerman, who appealed to all very cleverly with her announcement of the dangers of the traffic, the reckless speeding and the lack of police protection in front of the school, suggesting a committee of men be formed to bring this to the attention of the officials of the city who will help us in this matter. Mrs. Langston appointed Frank Mitchell chairman of the daddys' committee, W. B. Spiker suggested that a petition be drawn and signed by those present and taken to Mayor Sims for his immediate attention. The motion was enthusiastically carried.

Mrs. Langston spoke of the necessity of safety signs in front of the school and suggested that a document be signed by the school to aid in the matter. She also spoke of the school paper, "Voice of Spring," which was sold by the sixth grade boys at the daddys' meeting with great enthusiasm.

Mrs. Langston announced the next meeting would be held Wednesday, December 10 at 3:00 o'clock in the school auditorium when instructive talks from the teachers who supervise the different departments of our school would be given.

The grade count of mothers and daddies was taken and Miss Dunwoody, second grade, won the prize for the lower grade and also won the tickets to the children's matinee. Miss Adamson, sixth grade, won the prize for the upper grade, and Mrs. Rayfield, third grade, won the daddys' prize.

Mrs. Langston then introduced Willis Sutton, superintendent of the schools, as the speaker of the evening.

Mrs. Armond Carroll's few remarks which followed Mr. Sutton's speech were listened to with great interest.

Moreland P.-T. A. Holds Meeting.

The P.-T. A. of Moreland-St. Charles High school had the regular meeting Friday at the school auditorium, the president presiding. The pupils of Mrs. Hemphill's room entertained and the program was splendid. Two weeks ago Mrs. Prickett's pupils gave a very interesting program.

This P.-T. A. is doing fine work. The president, Mrs. J. W. Cole, has returned from a month's stay in Los Angeles, Cal.

Samuel Inman Book Shower.

The Samuel M. Inman library will hold a book shower at the school Friday, November 21. All children are requested to bring a book for this new library. A preferred list of books will be furnished each child on Friday, November 14, for a guide. Great interest is being manifested in this new phase of school work.

"John," demanded Mrs. Flubdub, "were you drinking last night?" "What makes you ask that?" "You put the clock out." "Eh?" "And you must have wound the cat—it never ceased to yowl."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Oakhurst P.-T. A. Has Health Program.

The Parent-Teacher association of Oakhurst school held its regular monthly meeting Wednesday, November 12, at 2:30 o'clock, in the school auditorium. Mrs. Charles J. Turpie presided and there was an attendance of 152 members.

Before the business meeting an excellent program was presented by the children of the school, each grade showing some phase of the uniform work being done to promote good health among the pupils. The program included several original poems, one original play, and an entertaining contribution from every grade, which proved that this part of the school program has been beautifully correlated with the art and English work.

Dr. Harrison, health officer, and the nurse, Miss Warren, have recently completed a health survey of the school in their service to DeKalb county.

Miss Mamie Barnes, principal, welcomed the large assembly of mothers and called attention to the aims of the work undertaken by the children. In a few remarks appropriate to book week, she stressed the importance of encourging the reading of good books in the home and asked the mothers to cooperate with the library committee in its efforts to add new books to the school library. Miss Barnes invited the mothers to attend the chapel exercises conducted by the different grades every Wednesday at 12 o'clock.

At recent chapel exercises, J. J. McConnell, one of the P.-T. A. members and a resident of India for seven years, entertained the children with a most instructive talk on India.

Mrs. Turpie called for reports from the chairmen of committees and the results showed well-directed activity for every committee. Purchases had been made for first-aid purposes; improvements made on the school yard; the rest room comfortably furnished; kitchen equipment added; playground equipment repaired; and plans completed for the work to be done in November.

Mrs. Schley Howard, chairman of committee on ways and means, made a splendid report, calling attention to the fact that each member of her committee had taken some initiative in raising funds. A cake sale, a rummage sale and a moving-picture show given at the school were some of the successful undertakings that made it possible for the treasurer to report a balance of $93.52 after having met all obligations for the month.

Miss Milton's third grade won the picture awarded as prize for best attendance of mothers.

Hostesses to the teachers at luncheon were Mesdames Howard, Wells, C. E. Edwards and Pharr.

After the business meeting, delicious refreshments were served in the lower hall and the mothers were invited to visit the teachers in their respective rooms where the children's written work was most attractively displayed.

Joseph Brown P.-T. A. To Have Night Meeting.

The Joseph E. Brown Junior High P.-T. A. will meet Monday night, November 17, at 8 o'clock, in the school library.

Miss Jessie Muse, principal of Girls' High, will be the speaker of the evening.

A musical program will be rendered by Miss Maxine Judd, Edward McNair and Joe Glazier, three talented young musicians of the Brown Junior High.

Every patron of the school is urged to attend this meeting, and those who are not active members of the association are cordially invited to attend during the drive for new members.

400 Parents Attend Commercial High School P.-T. A.

The Commercial High school Parent-Teacher association held its regular meeting Tuesday evening in the school auditorium with a very large attendance, about 400 parents being present. Louis Marquardt, first vice president, presided. Mr. Marquardt spoke of the splendid work being done for the schols by the Parent-Teacher associations and Superintendent Sutton, as well as by the board of education. Mr. Marquardt urged parents to take the proper interest in their children by attending Parent-Teacher meetings.

After the business meeting, a very interesting program was rendered. The society circus was given by the Girl Scouts, troop No. 21. This was a great success and thoroughly enjoyed by everyone present.

The school orchestra furnished music for the evening. The glee club rendered several popular selections which were enjoyed. Miss Mary Louise Parham boosted the school paper, The Co-Ed Leader, and spoke of helping to send Miss Minnie Topham as representative of The Co-Ed Leader to Madison, Wis., to attend the meeting of the Interscholastic Press association. On motion of Mrs. Martin, it was voted to give $10.00 for this purpose by the association.

The parents were counted for each class. C-9, having the highest per cent, won the banner. D-6 had the highest number of parents present. In both classes, the parents who were present will be given theater tickets to the Howard theater to give to their children.

After adjournment popcorn and red lemonade were served, carrying out the circus spirit and the school colors.

Peachtree Heights P.-T. A. Meets.

The Peachtree Heights P.-T. A. held its regular meeting Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. Morton Rollestone, president, presiding.

Each week greater enthusiasm is demonstrated at these meetings and there is a steady growth in attendance, and it is hoped to open a lunch room for the pupils at an early date.

On the first Tuesday in December there will be a flag raised on the school grounds and speeches will be made by prominent Atlanta orators. The Tech High school band will furnish music for this occasion, and anyone interested in school work is invited to attend.

The kindergarten will have a handkerchief sale at 3 o'clock at the "Kindergarten cottage" on December 2, to which the public is also invited.

O'Keefe Jr. High Interesting Program.

The monthly meeting of the O'Keefe Junior High school P.-T. A. was held Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the school auditorium. W. O. Stamps presided.

The meeting opened with a selection by the O'Keefe orchestra, directed by Miss Stophfer and was followed with prayer by Miss Wesley.

After the reading of the minutes Mrs. Williamson's resignation was read and accepted with regrets.

After the business meeting an interesting program was rendered by several students, the newly-elected president, Raymond Jenkins, spoke on "School Government." A talk on "Extra Curricular Activities" was made by Max Hall. Carl Wesley spoke on "The Junior High." Frankie Williams spoke on "Domestic Science," and showed several charts which proved the splendid work the O'Keefe girls were doing. Others taking part in the program were Frances Muhler, William Beckman, Ruth Norris, Norman Mott, Frank James, Prichett Gayle, Pauline Blanc and Lucile Bush.

The ninth grade won the tickets to the Saturday matinee for having the largest number of parents present. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

Frank L. Stanton P.-T. A. Meets.

The Parent-Teacher association of the Frank L. Stanton school held its regular meeting Wednesday, November 12. Mrs. Thompson, president, presided. The meeting was opened with a very interesting program given by the fifth and sixth grades.

A committee was appointed to buy a piano for the kindergarten. The date for the kindergarten to open will be the week of November 24. The December meeting will be held at night in hopes that the fathers will be present. We are anticipating Mr. Sutton as our speaker.

East Point P.-T. A.'s Report Progress And Success

The East Point High School P.-T. A. met in the auditorium of the school Thursday afternoon, with the president, Mrs. E. G. Nabell, in the chair.

A delicious hot lunch was served the teachers immediately after the school hour by the association.

The teachers' rest room has been neatly furnished and the treasurer was instructed to buy a medicine cabinet, which will be supplied with first-aids.

The ways and means chairman reported $26.30 taken in recently from a play.

The board of education will have the driveways graded and will furnish seats for the campus.

Seventh Grade B won the Howard theater tickets for the largest attendance of mothers.

Seventh Grade B put on the play, "Hiawatha," which was highly appreciated by those present. Several new members were enrolled and about 70 mothers were present.

The Central School P.-T. A. met Friday afternoon, Mrs. H. S. Reese presiding, and after a short business session Mrs. Hardee presented the fourth grade in a beautiful Thanksgiving program.

The librarian reported the donation of several books. The cash prize was won by the fifth grade. One hundred and twenty-five mothers were present.

Decatur High P.-T. A. Continues Activities.

The governing board of the Decatur High P.-T. A. held an interesting meeting Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock. The work of the various committees was fully outlined and more constructive methods were planned. The library has been much improved under the supervision of Miss Love, English teacher. The board decided to subscribe to several current magazines for the use of the pupils in the library.

The health clinic of Decatur has done such splendid work among the school children since its organization, only a few months ago, that it was decided to send in a check for membership to this organization.

On Thursday evening a reception was held in the auditorium for Professor King and the faculty of the school. The newly-elected president, Dr. D. P. McGeachy, presided and a short business program was carried out before the entertainment committee took charge of the social feature of the evening. Mrs. Charles Carter arranged a delightful program of musical numbers and readings.

The Decatur High P.-T. A. held a meeting on Wednesday afternoon for the purpose of organizing the sophomore and freshman classes. Mrs. DeSaussure, first vice president, appointed Mrs. Robert Alston chairman of the sophomore group; Mrs. Joe Carter, secretary, and Mrs. Homer George, treasurer.

The duties of the several committees were outlined and it was decided to organize the following: Membership, health, children's reading, and a yard committee. The principal, Mr. King, was introduced and he made a short talk, outlining a branch of work which he wished the sophomores to take up the second semester and asked the cooperation of the mothers in this. A short talk by the superintendent, Professor Glausier, was very much enjoyed. Mrs. Baxter announced that the "Hi Y" girls would have their recognition service at the Presbyterian church on the evening of November 24, and urged the mothers to attend this service.

Ben Hill P.-T. A. School Program.

The regular monthly meeting of the Ben Hill P.-T. A. was held at the school auditorium Thursday evening, with a large attendance, both of the members of the association and of the people living in that section of Fulton county. The program, which was under the management of Mrs. Oscar Suttles and consisted of class songs rendered by the various grades of the school, was greatly enjoyed.

Among the interesting numbers on the program was a talk made by Miss Lucas, of Carnegie library, stressing the importance of proper literature for the children in the home. The association decided to install a free circulating library in the school, and apopinted a committee to arrange for books of circulation, under the new plan recently installed in other public schools.

Fathers To Attend Girls' High P.-T. A.

An announcement is made by Mrs. Harry Etheridge, president of Girls' High School P.-T. A., of a regular meeting of that association on Tuesday evening, November 18, at 8 o'clock in Browning hall, Girls' High school. This, one of the most important meetings of the year, will be held at night in order that all fathers as well as the mothers of the girls can be present.

An interesting program has been arranged, which will include a general discussion by the parents of the difficult side of transportation to the new building on Rosalia street from many sections of the city. It is hoped that some plan will be formed for the convenience of the students.

The new school building will be shown on the screen so a definite idea can be had of its position and location. Several of the fathers have kindly consented to make two-minute talks on this important subject of transportation.

"The Romancers," a one-act play, will be given by a group of girls, members of the Dramatic club. At the close of the meeting punch will be served and a social half hour enjoyed by all.

It is earnestly hoped that all members of the P.-T. A. and friends of the school will be present, and an especial appeal is made to the fathers not to miss this important meeting.

Ingleside P.-T. A. Elects Officers.

The first regular meeting of the Ingleside Grammar School P.-T. A. was held recently in the new building.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, Mrs. J. E. Pounds; vice presidents, Mrs. J. L. Shellnut and Mrs. Walter Hudgins; secretary, Mrs. J. W. Harrison; treasurer, Mrs. J. E. Ivey; press chairman, Mrs. B. I. Coile.

A program rendered by grades and a reading by Mrs. Sprayberry were greatly enjoyed by all. A report on the lunchroom, under the direction of Miss Scott and Miss Matthews, was given, much praise being due them in their efforts to give the children a wholesome lunch at small price. The association has bought a set of world books for the library. The picture promised by Mrs. Young to class having most mothers present was given to Mrs. Carroll's room, first grade.

Lee Street P.-T. A. Will Meet.

The Lee Street Parent-Teacher association will hold its regular monthly meeting Thursday afternoon, November 20, at 3 o'clock in the school auditorium. The pre-school age committee, Mrs. H. M. Simpson, chairman, will have charge of the program. All mothers of this district with small children are urged to hear Mrs. J. C. Malone, the council pre-school age chairman, speak.

Dr. E. H. Burger will speak on "Dental Hygiene," dealing with the care of the first teeth.

Preceding this meeting the Mothers' Kindergarten club will give a silver tea beginning at 2 o'clock. All mothers with small children entering school next spring or the following September, are urged to attend. Any one in this district interested in child welfare is invited to attend the meeting.

Samuel Inman Health Center.

The regular monthly clinic of the Samuel M. Inman school health center will be held at the schoolhouse Friday, November 21, at 2 o'clock p. m. Bring the babies. There will be someone to tell them stories while they await their turn for examination.

Record Attendance At English Avenue.

A meeting of the Parent-Teacher association of English avenue school was held Friday with a splendid attendance. Mrs. J. V. Chastain, the president, presided. This organization is rapidly growing and much enthusiasm is being shown by the teachers and parents.

The association met in the kindergarten and every mother is justly proud of the kindergarten and the work being done by the teacher, Miss Laurens, and her assistant.

There were 70 mothers and 33 teachers present.

The reports of all committees were given. The association gave a Halloween party and a good sum of money was realized which will be used to pay for the kindergarten piano. The program rendered at the P.-T. A. was excellent, especially the kindergarten orchestra.

The prizes for the most mothers present were won by Miss Tonham, low four, and Miss Lazarus, kindergarten; also the flower basket was given Miss Thomas, who held the lucky number.

A very interesting talk was made by Miss Kingsburry, urging the mothers to plant dogwood trees; also interesting talk by Mrs Chastain on "Child Welfare." A delightful social hour was enjoyed, with Miss Walker and Miss Lamnkin serving refreshments in the dining room.

Parent-Teacher Meetings

The Parent-Teacher association of the Joel Chandler Harris school will hold its monthly meeting in the school auditorium Tuesday, November 18, at 2:30 o'clock. Mrs. Alonzo Richardson will speak on the suojects, better films, and federated women's clubs. Several prizes will be awarded and all mothers are urged to be present.

Refreshments will be served following the business meeting. The executive committee will meet at the school Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

The Home Park Parent-Teacher association will hold its regular monthly meeting at the school Wednesday, November 19, at 2:30 o'clock. All members are urged to be present.

The Parent-Teacher association of W. F. Slaton school will hold a 'Daddies' meeting" on the evening of Tuesday, November 18, at 7:30 o'clock. W. A. Sutton will be the principal speaker and the board of education will also be guests on this occasion. All the fathers in the community and anyone interested in educational affairs are most cordially invited.

On Wednesday afternoon November 19, at 3 o'clock, the regular monthly meeting of the Forrest Avenue P.-T. A. will convene in the school auditorium. A special feature of the afternoon will be the talk to be given the mothers by Dr. C. E. Boynton.

The Atlanta Normal Training and Faith P.-T. A. will hold its regular meeting November 20 at 3 o'clock. The Dramatic club of the normal students will present a play under the direction of Miss Reba Jernigan. Faith school is nearing its goal of furnishing its clinic, the money being raised by picture shows, a musicale, a paper sale, a candy-pulling, a tacky party and a play. Parents and teachers are both pleased over the issue of 364 red attendance stars on the first quarter's report cards.

A meeting of the executive board of Moreland school will be held Wednesday, November 19, at 10 a. m., at the Moreland school.

The Kirkwood P.-T. A. will meet Wednesday, November 19, in the school auditorium at 2:30 o'clock. All members are urged to be present.

The November meeting of the Moses W. Formwalt Parent-Teacher association will be held Wednesday at 2:30 o'clock. Miss Postell, assistant superintendent of schools, will be the speaker of the afternoon. Every member of the association is urged to be present.

The P.-T. A. of the Decatur Junior High school will meet Wednesday, November 19, at 3 o'clock, in the school auditorium. A full attendance is urged.

Highland Parent-Teacher association will have a fathers' meetings Wednesday night, November 19, at 8 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to every mother and father of Highland school to come. Miss Corrigan and Mr. Sutton will be the speakers for the evening.

The Parent-Teacher association of State Street school will hold its next meeting Thursday, November 20, at 3 o'clock. A rich program will be presented. All friends invited.

Oakland P.-T. A. Hears Addresses.

Mrs. George Howsmon, president of the Atlanta P.-T. A., spoke to Oakland City P.-T. A. at its recent meeting on the "Aims and Purposes" of the P.-T. A. and its effort to establish between the teacher and the parent a clear understanding and cooperation. She mentioned the Ellis health bill and asked that the organization back it insofar as possible.

Mrs. Malone, who is in charge of the pre-school age work, followed Mrs. Howsmon with a most interesting talk.

She summed up the "Aim of Life" in the one word, happiness.

The attendance was good and the spirit of cooperation in this association will be the means of building up a much larger membership for Oakland City.

Fathers Attend North Avenue Presbyterian P.-T. A.

The Parent-Teacher association of the North Avenue Presbyterian school held its regular monthly meeting Tuesday night in the gymnasium of the school. The evening meeting was arranged in order that the fathers might attend and see for themselves just what the school and the parent-teacher association are accomplishing. Many availed themselves of this privilege and expressed approval of the activities outlined and the program rendered.

Interesting reports were given by the chairmen of the various committees.

Miss Elizabeth Clanton, physical director, announced the method of determining the winners of the posture medals at the close of the school term. The plan adopted met with unanimous approval. The weight contest was also explained. It is the object of this contest to stress the importance of keeping a watchful eye on the child's weight, as it is the ambition of the North Avenue Presbyterian school to have every pupil up to mark physically as well as mentally.

The report on the opening of the self-sacrifice boxes in the school revealed a sum of $82.76 for Junior High school Red Cross work. Miss Thyrza Askew, principal, spoke with much appreciation of the spirit of the pupils who raised this amount by sacrificing themselves.

A brief sketch of the Cecilians—the dramatic club—was given by the president, Mary Ellis, and the assembly was favored with a skit exhibiting the histrionic talent of the members. "The Napsonian," the school annual, was represented on the program by the members of its staff, as was also the athletic association, under its president, Helen Holts, who played a game of basketball in slow motion.

A debate was held by the Junior High School association with much amusement to the listeners and deep concentration on the part of the judges, who were: Frank Mason, Paul Fleming and William Candler. The subject was: "Resolved, That there is greater opportunity for instruction in the motion pictures than in books." Sara Croft Smith and Martha Williams, for the affirmative, made a noble effort, but went down in graceful defeat before the negative side, which was ably upheld by Florence Bryan and Edith Harrison.

A country dance by the boys and girls of the fifth grade in gingham dresses and sunbonnets, overalls and sun hats, afforded the keenest enjoyment.

At the close of the meeting, refreshments were served, teachers and parents mingling and becoming better acquainted during the social hour.

Winona Park P.-T. A. Fathers' Meeting.

On Wednesday evening a large attendance of both fathers and mothers enjoyed the delightful program put on by the three special teachers of the Winona Park school, Mrs. Clark, who has charge of the orchestra; Mrs. S. R. Christie, who has the class in piano lessons, and Mrs. Paul Ramsey, the expression teacher.

Mrs. Henry Earthman welcomed the visitors in behalf of the organization and the teachers, after which the program committee took charge.

Scott Candler made a very impressive talk on the great need of this school for a larger auditorium and the great necessity for the population of Decatur to wake up to the fact that higher rate of taxes would provide the means for taking care of the rapidly increasing attendance in the schools.

The attendance of mothers and fathers from the third grade was greater this time, so this grade will carry off the prize for the third time in succession.

The social committee served delightful cream and cake to the visitors.

Hope School P.-T. A. Will Meet.

Superintendent J. W. Simmons will address the mothers of the Hope School P.-T. A. at their regular meeting on Tuesday, November 18, at 2:30 o'clock. Plans for the celebration of Christmas will be discussed and the report from fifth district P.-T. A. meeting will be read. The children of grade seven will act a Thanksgiving play in Puritan costume.

"I Don't Believe In Foreign Missions."

What do Christian people mean when they use this time-worn phrase with an oracular expression?

If you press the point it will boil down to "I think we ought to spend our money where we can see results."

But, since missions just means sending the knowledge of Christ to others and foreign means far away, the phrase they use so glibly—almost as if they felt virtuous in saying it—really means just this, put into plain English—"I don't believe in telling people who are far away about Christ."

And the most pathetic part of all is they discuss the question as if they had a right to choose in the matter, when the only choice is between obeying Christ or disobeying Him. For in giving His last command He ordered that all those who believed in Him should spread the knowledge of His gospel everywhere, and He made no exception of any quarter of the globe, of any race or color.

It is related of the great Lord Nelson that once in his hearing a young lieutenant uttered that time-honored platitude. The admiral drew himself up and surveyed the speaker contemptuously. "You don't believe in foreign missions?" he repeated, then asked with withering sarcasm: "What are your marching orders, young man?"—these in army terms being the final commands given by the general before an action—"They are 'Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature,' and I have never heard that any others have been given since.'"

Surely those trying today to give the knowledge of Christ "to them that are far off and to them are are nigh," are carrying out the "marching orders" of our great Commander, and what shall we say of those who make no effort to do so, or worse still, who hinder others from taking up the work by such suggestions—only too popular in a careless, selfish world—as, "I don't believe in foreign missions!"

Blackburn Presents Children's Code.

Secretary Blackburn, of the Georgia children's code commission, was last week's speaker in the series of social service lectures being given at the First Methodist church every Thursday morning at 10 o'clock.

He presented the code of children's laws, now being prepared, to be presented before our next legislature, and hoped that this code would be studied and passage urged.

A child under 14 should be at school or at directed play, the speaker said, and not be working; from 14 to 16 a physical examination should be required and some kinds of work prohibited.

An amendment to the constitution should be made, he declared, which will permit congress to pass a law to protect the handicapped child, and raise the states which will not help themselves.

This children's code draws together into one bill various needs of the child and tries to bring the laws up to public opinion. The commission has had the help of the best lawyers, all child welfare organizations and national experts have been called into service. Two whole years have been given to this work.

The juvenile court functions to prevent criminals and the crime problem of today is with those between the ages of 16 and 21. Under the code, children cannot be given away or transferred without coming before the juvenile court. Children can be forced to go to school until 14 years of age. Feeble-minded children will be taught, with the resources of the state at command.

For adoption, a child must have residence in the would-be home for six months and careful investigation made before adoption.

The laws for illegitimate children as they now stand are inhumane and cruel. The new code will force the father to support his child and will help the mother to keep her child when possible.

Mrs. Napier, from Macon, is a champion of this code. More and better probation officers are needed, who can investigate and bring to the judge much needed information.

"Feeling Fine"

The lady whose picture is printed above is Mrs. Garold V. Payne, who lives on State Street in Lexington, North Carolina. Mrs. Payne has taken CARDUI, the woman's tonic, of which she says:—

"Cardui is a perfectly splendid medicine. I never did have anything to help me so quickly. Some time ago I had an operation. I had been in bad health for years and was frightfully run-down. I had no appetite. I dragged around. Was irregular and at times had a sinking, dragging-down feeling which was very disturbing.

"A friend of mine suggested my trying Cardui. She said she took Cardui as a tonic every so often to keep her in health, so my husband decided I must try it. He brought me home a bottle and I began to take it. After taking half a bottle I noticed I was eating more and feeling much better. I took three bottles and at the end of that time was feeling fine. My appetite was good. I was strengthened to do my work and had become perfectly regular.

"I have great faith in Cardui as a tonic, for in my own case I have seen what it will do."

Thousands of other women have written to tell of the great benefits that they have obtained from the use of Cardui in many common forms of womanly ills.

Cardui is a purely vegetable, mild remedy for women's ills. Contains no harmful or habit-forming drugs. One of the chief ingredients of Cardui has been tested by use and recommended by scientific medical authorities in the treatment of female troubles for over 600 years!

Most druggists carry Cardui in stock, in $1 bottles with full directions for use, and every woman who suffers from female ailments should try this well-known remedy.

Impressive Service Is Held by Women Of St. Mark Church

In accordance with an annual custom of long standing, the women of St. Mark met Sunday to observe a season of prayer and claim for themselves the oft-repeated promise given in the Bible that wherever groups meet in the name of Jesus He will be among them and that whatever is asked earnestly in God's name will be given.

The meeting was begun at 10:30 with a hymn, followed by a prayer offered by Dr. Mitchell, in which he asked that our churches might be keenly alert to our opportunities and willing to meet the corresponding responsibilities. The morning Bible lesson was conducted by Mrs. Elijah Brown, and in a very definite and forceful way she pointed out to us how large a part prayer had in the life of Jesus, and how by His example and commands He tells us how much we may accomplish for good and what blessings may result from communion with Him. This was the keynote of the day of prayer and was beautifully presented by Mrs. Brown.

Address by Arthur Allen.

A very interesting address was given by Arthur Allen, the son of our beloved late Dr. Young J. Allen, whose life was so intimately bound with the growth of China in religious, civic and cultural interests. His address was unusual, in that in speaking of China he gave intimate glimpses of phases of life, customs and civic affairs that are not usually known and that he can speak of with so much authority by reason of his life residence in China and of his official position with the postal department in China that has continued for 27 years and has carried him into almost every province of China to live. He spoke of the varied interests of his father, which gave him so unique a place in the respect and admiration of China's ruling class as well as with the lower people to whom he endeared himself because he carried to them the message of Jesus. He told of how he worked to establish schools and how he supplemented with his own resources to be able to realize his ambition and how much these schools have meant to China. Our already ardent admiration of his worth was greatly increased.

Mrs. William Dumas told something of our mission work that is being done among the miners of West Virginia, and a plea was made for a generous offering, as part of it will be devoted to the carrying on of our work so gloriously begun in these mountain regions.

Miss Cook Speaks of Japan.

We were extremely fortunate in having with us Miss Margaret Cook, of Osaka, Japan. Miss Cook is teaching in the Lambuth Memorial school in Osaka and is at home on a furlough. Her talk was brimful of interest and earnestness, and she told us very definitely of the effect that the expulsion law recently passed by congress has had on the Japanese and consequently upon our mission work. She told of how the Christian Japanese had prayed that the law might not be passed and that America might not fail them at the time of distress when they were still so heart-broken and weakened by the great Tokio and Yokohama disaster. She spoke of how at first after the passage of the bill a few independents had said that Christian Japan would separate from the American missions and each would go his own way, but how the wiser and older heads among them had plead for patience, and sounded the warning that Japan could not carry on alone, and that at a farewell meeting a native superintendent had begged her to tell the Christians in America that Japan believes in them, wants them, needs them and prays for them.

Afternoon Session.

The afternoon session was opened with a hymn followed by a prayer by Mrs. Griffin. The afternoon Bible lesson was taught by Mrs. Alonzo Richardson. She took as her theme, "Jesus Feeding the Five Thousand," and in a most interesting and heart-to-heart talk pointed out the lessons that may be gleaned from this miracle; the humanness of Jesus, the unquestioning obedience of the disciples, the giving of all by the lad who had the loaves and fishes, and the drawing apart to pray.

Mrs. Anne Bates Walsh then told us of our work in the Collegio Progresso in Parral, Mexico. She told of how much has been accomplished there in so short a time, but how badly in need of funds they are to make necessary repairs, and asked for another generous offering as the other part of the day's offering is to go to them.

Miss Irenne Landen sang beautifully that most appropriate and greatly-loved song, "In the Secret Places of the Heart," accompanied on piano by Miss Eloise Moon.

Then followed a season of earnest intercessory prayer offered by women who have the work of our church so definitely on their hearts and minds. Blessings were asked and guidance besought for every phase of our work undertaken with such heart-felt desire for the accomplishment of good things for the Lord until His kingdom may be established upon the earth.

MRS. WILLIAM C. DUMAS.

Prayer Week Held By Warrenton Women.

The Woman's Missionary society of the Warrenton Methodist church observed the week of prayer by holding three beautiful and helpful prayer services. On Tuesday afternoon the adult society met at the home of Mrs. B. B. Long, 30 members being present, and a special program was given. The Bible lessons on prayer were brought by Mrs. Marvin Johnson, Mrs. Fred Johnson and Mrs. Edward English. Mrs. W. S. Norton told of the woman's work in the West Virginia coal fields, and Mrs. W. P. Wilhoit gave an interesting talk on the work in Parral, Mexico.

On Wednesday afternoon the Junior Missionary society, under the leadership of Mrs. L. D. McGregor, superintendent of the children's department, held their service at the church. The program was given entirely by the children.

Thursday evening the Young People's society held their service at the church. An interesting and helpful program was given.

Gunman's Wife—"There's a terrible storm raging, Joe. You aren't going out, are you?" Gunman—"I simply gotta, Gert. I'm 24 hours late now in shootin' Gyp the Blood.' Gunman's Wife—"Ah, well, I s'pose duty is duty."—American Legion.

Mrs. Richardson's Class Educating Three Girls

Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, teacher of the Young Women's Bible class of St. Mark Methodist Episcopal church, south, which is one of the largest and most enthusiastic Bible classes in Atlanta.

In these days when the pessimists would have us believe that all is wrong with the world, that selfishness alone prevails, it is well to look around and get a line on whether or not this is really true.

Keeping three girls at Tallulah Falls school, as is being done by the members of Mrs. Alonzo Richardson's Bible class of St. Mark's Methodist Sunday school, a class composed of about 100 young matrons and business women, seems to indicate an interest not wholly selfish. Keeping these girls at Tallulah Falls school means defraying their entire expenses, furnishing everything a girl needs from tooth brush to trunk. Just a few days ago, through the efforts of two members, a scholarship was secured to the school, relieving the class of the tuition for one girl. These girls were taken from most unwholesome surroundings, but have proven their absolute worthiness since entering the school.

Standing responsible for the education of these girls is only a small part of the work being done by this class. Under the inspiring leadership of Mrs. Richardson and with a sublime faith, they are constantly engaged in worthy works and are accomplishing much good. So quietly is this work being done, however, that it is doubtful if anyone outside the class has any idea of the scope of their activities.

EDDA M'EACHIN,
Secretary.

Briefly Told

During the past week the meeting of outstanding interest to the Baptist women of Georgia was the annual meeting of the B. W. M. U., which convened in Savannah, November 11-13. Next week the Federated church page will give interesting news which will come fresh from those delegates who had the high privilege of attending the meetings in Savannah.

Last week The Christian Index published in full on the B. W. M. U. page, which is edited by Miss Laura Lee Patrick, corresponding secretary and treasurer, the full program of the three days' sessions of the B. W. M. U. annual meeting. What a feast of good things was abundantly spread by those who so faithfully served on that program committee.

One of the most interesting features of the B. W. M. U. program was the prominence given to the "Four-Minute Speakers" for the 75 Million Campaign which closes on November 30. These speakers were Mrs. E. K. Overstreet, of Sylvania; Mrs. W. W. Stark, of Commerce; Mrs. Frank A. Dennis, of Eatonton; Mrs. Judson Garner and Mrs. J. M. Buckner, of Atlanta.

Prayer Service at Trinity, Atlanta.

The Missionary Society of Trinity Methodist church began the week of prayer with a beautiful service on Monday afternoon, Mrs. Hope presiding. Appropriate hymns were sung and several members of the society offered prayer. Dr. Kendall gave a wonderful sermon on the "Prayer Life of Jesus," relating many experiences in his own life, and giving helpful advice as to the comfort of prayer and the friendship of Jesus if we will go to Him.

An offering for missions was taken and the meeting was dismissed by Dr. Belk.

Rev. C. B. Wilmer will return to Atlanta to be present at the formal opening of St. Luke's parish house, Sunday, December 7, and will also conduct the services in St. Luke's church on that day.

A cordial welcome awaits Dr. Wilmer, not only from his former parish, which he served so many years, but from Atlanta, generally, where his scholarship and good works were recognized and appreciated.

Address by Sutton.

A meeting especially for parents was held at Trinity Methodist church last Sunday night, Mrs. Carl Dick in charge.

Miss Rusha Wesley, prominent in Sunday school and high school circles, gave a stirring talk on "The Value of Sunday School to the Child," telling of the assembly service held in the high school of 1,400 pupils, prayer being offered each time by a different child, and no ... ever refused.

Profesor Sutton's address on "The Value of Home Life to the Child" was the feature of the evening. He spoke of his own boyhood in a Christian home, of his parents and eight children, having divine worship every night at the evening meal and of the example of Christianity put before the children.

The crying need of America is home life, instead of all the children's "good times" being held elsewhere. Professor Sutton requests his students to stay at home four nights a week, to study and get the habit of home loving, for if young people flit about every night, when the marrying time comes, they never will "settle down" and divorce will surely follow.

He—"What's the idea of dating this letter the fourteenth when it's only the tenth?" She—"I'm going to ask you to post it for me, dear."—Humorist.

THIS MOMENT

A very present help.—Psalm 46:1

He's helping me now—this moment
Though I may not see it or hear;
Perhaps by a friend far distant,
Perhaps by a stranger near;
Perhaps by a spoken message,
Perhaps by the printed word;
In ways that I know and know not,
I have the help of the Lord.

He's keeping me now—this moment,
However I need it most
Perhaps by a single angel,
Perhaps by a mighty host,
Perhaps by the chain that frets me,
Or the walls that shut me in;
In ways that I know and know not—
He keeps me from harm and sin.

He's guiding me now—this moment,
In pathways easy or hard;
Perhaps by a door wide open,
Perhaps by a door fast barred,
Perhaps by a joy withholden,
Perhaps by a gladness given;
In ways that I know and know not,
He's leading me up to heaven.

He's using me now—this moment,
And whether I go or stand;
Perhaps by a plan accomplished,
Perhaps when he stays my hand,
Perhaps by a word in season,
Perhaps by a silent prayer,
In ways that I know and know not,
His labor of love I share.

The Local Assembly Of Daughters of King.

The local assembly of the Daughters of the King met in annual session Wednesday, November 5, at 10 o'clock.

The holy communion was administered in the Church of the Incarnation by Rev. C. G. Richardson, assisted by Rev. C. E. Bicknell, at the conclusion of which an impressive sermon was preached by the rector of the parish, who dwelt upon the tragedy of a lost opportunity as demonstrated in the "Parable of the Foolish Virgins." Many present declared it to be one of the most helpful messages ever delivered to the assembly.

Following this service all adjourned to the parish house, where the convention was formally opened by the diocesan president, Mrs. George O. Jones, and the minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Reports Made.

After a talk on the Bible, given by Mrs. Woodruff, reports were made along the various lines of work sponsored by the Daughters of the King.

In giving her report of the community home, Mrs. Houston Johnston made an earnest appeal for more frequent visits to individual members of the home and an abiding sympathy as the best means to reestablish the erring girl. The announcement that Mrs. J. E. Clower had accepted the directorship of the home met with general satisfaction.

In the absence of Miss Mattie Williams, chairman, reports of work done for the Old Ladies' home were read by Mrs. Huguley. Services are held in the home the fourth Sunday of each month by one of the chapters of the Daughters of the King, while they all unite in arranging a Christmas tree every year. So acceptable a Santa Claus did he make last Christmas, the Reverend Mr. Wilcox, of St. Luke's Episcopal church, was unanimously chosen to fill the role this year.

The Home for Incurables is another institution visited with regularity by the Daughters of the King, and Mrs. Ozburn reported that religious services, held monthly by the different chapters, had given great comfort to the inmates of the home.

Mrs. J. E. Clower told of the letters written and visits made by her committee to the jail and prison, which had met with gratifying results, and a report was also made of the Bible class conducted every Sunday morning at the federal penitentiary by A. H. Thomas, with the assistance of Rev. C. E. Bentley. This class, consisting of forty members, is accomplishing a fine, constructive piece of work. Six have been confirmed since Easter and three others are now ready for confirmation. Out of nine who have finished their prison term this year all but two are making good. Two men at present on parole, each one of whom is engaged in a satisfactory occupation, make frequent visits to the home of Mr. Thomas, where they find encouragement and human sympathy.

Following the reports of the special committees, each chapter reported through its president and it was brought out that since the last assembly 2,053 visits had been made by the daughters. Clothing, food and coal had been sent to the needy, delicacies had been carried to the sick, positions secured for the unemployed, children brought to baptism, disabled soldiers remembered, scholarships given. A collection of 157 books was sent to one prison which had no library. Boxes of clothing had been sent to the mountains. Much work had been accomplished for Grady hospital. Girls from the Community home have been taken to church. A Bible class is conducted by most of the chapters.

Mrs. Ben S. Thompson Visits Athens W. M. S.

Mrs. Ben Thompson, of Madison, Ga., holds an important W. M. U. office as vice president of the east-central division, in which Athens is fortunately located. During the past year Mrs. Thompson has done a great work in her division, visiting and speaking not only at associational meetings, but also giving her time unstintingly to individual societies.

On Monday, November 3, Mrs. Thompson addressed the W. M. S. of the First Baptist church of Athens, and, accordingly, the press chairman of the society, Mrs. H. O. Epting, wrote of Mrs. Thompson's address and personality: "Mrs. Ben S. Thompson, of Madison, Ga., brought to the W. M. S. inspirational meeting last Monday a thrilling message, in which she stated that too many Christians are satisfied with Christ as mere Savior and do not aspire to that higher relationship of having Him for Lord and Master."

The Athens W. M. S. said to be the first organized in Georgia and the second in the entire south, has voted to put in their yearly financial budget the plans to appoint and send a delegate to Georgia W. M. U. annual meetings. The president, Mrs. W. J. Warren, was appointed to represent the society in Savannah November 11-13.

"Handle me carefully, Lizzie," an elderly lady is reported as saying to her maid. "This gown was worn at a dinner given in 1825 to General Lafayette." "Law, Miss," said Lizzie in amaze, "an' it fits you yet."—Boston Transcript.

Women's Activities In Episcopal Church Are Well Organized

The official name of our national woman's organization of the Episcopal church is "The Woman's Auxiliary to the Presiding Bishop and Council of the Church." It is generally called, however, just the "Woman's Auxiliary," and it consists of 84 diocesan branches, made up of 4,650 parish branches.

Each diocese has an annual meeting with representatives from each parish branch, at which reports are given, pledges made and the work for the year planned.

Representing a wider field of work is the synod meeting, which is also held annually (except the third year when the general convention meets), in each province of the church.

There are eight provinces in the United States, and our diocese is in the fourth province, known as the Province of Sewanee, and consisting of 15 of the southern dioceses.

While the clergy of the province meet at the synod, there is also held a meeting of women with representatives from the auxiliaries of all the southern dioceses.

General Convention.

Then the greatest assemblage of all is held every three years when the general convention of the church meets. While this is in session there is held also a great gathering of women made up of auxiliary representatives from every diocese in the United States and from all missionary districts at home and abroad. Great missionaries and leading church workers come to address this meeting, and one of its most beautiful and striking features is the presentation of the united thank-offering. This is a voluntary offering given by the women of the church and collected regularly twice each year.

Large Thank-Offering.

On the third year it is always presented at a great communion service of praise and thanksgiving. The last offering given at Portland in 1922 amounted to $686,000. The next one is being gathered now and will be presented at New Orleans in 1925, next fall. This fund is used entirely to support and send out women missionaries, nurses and teachers, to prepare and train them for their work, and in old age or disability it supports them until death. From each offering also a stated amount is taken to erect a building or buildings at some mission where they are most needed.

In addition to the united thank-offering, a total was reported in money given and boxes sent during 1923, amounting to $647,531.16, and very much is given and much work done of which no report is ever sent.

Educational Work.

In addition to giving to missions, the woman's auxiliary also does a great educational work by constant and intelligent study of missions through study groups and classes and programs at auxiliary meetings. In most parishes this work is carried on systematically throughout the year.

Highest of all is the devotional work, which is education in the life of prayer. In the united offering the prayer for missions and the gift to missions must always go together, and throughout the auxiliary not only are such prayers used at every gathering, but by the prayer partnership plan individual missionaries and their work are prayed for by certain people and groups all over the church, thus uniting all who are working for the extension of Christ's kingdom, both at home and far away, through golden bonds of prayer in fellowship and love.

Federal Church Council Meets Here in December

One of the most important religious gatherings that has ever been held in the south will be the quadrennial session of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. The Methodist Episcopal church, south, is one of the 28 constituent Protestant churches represented on the council. The federal council will meet in the south for the first time in Atlanta, Ga., December 3-9. While there will be a fixed official delegation, visitors will be welcomed and may share in all the privileges of the conference except voting.

A preliminary announcement of the program of the quadrennial meeting of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America to be held at Atlanta, Ga., December 3-9, has been made by the special committee on program, of which Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, is chairman. The program indicates that the quadrennial meeting of the council will be discussing some of the most urgent and important issues before the Protestant churches of America.

The general theme of the meeting as a whole is "The Church in the World." Among the specific subjects which are to be considered are: The cooperation of the churches, the evangelistic work of the church, the educational work of the church, the church and the community, the church and race, the church and the nations, and the churches facing the future.

Public Is Invited.

The evening meetings during the entire session will be devoted to a series of public meetings centering around the theme, "The Common Tasks of the Churches." The several subjects to be considered in this series are: "Training the Youth for Christ," "Winning Men to Christ," "Christianizing Our Social Relations," "Christianizing Our International Relations" and "Winning the World to Christ."

Each noonday there will be a series of meetings of a devotional and inspirational character upon the theme, "A Call to Personal Religion," emphasizing the great convictions and experiences which Christians of all denominations share. Included in this series are: "Faith in God," "Loyalty to Christ," "Prayer and Personal Religion" and "Public Righteousness."

Among the speakers who are already announced are: Dr. Robert E. Speer, secretary of the Presbyterian board of foreign missions and president of the federal council; Governor William E. Sweet, of Colorado; Bishop William F. McDowell, of Washington; Bishop Francis J. McConnell, of Pittsburg; Bishop Frederich F. Reese, of Georgia; Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, of Nashville; Bishop Warren A. Candler, of Atlanta; Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, of Hartford, Conn., moderator of the National Council of Congregational Churches; Justice Florence E. Allen, of Columbus, Ohio; President E. Y. Mullens, of the Baptist Theological seminary at Louisville, Ky.; Rev. M. Ashby Jones, pastor of Ponce de Leon Baptist church, Atlanta; President John Hope, of Morehouse college; Rev. Peter Ainsley, of Baltimore; Rev. James I. Vance, of the First Presbyterian church, of Nashville, Tenn.

Speakers From Abroad.

One of the most notable features of the gathering will be the presence of distinguished representatives of the churches of foreign lands. These will include: Right Honorable Sir Willoughby Dickinson, of London, former member of the British parliament and leader of the world alliance for international friendship through the churches; Professor Julius Richter, of the University of Berlin, a world authority on foreign missions, and Dr. Adolph Keller, of Zurich, Switzerland, one of the outstanding figures in European Protestantism. The National Christian Council of Japan will be represented by Rev. A. V. Reischauer, the president of Meiji Cakuin, Tokio; the foreign missionary movement will be interpreted by Dr. Samuel M. Zwamer, of Egypt and Arabia, the leading missionary to the Moslem world.

Board of Missions, M. E. Church, South.

The Easiest Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely, and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.—(adv.)

Supt. Gannon Feels Fine--Is Enthusiastic

Says Language Cannot Express Good Done

"I have been a sufferer from stomach trouble for years. I have not yet used up the first bottle of Adlerika as I only take it mornings, but have already begun to enjoy good health. Language cannot express the good Adlerika has done and is doing me." (Signed) J. T. Gannon, Superintendent Potomac Gas and Oil Company.

Intestinal Evacuant.

There is now offered to the public a liquid preparation which is not only a wonderfully effective and QUICK intestinal evacuant, but which also seems to stimulate the glands of the intestinal tract and to cause expulsion of flatus (GAS). This preparation, known as Adlerika, is a valuable agent for the purpose of cleansing the bowels of matter which has been in the system a long time and which other less effective means have been unable to dislodge. It is often astonishing the great amount of matter Adlerika draws from the intestinal canal—even right after a natural movement it sometimes brings out unsuspected quantities of additional matter. Many times it brings out much GAS, thus relieving pressure in the abdomen. Adlerika is especially valuable when PROMPT action is necessary or to encourage the elimination of metabolic poisons through the bowel.

In slight disorders such as occasional constipation or gas on the stomach and headache (when due to bowel inaction), a single spoonful of Adlerika often produces surprising and gratifying results. In cases of obstinate constipation or stomach trouble, if Adlerika does not bring relief in 24 to 36 hours the advice of a reputable physician should be secured.

Reports From Physicians.

"I congratulate you on the good effect from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langlois.

"Adlerika is the best in my entire 37 years' experience." (Signed) Dr. G. Eggers.

"I prescribed Adlerika with highly satisfactory results." (Signed) Dr. A. C. C. C. (Name given on request).

"I can't get along without Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. W. H. Bernhart.

J. E. Puckett (a user of Adlerika) writes: "After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the impurities eliminated from my system."

Adlerika is a big surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines because of its REAL and QUICK action. Sold by leading druggists everywhere.

Simple Application That Dissolves Blackheads

No more squeezing and pinching to get rid of those unsightly blemishes, blackheads. There is one simple, safe and sure way to get them out, and that is to dissolve them. Get about two ounces of calonite powder from your druggist—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub briskly over the blackheads for a few seconds—wash the parts and every blackhead will be gone.

Pinching and squeezing out blackheads make large pores and you cannot get all of the blackheads out this way—while this simple application of calonite powder and water dissolves every particle of them and leaves the skin and pores in their natural condition.—(adv.)

When again?

All those experiences which make this world-traveler a universal envy and delight! What are they? The Mediterranean and its historic lands,—Gibraltar, Algiers, Monaco, Naples. That newest adventure-route,—Haifa to Jerusalem into Egypt...East of Suez, India's gorgeous, glittering pageant. Those fairy isles of Indian Seas,—Ceylon, Sumatra, Java, Philippines...Yes—and China, with its Shanghai, Hongkong, and Peking. And Japan,—so modern in Tokyo, so medieval in Nara and Kyoto...A lifetime's adventures? No—just 130 days...The secret? 53 days for shore excursions. And the secret of that? The speed of the Empress of France (twice chosen for voyages by Lord Renfrew, Prince of Wales). The management of Canadian Pacific...Yes—when such a cruise again? Misses Edith and Edna Boatright visited their parents at Bremen during the week-end.

Miss Louise Ham spent last Sunday and Monday at her home near Centralhatchee.

Ben Martin was in Bremen last Sunday afternoon.

Miss Guthrie Harrison and Moses Harrison were at home near Burwell for the week-end.

The Bowdon players are rehearsing for the presentation of two plays to be given during one evening about the first of December. "The Pierrot of the Minute," a charming dramatic fantasy in one act, will be presented, followed by "Billeted," a three-act comedy.

The quarterly examinations are scheduled for November 24, 25 and 25. Thanksgiving holidays will this year include the two following days. Several members of the faculty and all of the boarding students are planning to spend these holidays at their respective homes.

The November issue of the college magazine, "The Oaks," is about ready for the printer. The magazine will be ready for distribution December 1.

Lecture Subject Is Announced.

The regular astrological lecture for Wednesday afternoon will be "The Planet Jupiter in the 12 Houses." Alan Leo, the noted astrologer, says that the planet Jupiter confers on humanity wisdom and the power of spiritual healing, also magnetic and mesmeric gifts, and intuition of a very lofty character, together with that true wisdom which is beyond mere intellect, which works upon ideas and principles rather than upon concrete facts. His rule extends over the moral and spiritual nature is man, endowing him with that tender compassion which lifts up the form and heals the broken heart. Thus he may be called the comforter, the helper, and the giver of joy to man. His vibration calls out the higher attributes of man, aspiration, devotion, religion and the true spirituality.

The lecture will be given at 313 Grand theater building at 4 o'clock. The public is invited.

Georgia's First Thanksgiving

President Coolidge has issued a proclamation formally proclaiming Thursday, November 27, as Thanksgiving day. He urges the people of this nation to "offer up their thanks for the goodness which has been shown to them in such a multitude of ways" and "to supplicate the throne of grace that they may gather strength from their tribulations, that they may gain humility from their victories, that they may bear without complaining the burdens that shall be placed upon them, and they may be increasingly worthy in all ways the blessing that shall come to them."

Throughout all the ages it has been a universal custom to rejoice over the harvest. There was the Hebrew feast of the tabernacle when many people gathered in Jerusalem. The Greeks and the Romans, in their most magnificent feast of the year, celebrated the festival of Demeter or Ceres. We can find no more beautiful expression of thanks than those sung by that great lyric poet, David.

In 1609, when Lord De la Warr, who had been made governor of Virginia, arrived with supplies for the 60 surviving settlers of the original 500, there was celebrated in America the first Thanksgiving.

When the Pilgrim fathers were blessed with a harvest, surpassing in bounty all expectations, they held their great Thanksgiving feast in the fall of 1621.

Miss Alice May Massengale has very kindly furnished this interesting information on "The First Thanksgiving Day in Georgia."

The first Thanksgiving day in Georgia was celebrated by the official proclamation of General James Oglethorpe July 25, 1742, and was issued from his official headquarters, Fort Frederica, on beautiful St. Simon Island.

The near neighbors to the south of this flourishing and interesting colony, the Spaniards, had formulated deep and strategic plans for its capture and annihilation; following this they were to capture successively all the colonies along the coast. Their great determination being to exterminate the English colonies in America.

One bright morning in the month of July, 1742, when the sun shining on the waves of the blue Atlantic seemed to tip each one with its golden magic, the Spanish fleet of 56 vessels landed an army of 5,000 soldiers on St. Simon Island.

This wonderfully well-equipped and glittering army was under the command of Don Manuel de Montiano, and after days of conflict a decisive battle ensued on a wide green area of marsh land known since that time as "Bloody Marsh." The Colonial Dames have placed a huge block of marble there commemorating the event—and giving the historical data.

This expanse of marsh land viewed in the morning light is a velvety stretch of undulating green, but as day draws to a close it takes the tone and color of rust-red or blood that is days' old.

General Oglethorpe, with only two ships and 600 men, completely vanquished the invaders, though only after a bloody and hard-fought conflict.

The repulses of such a formidable invasion by a handful of troops is unparalleled in Colonial history. The news of this victory filled the North American continent with joy, and the governors of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Virginia, North Carolina and the Bahama Islands sent letters of appreciation.

General Oglethorpe in his proclamation describes the battles in detail, and closes with these lines: "Truly the Lord has done great things for us by securing us from the power of a numerous foe, who boasted that they would conquer and dispossess us. Not our strength or might has saved us. Our salvation is of the Lord.

"Therefore it is highly becoming to us to render thanks to God, our Deliverer.

"For this purpose and in regard for these considerations, I hereby appoint that the 25th day of this month should be set as a day of public thanksgiving to Almighty God for His great deliverance and the end that is put to the Spanish invasions, and I enjoin that everyone observe this festival in a Christian and Godly manner, abstaining from intemperance and excess, and from all extravagant sign of rejoicing.

"Given under my hand and seal this 21st day of July at Frederica, in Georgia, in the year of our Lord 1742.

"JAMES OGLETHORPE."

All the colonies of America celebrated with Georgia her first Thanksgiving day—and St. Simon's was called the Thermopylae of the Anglo-American provinces.

Mrs. Trammell's Death.

Resolutions on the death of Mrs. Paul B. Trammell:

It is a sad privilege, representing the Daughters of the American Revolution of Georgia, to be called upon to voice the sympathy of the state on account of the home-going of our beloved state first vice regent.

What can we say of one whose life radiated reflected sunshine, whose beautiful Christian character influenced all lives who were fortunate enough to feel her gentle touch.

Mrs. Paul B. Trammell (Fannie McAfee) was affectionately known in her home community as "Miss Fannie," where she was first aid as a ministering evangel.

In church life, civic uplift and patriotism none was her peer. She was state chairman patriotic education and also served with two committees on the national board. Therefore, be it

Resolved, first, That the Georgia D. A. R. give expression to the irreparable loss sustained by the vacant chair of the state first vice regent D. A. R.

Second. We express to the Dalton chapter, D. A. R., of which Mrs. Trammell was past regent, our deepest sympathy; and also to the community of which she was a valued member.

Third. We offer to her sorrowing ones our heart's affection and consolation in the loss to the fireside, whose mother love has molded by her wisdom and charm such Christian characters. Efficient, truthful, loyal, always considerate of every one—never aspiring, but her many talents could not be latent, for her good works found her out and she had honors heaped upon her.

It is with pride that the D. A. R. claim her as one of their very own.

Fannie McAfee Trammell will live in memory, though the Master hath given His beloved one sleep.

"Where God gives gold for His hire,
Not coin, but a glittering crown."

Fourth. That these resolutions be transmitted to the family of Mrs. Trammell, a copy for the proceedings of the D. A. R. Georgia conference, a copy for the D. A. R. page of the Atlanta Constitution, sent to the state editor; a copy to the state regent, Mrs. Julius Talmadge, and also request be made later that the press publish these resolutions.

MRS. FRANCES BROWN CHASE, Chairman;
MRS. JAMES L. LOGAN,
MRS. GEORGE M. HOPE,
MRS. JULIUS Y. TALMADGE,
State Regent of Georgia D. A. R.

Education Week.

In her November message Mrs. Cook, president general, N. S. D. A. R., writes:

"November 17th to 23d has been designated 'National Education Week' by the United States bureau of education in cooperation with the National Education association and the American Legion. To this great, forward-looking movement the Daughters of the American Revolution are lending their most earnest support, both as the largest women's patriotic society in America and as diligent individuals. In New York City a national exposition will be held in connection with the American education exposition and conference, which will celebrate the tercentenary of schooling in this country. It is hoped that as many Daughters as can find it possible will attend this exposition and that those who can not do so will put themselves in touch with its teachings, since the program which I list below is one of the most concrete in its forward-looking aspects for our national weal that has ever been devised. As you Daughters of the American Revolution scan it, I am confident that you feel here, indeed, an active exposition of our society's guiding principles and beliefs.

"Monday, November 17—Constitution day; 'The Constitution; the Bulwark of Democracy and Happiness.'

"Tuesday, November 18—Patriotism day; 'The United States Flag is the Living Symbol of the Ideals and Institutions of Our Republic.'

"Wednesday, November 19—School and Teacher day; 'The Teacher: the Guiding Influence of Future America.'

"Thursday, November 20.—Illiteracy day; 'Informed Intelligence Is the Foundation of Representative Government.'

"Friday, November 21—Physical Education day; 'Playgrounds and Athletic Fields Mean a Strong, Healthy Nation.'

"Saturday, November 22—Community day; 'Service to Community, State and Nation is the Duty of Every Citizen.'

Sunday, November 23—For God and Country day; 'Religion, Morality and Education Are Necessary for Good Government.'

"No more momentous or vitally constructive resume of that which will function most broadly and efficiently in our highest development as a nation and as individual citizens has ever been planned in our history. From such inspiration shall we become more active participants in the cause of good government and the betterment of humanity."

Old Fashioned Dances To Feature Opening.

Mrs. William Claer Spiker has accepted the invitation of Mrs. John A. Perdue, president of the Atlanta chapter, U. D. C., to stage a group of old-fashioned dances with several of her most talented pupils at the opening dances to be given at the Henry Grady hotel on Tuesday evening, November 25, which is being sponsored by the Atlanta chapter.

The numbers will include a minuet, gavotte and old-fashioned waltz, all danced in costume by the young ladies of Mrs. Spiker's dancing classes. They will give a colorful opening to this occasion which is to have so much the flavor of the old south and the days of the governor's mansion, when the flower of Atlanta and Georgia society gathered on the spot where the new hotel now rises.

The special dances will follow immediately after the grand march, which is to introduce the ball. Following them, dancing will become general among the brilliant gathering of guests which is anticipated at the formal opening of the Henry Grady. The ball will be preceded by a reception and dinner in the beautiful dining rooms of the hotel.

BIG GRIST MILL ON SANDY CREEK TO BE REOPENED

Jeffersonville, Ga., November 15.—(Special.)—Myrick's mill dam across Big Sandy creek, eight miles north of Jeffersonville, will be completed within two weeks and will put in operation one of the largest grist mills run by water power in the state. The mill-house and dam were first built for General T. Myrick in 1835. It was built by 500 slaves. The house is a three-story building morticed and tenanted. The dam is 500 yards long and backs water over 600 acres of land when full.

The first fertilizer ever brought to Twiggs county was purchased by General Myrick in 1829. The guano was Peruvian and was hauled by ox team from Savannah and used on a farm at the mill.

Seventh Audience Rehearsal

:: THE CONDUCTOR AND HIS AUDIENCE ::

For Big Symphony Concerts

The "rehearsal" for the third concert is called. Leide steps forward, gives quick survey of the audience, 2,500 strong, seated in three tiers; the orchestra of 65, assembled in four choirs. The first violins, flutes, piccolo, oboes, English horns and basses, to the left center stage—second violins, French horns, trumpets, bassoons, tuba and percussion to the right of stage.

The composers presented are Beethoven, Dvorak, Boellmann, Lisat, Saint-Saens, Bruch, Popper and Tschaikowsy. For the first time we "meet" Boellmann, Bruch and Popper; Beethoven and Dvorak for the first time this season; Saint-Saens, Lisat and Tschaikowsky having "met" with us on the first and second concerts this season.

Boellmann was a fine organ player and had a very remarkable gift of improvisation, that keen, artistic feeling for external harmony and artistic sense of proportion. His music is naturally fresh, graceful, poetic and built on solid scientific foundation. It is genuinely French, in that his harmonic treatment, though often bold, is never otherwise than clear. The variations symphoniques for violincello and orchestra have made his name famous abroad.

Bruch, dramatic, choral and instrumental composer and pianist, was given his first instruction by his mother, who was a singer. His chief claim to distinction lies in his development of the epic cantata, frequently called "Weltliches Oratorium," a branch of composition to which comparatively little attention had been paid. Beautiful sound-effects and clear melodious invention are prominent characteristics of his style. Among his smaller works, "Kol Nidrei," a Hebrew melody for violincello, has become popular.

Popper, a concert 'cellist, teacher and composer. Many of his compositions for his instrument have become favorites with 'cellists. His style, while not profound or strikingly original, is pleasing, graceful and eminently idiomatic.

Beethoven's principal title to fame is in his superlative place as a symphonic composer. In the symphony music finds its highest intellectual dignity; in Beethoven the symphony has found its loftiest master.

Dvorak's musical methods are sound and masterly, after the best German methods, without a trace of pedantry or the passion for severe form; and the lucidity of them has probably something to do with his popularity. But the true secret of Dvorak's charm is in the blood of his work, and this it is which makes it flush with a glow of unique life.

The next "rehearsal" will be on the numbers of the concert, Turkish march from the "Ruins of Athens," Largo from the "New World Symphony," symphonic variations, les preludes, Algerian suite, Kol Nedrei, Tarantelle and Overture 1812.

School of Music Organizes P.-T. A.

The mothers of the Evelyn Jackson School of Music held a meeting on Friday morning and organized a Parent-Teacher association. Miss Jackson presided and after a few introductory remarks about the purpose of the meeting appointed the following nominating committee: Mrs. R. P. Hopkins and Mrs. W. D. Brady. The report of this committee was as follows: President, Mrs. W. M. Hutchinson; vice president, Mrs. C. R. Morris; secretary, Mrs. W. S. Brown; treasurer, Mrs. John Rucker.

This report was adopted and the officers unanimously elected. Mrs. Hutchinson graciously accepted the office and took the chair. She spoke briefly of the object of the association, outlining work to be accomplished.

The association voted to join the National Federation of Music Clubs.

Mrs. Hutchinson appointed a committee to draft a constitution and by-laws to be presented at the next meeting, which will be held Friday morning, December 12. This committee is as follows: Mrs. C. E. Betts, Mrs. Hill Huffman and Mrs. N. I. Morgan.

Miss Jackson gave a very interesting and instructive talk on the fundamentals of music.

Mt. Vernon P.-T. A. Library Work.

The regular meeting of Mount Vernon P.-T. A. was held on Friday, November 7, at 2:15, with Mrs. R. M. Williams, president, presiding.

It was with much interest that the report for work done in connection with the library was received. In addition to books furnished by the association, 25 books were received from the traveling library at the capitol.

A paper sale was conducted during the month and a neat sum realized.

The auditorium of the new school has been seated with two hundred chairs by the association.

The enrollment has increased materially since the opening of school and an effort is being made to secure another teacher in order to prevent mixed grades.

Mt. Vernon school won the blue ribbon and a prize also for the best display of special work at the Southeastern fair.

Plans are being formulated for a lunchroom for the children from which it is planned to serve something nourishing at a nominal cost.

A fish-fry will be held on the school grounds on Thanksgiving day.

Baby Health Center At Joel C. Harris.

A "baby health center" will be held at Joel Chandler Harris school on Wednesday, November 19, at 2 o'clock, with Dr. Visanska and Mrs. Otis in charge. Mothers are urged to have their children of pre-school age on hand promptly.

Grant Park P.-T.A. Hears Address On Citizenship

The Grant Park P.-T. A. held their regular meeting Tuesday with Mrs. W. C. Byers, president, presiding.

Mrs. J. E. Andrews gave a most interesting talk on "Citizenship." She stressed the fact that "education was not education unless it educated for life and that spiritual training was as essential as training the mind."

The reports from the different committees were very encouraging. Mrs. Carston, chairman of the welfare committee, made an appeal to the mothers to send their children's outgrown clothing to fill the hope chest.

Plans for a Christmas carnival to be held December 5 have been made and chairman appointed.

The prize for largest attendance of mothers was won by L 5-1, Miss Almon, teacher.

The association was entertained with a solo by Mrs. Ethan A. Smith, and several piano selections by Miss Julian.

Mrs. Davis, principal, thanked the mothers for the large atendance and hearty cooperation and assured them it was most encouraging and was sure this would be a year of great achievement for Grant Park school.

PRESIDENTS' CLUB AT MERCER NAMES BIVINS AS HEAD

Macon, Ga., November 15.—(Special.)—Howard Bivins, of Haddock, Ga., has been chosen president of the Presidents' club of Mercer university. Martin C. Burghard, of Macon, was named vice president and Alfred Pullen, of Summerville, secretary and treasurer.

The Presidents' club is the board of trustees of student organizations at Mercer and includes the heads of various clubs. The first meeting of this school year was held Monday night when a banquet was given to the members and Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, Mercer president, outlined plans for the year.

Helpful Advice to Overworked Women

MRS. C. E. CHAPMAN
1920 ELM ST., NEW ALBANY, IND.

DAY in and day out, week in and week out the tired, over-worked housewife and mother toils on, sweeping, dusting, cooking, cleaning and mending. Is it any wonder that after a time a weakness, such as Mrs. Chapman had, develops and the wife and mother pays a toll in physical weakness and pain for her efforts of love, the natural result of overwork?

Women who find themselves afflicted with weakness, pain, headaches, backache, nervousness, irritability and melancholia will be interested in Mrs. Chapman's letter, and should realize that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is especially adapted to overcome such conditions.

Mrs. Chapman's Letter Reads as Follows:

NEW ALBANY, IND.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a weakness which many women have from over work, and from which I suffered for quite a while. I wasn't fit to do my work and my sister advised me to take this medicine. After the first few days the pains were not so severe as they had been and after taking a few bottles I am not bothered any more. I am doing my housework every day and highly recommend the Vegetable Compound to any woman suffering from female trouble. Only yesterday a friend called me on the 'phone and knowing what it did for me wanted to know what to ask for at the drug-store, as she meant to give it a trial."—MRS. C. E. CHAPMAN, 1920 Elm Street, New Albany, Indiana.

Another Case of Nervous Breakdown

MEMPHIS, TENN.—"Two years ago I was completely run-down and my nerves were a wreck. I could not sweep a room without resting. I could not do any of my work except a little at a time and the doctor's medicine did not help me. One day some one threw a little book on to my porch and in it I read several testimonials of women who had been like myself. I went right out and got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and before I had taken the whole of that bottle I knew it was helping me. I took six bottles and then in about three months I took two more. Now I am in perfect health. I do all my own work and could do more. I can truly say that I know Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound gave me my health."—MRS. O. J. HINCKLEY, 475½ E. Georgia St., Memphis, Tenn.

Buick now presents the Coach

TODAY, Buick presents the Coach. On and after today, "coach" ideas will be revised, for the type of coach that Buick presents, changes the standards that previously have governed coach construction.

Here, finally, is a car of the coach type that is a real closed car, one in which closed car quality, comfort, equipment and durability have not been sacrificed to price.

This Buick Coach, embodying these new principles of coach design, is available on either of the two dependable Buick chassis. There is a Master Six Coach and a Standard Six Coach—the quality is identical.

The chassis are the same Buick chassis that furnish such outstanding performance to the other models of Buick; with the famous Buick Valve-in-Head Engines; with Buick 4-Wheel Brakes; with all driving parts sealed in iron and steel housings to keep dirt and water out and lubrication in; with Buick Torque Tube Drive; and with Buick Cantilever Springs to provide the utmost riding comfort.

Buick Now Leads in Coach Design

Besides being built on the Buick chassis, Buick Coaches show these further advantages over the ordinary coach type:

The Body Is Built By Fisher

These new Buicks present the same smart, sweeping contours as other Buick closed cars. They are moulded to shape from heavy gauge material, with no box-like corners or unsightly joints.

The Finish Is Duco

The Master Six Coach in Duco Cobalt Blue with upper-structure in black; the Standard Six Coach in Duco Brewster Green with upper-structure in black—a finish identical with that of the most costly cars.

Two Wide Doors

Permit people to enter or leave the rear seat from either side without front seat occupants needing to get out of the car. There are deep cushions on the backs of the seats as well as on the seats, and plenty of leg room. The rear seat holds three grown people in comfort.

The New Fisher V. V. One-Piece Ventilating Windshield

Both Buick Coaches have this new feature of closed car convenience and comfort. This windshield is held tightly in padded grooves and opens or closes with a turn of one hand.

Buick Coaches Are Fitted With Refinements

Heretofore found only on costly enclosed cars. Here is interior hardware of the most attractive pattern; windows that are opened and closed by the latest, most modern window-lifting appliances; a foot rest for rear seat occupants; an automatic windshield wiper; a rear-view mirror; a dome light; and a silk roll curtain for the rear window.

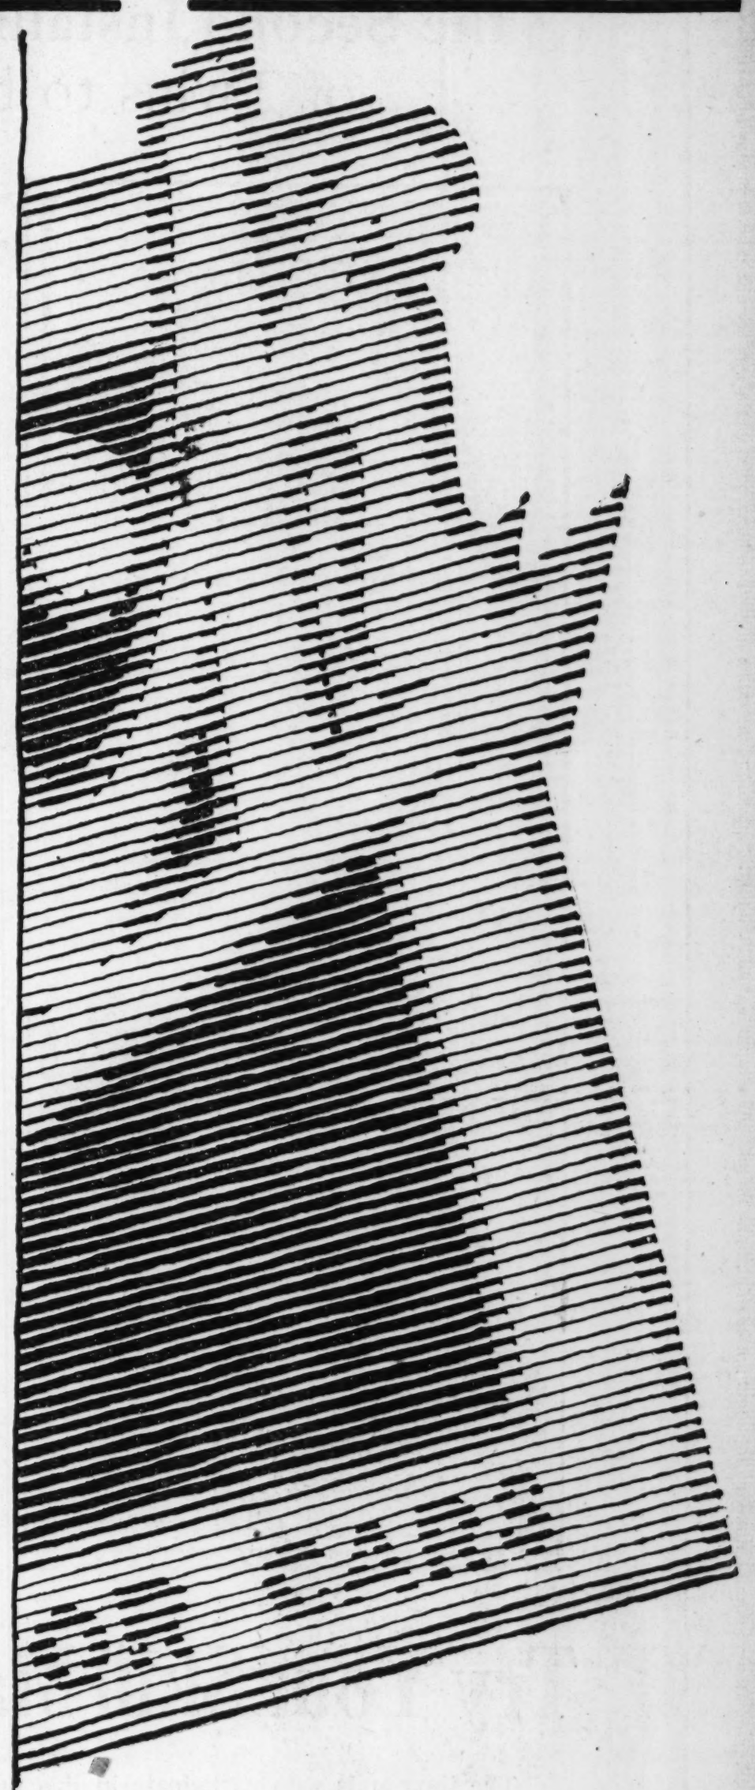

And Buick 4-Wheel Brakes for Safety

These are the first coaches to be offered with modern brake equipment.

Will You Match Twins for $500.00?

The Constitution Publishes Today in Its Pictorial Gravure Section the Second Installment of the Twin Matching Contest of Pictures of Twins to be Published Each Week for Eight Weeks

FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS

$500.00 will be offered in prizes for the best matching of twin pictures through the period of the contest.

Three hundred dollars ($300.00) will be given as a prize for the BEST MATCHING for the full series. One hundred dollars ($100.00) for the second best. Seventy-five dollars ($75.00) for the third, and twenty-five dollars ($25.00) for the fourth best.

Photographs of twin sets will be published from week to week for eight weeks in a group with pictures of other twins, and the problem is to Cut Out and Match the Twins of the Same Set.

DO ALL TWINS LOOK ALIKE?

There is a difference of opinion about this. Some of the best photographers take the position that in some instances twins are utterly dissimilar, while others take the position that all twins are distinguishable by resemblance.

The Constitution's Pictorial Gravure Section is going to undertake a unique solution of this problem in the presentation of photographs of Georgia twins. These pictures of the same twins will not be published side by side, but in groups with other pictures of twins on the same page, the problem being to MATCH THE TWINS BELONGING TO THE SAME SET.

Try Your Skill Matching Twins for Five Hundred Dollars

The thousands who participate in this matching contest may do so without condition or restriction. They are simply to cut out of The Constitution Pictorial Gravure Section the pictures of the twins as published each Sunday, for eight Sundays, pinning or pasting them together in sets, writing the name and address of the sender to the TWIN CONTEST DEPARTMENT, The Constitution, Atlanta.

Do not mail responses until after the close of the contest, eight weeks from next Sunday.

Make your matches from week to week, holding them until the close of the contest and then forwarding the package in one envelope, with name and address of the sender plainly written both on the outside of the envelope and on a slip inside.

The contest will begin Sunday, November 9th, and will end with the issue of Sunday, December 28th.

The presentation of this feature in the first issue of The Constitution's Pictorial Gravure Section next Sunday will contain pictures of the same sets of twins in singles so that all the twins presented on this page may be matched. After the first issue, however, twins of the same set may or may not be presented in the same issue. The picture of one twin may be carried in one issue, the other to follow in a later issue, or both twins may be carried in the same issue.

It is important, therefore, that these pages be preserved from week to week during the period of the contest so that the matching of the twins may be completed at any time.

Contestants should clip all printed pictures of the twins from the Pictorial Gravure Section each Sunday. After the eight weeks of the contest is over the pictures should be assembled neatly in correct pairs and sent to the TWIN CONTEST DEPARTMENT, The Constitution—all in one large envelope or packet, to reach The Constitution not later than one week after the closing of the contest.

Each picture appearing each week will bear a number. This is to be disregarded by contestants, these numbers appearing solely as a guide for the judges, whose names will be announced later.

In the award of the prizes, in case of ties, the cash awards will be apportioned accordingly.

This is about all there is to say.

Look out for the twins and test your ability in this matching game. It costs you nothing to enter the contest. It is simply an interesting diversion for our readers.

FORT M'PHERSON CHILDREN ORGANIZE OPERA TROUP

Single Cent Admits Lucky Ticket Holder To Tosca or Mignon

BY BESSIE S. STAFFORD.

Page Gatti Cazzaya, grand opera impresario of Metropolitan fame! The children of the army set, out at Fort McPherson, have organized themselves into a regular opera troupe and all through the week, at every leisure hour when free from home lessons, they are busy in their theater having rehearsals and actually making all of the scenery. They are presenting such operas as "Tosca" and "Mignon" in their theater—one of the large garages back of the officers' quarters.

None of the grown-ups at the garrison take any part in this new organization, save to pay their admission fee of 1 cent to the counted as "among those present" in the audiences every Saturday evening. As there are no reserved seats, no home is safe upon that particular evening when opera is being presented and chairs are borrowed without any regard to the asking of permission. For, as the children say, the audience must be seated.

Among the plays and operas having been given are "Tosca," "Cinderilla," "Sleeping Beauty," "Mignon' and an entirely original one taken from the 'Arabian Nights."

Little Miss Edna Kendrick is the stage manager and lends charm to many of the performances by her exquisite dancing. The other members of the "Little Actors' Club" are Miss Anne Ryther, daughter of Colonel and Mrs. Dwight W. Ryther; Miss Sara Shallenberger and Martin C. Shallenberger, Jr., Miss Mary Priest and Charlotte Priest.

Saturday night the opera "Mignon" was given, with Miss Mary Priest as the count, and no real count, with all the speed of today, could have made more ardent love. The balcony scene where Felma starts her flirtation by casting a rose at the feet of the count was a finished piece of acting. Miss Charlotte Priest, with her lovely golden hair and quaint costume, was a vision. Martin Shallenberger, as Mignon, showed decideded talent in his part. If the applause and enthusiasm of the audience was an indication of the success of the performance, this little troupe certainly scored a hit.

Anne Ryther took the part of the gypsy who stole Mignon, and Sara Shallenberger, the old count who had a lapse of memory.

These children of the officers of the army have traveled all over the world, living in large and small towns, are so accustomed to the different customs and costumes of places that it is a comparatively easy thing for them to stage a performance. Many of them have lived in foreign countries and are familiar with the presentation of the operas, so that they can stage one in miniature.

Statugraf Exhibit.

The exhibit of statugraf during the past few days was the center of admiring groups between sessions of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs during the convention held at the Biltmore hotel. Mrs. Guy King, while traveling in South America recently, saw these fascinating colored and life-like photographs which adorned every home into which she went in Buenos Ayres.

"The handsome twin sons of Mr. and Mrs. Hall Miller, John and Sebastian, wearing white sailor suits with an insignia on one of their sleeves; Amanda Jane Noland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Noland, Linwood avenue, an exquisite-looking 4-year-old, with a head of golden curls and dressed all in white; Ruth, Anna and Frances, lovely little daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Butters, in hand-made dresses of white voile, ornamented at the neck with a narrow blue ribbon bow and streamers; Helen Dargan Lowndes, wearing an exquisite pink frock and fetching flower-trimmed leghorn hat; Louise and Guy King, Jr., beautiful children of Dr. and Mrs. Guy King, the little girl in a blue linen smock, with Guy, Jr., wearing a dark blue flannel sailor suit, the kind the South American boys have to wear to keep warm in summertime, were among the Atlanta children most charmingly portrayed in natural and graceful poses. This display of pictures was not only artistic but is a unique feature and type in the photographic world.

The idea originated in Italy and was seen by Atlantans while traveling in a foreign country who immediately became attracted by the beauty and the art of this style of photography. The first picture of this style of art seen in Atlanta was that of a young soldier, a member of a prominent Atlanta family, which was made at Nice, where he was recuperating after being wounded in the world war.

Mrs. King, during her residence in Buenos Ayres, became so interested in the idea that she studied the work, and made a thorough investigation of how to make a statugraf.

Oodles of Felicitations.

Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Nevin have received oodles of felicitations on the birth of their little daughter earlier in the week at White Gables, the home of the little baby's maternal grandparents in Kirkwood, Miss Mae Emery Nevin is the third generation born in this ancestral home. Here it was her grandfather, Dr. Walter B. Emery, first saw the light of day, and her mother, for whom she is named, was born. The new arrival's father is very popular with his in-laws, having learned much about how to please the gentler sex from his sisters, Mrs. Harry Vaughan and Miss Ida Nevin. His wife's two sisters, Misses Blanche and Louise Emery, affectionately nicknamed him "Colonel," and he is very much beloved by the members of the Emery household.

"Home, Sweet Home" may be truthfully written of the Emery home, for here it is real family love abounds. Since the arrival of the baby girl at "White Gables" there have been many joyous family gatherings and loving hearts beat with pride, while loving arms and hands tenderly reach out to hold this precious bit of baby femininity. She is but a few years younger than her baby uncle, Walter B. Emery, Jr., who has been his parents and sisters' idol. The countenance of James B. Nevin, paternal grandparent of tiny Miss Nevin, is wreathed in as many smiles as that of her maternal grandfather as they together toast her good health and happiness.

Sends Telegram to Grandfather.

"Arrived Saturday, November 8, and send my best love to my grandfather."

Such was the text of the telegram sent to Robert W. Davis by his adorable baby granddaughter, Emily Bartlett Davis Carson, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hobart Carson, of Dallas, Texas. Beauty, charm, wit, a flame-like personality and a background of aristocratic ancestry are the rich inheritance of this baby, in whom many Atlantans are greatly interested, even though she will name Texas as her birthplace. Her mother, whose name she bears, as Miss Emily Davis, was a deb of winter before last, whose popularity and attractiveness made her the central figure of fifty or more parties during her debutante year. Ever since she was big enough to go to dances and parties she has enjoyed great belleship among the Tech college fraternity. Mr. Carson claims Tech as his alma mater. The little girl's youthful grandmother was Miss Henrietta Collier, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Collier, leaders in their time in Atlanta's civic and philanthropic life. Little Miss Carson is the descendant of some of the noblest and most representative families of Virginia, Georgia and Ohio on her maternal and paternal sides. Mr. and Mrs. Dwight A. Carson are her proud paternal grandparents.

Americans Attend "Saturnalia."

A former Atlantan of note, now living abroad, is Mrs. Mrs. Bristol, the lovely Mrs. William Bailey Thomas, as we all knew her here. Her husband, Rear Admiral Bristol, is commanding the American naval detachment in Turkish waters, and they entertained at dinner on the U. S. S. Scorpion on the Adriatic sea in Venice in compliment to two other Americans, the naval attache of the American embassy, Captain Kenneth T. Castleman, and his beautiful wife, the former Miss Jessie Norton, of Louisville, Ky., who are residing in Rome. Mrs. Castleman was the sensation of Atlanta society when she came here to act as bridesmaid at the marriage of Mrs. Palmer, who was Miss Bessie Draper, sister of Jesse Draper and an Atlanta belle and beauty, now residing in the national capital. Mrs. Castleman was a wonderful type of brunette loveliness, with the most expressive pair of brown eyes one ever could hope to see, while Mrs. Palmer was her exact opposite, a vivid blonde beauty, one making a perfect foil for the other.

After the dinner party on the Scorpion, they all attended the Saturnalia at the Hotel Excelsior in Lido. This is a brilliant night fete planned on a most magnificent and elaborate scale. The weather was perfectly ideal, and the Roman trichinium (which the dictionary interprets as a dining room furnished with couches or benches on three sides). The guests recline at the table after the ancient Roman fashion, and the benches are upholstered in gorgeous colors and materials. All the waiters were dressed for this Bacchanalian feast in Roman costume, forming an impressive and imposing procession, carrying huge roasts on the spit, beautifully garnished dishes and baskets of exquisite fruit.

The orchestra, composed of ancient Romans, played to the amazement of the Americans, a program of familiar jazz music. Lido is always crowded for these fetes with travelers who plan to reach there in attendance upon this outstanding event.

Agnes Scott Club Will Meet Tuesday With Mrs. Gaines

Miss Nannette Hopkins, dean of Agnes Scott college, and Miss Louise McKinney, professor of English, will speak at the meeting of the Agnes Scott club to be held Tuesday afternoon, November 18, at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Lewis Gaines, 18 Park lane, Ansley Park.

Miss Hopkins and Miss McKinney have just returned from trips to Charlotte, Montgomery and Richmond for the purpose of organizing Agnes Scott clubs in those cities similar to the local organization. Reports on the success of their efforts will be a feature of the meeting. The gathering Tuesday will also be the last one before the Christmas bazaar. All members, therefore, are urged to be present so as to learn the final arrangements for this occasion.

Lovely Autumn Bride

League of Women Voters Plans Important Meeting November 20

Mrs. Sanford Gay, president of the Atlanta League of Women Voters, announces a special meeting of all of the members of the Atlanta league Thursday morning, November 20, at 10:30 o'clock, at Phillips & Crew hall. Every member is urged to attend this meeting, which is one of the most important meetings the league has ever held.

Action will be taken on the following questions: (1) Whether to close the league's office or not; (2) consolidated budget for 1924 and 1925; (3) a probable charter campaign in 1925; (4) initiation fees for new members.

On the evening of Thursday, November 20, the members of the Atlanta League of Women Voters are invited to attend the celebration of the 25th anniversary of the Carnegie library, at the library from 8 to 10 o'clock.

Mrs. Gay urges that as many members as possible take advantage of this splendid opportunity to visit the library at off hours, when they will be shown over the entire building, and an interesting explanation given of how the library is run, and the many benefits that may be derived from becoming a member. Books can be obtained from the Carnegie library explaining just how to do any and everything a normal human being could possibly desire to do, it was announced at a recent meeting of the league, where the invitation was issued to the league members.

Mrs. J. M. Wallace, chairman of the business women's division of the Atlanta League of Women Voters, will hold her regular weekly joint meeting with the members of the Y. W. C. A. at the building of the Y. W. C. A., 21 West Baker street at 6:30 o'clock, where supper will be served for 25 cents a plate.

Mrs. Wallace has arranged a series of lectures on "Civic Education" to be given at these suppers for the benefit of her members. On this evening Hon. Lucien Knight will give an address, which will continue the line of the series in thought. Members of all the church circles and church business women and the members of the Business and Professional Women's club are invited to attend this supper.

Miss Eleonore Raoul, chairman of organization for the Atlanta League of Women Voters and for the Georgia league, will speak before the members of the Atlanta League of Women Voters Friday, November 21.

Miss Annie G. Wright, prominent business woman in Augusta and president of the Augusta league, is planning a very large and elaborate meeting for Miss Raoul, whose talk she expects to pave the way for bigger and better accomplishments of the Augusta league.

Insurance Group Entertained at Tea.

The members of the junior banquet hall insurance group of the Atlanta Woman's club held a meeting Friday afternoon at the club, which took the form of a business and social gathering.

At the last meeting of this group Mrs. N. O. Newman was elected chairman to take Mrs. Capers Andrews' place and Mrs. J. Bonar White was elected as secretary and treasurer to take the place of Mrs. Legare Davis, who recently resigned from the group. The officers of the group as they now stand are Mrs. N. O. Newman, chairman; Mrs. J. Bonar White, secretary and treasurer; Mrs. Paul Turner, press chairman, and Mrs. J. R. Klebold, telephone chairman.

After the business session, which was presided over by the newly elected chairman, Mrs. Paul Turner was hostess to the group at a bridge-tea, bridge being played in the beautiful banquet hall of the club by the following members: Miss Grace Freeman, Mrs. Capers Andrews, Mrs. Miller Case, Mrs. Oscar Lindholm, Mrs. William Russell, Mrs. W. B. Swint, Mrs. C. W. Stoddard, Mrs. A. B. Buehl, Mrs. D. E. Tyler, Mrs. J. R. Klebold, Mrs. J. S. McCauley, Mrs. N. O. Newman and Mrs. Paul Turner.

DR. LACY TO ADDRESS MEMORIAL EXERCISES

Dr. Ben R. Lacy, Jr., pastor of the Central Presbyterian church, will be the principal speaker at memorial exercises at 3 o'clock this afternoon at Pershing Point by the War Mothers' Service Star legion. The services are to be a tribute to the 140 Fulton county boys who lost their lives in the world war, according to Mrs. Sam Jones, president of the legion.

The legion has followed the custom of honoring these heroes on the Sunday following each Armistice day.

At Pershing Point, where the services will be held, is a tablet bearing the names of the Fulton county heroes who gave their lives for their country. This tablet was erected some years ago by the legion.

Emory Concert Orchestra Concert.

The Emory Concert orchestra will give its first concert of the 1924 season Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Emory chapel. The orchestra has 35 members this year, including many stars who have delighted Emory and Atlanta audiences in the past as well as a number of new musicians of rare ability.

Byron Warner, a former member of the Emory Glee club, who is now director of Warner's Seven Aces, will render several tenor solos. Mr. Warner has made a name for himself in Atlanta musical circles, especially in the operalogues preceding opera week in which he has taken part.

The other soloist of the concert will be Harry Pomar, violinist, who directs the Biltmore hotel orchestra in his spare time from his work as a freshman at Emory. His playing will be a feature of the occasion, both in solo work and with the rest of the orchestra.

The program will continue the high standard of musical quality which it set last year, according to the director, Dr. M. H. Dewey. It will include the march from "Tannhauser," the "Song to the Evening Star" from the same opera, the "Pas d Espagnol" of Glazunov, and an operatic fantasy based on "Pagliacci."

Members of the orchestra include: Violin—Harry Pomar, Sam Proger, W. M. Mitchell, T. B. David, G. C. Boaz, J. B. Palmour, Van H. Ferguson, Sam Geffen, J. M. Collins, M. M. Watson, Mason Bibb, C. D. Ward, A. M. Nichols, N. G. Reeves, Jr., T. W. Harbour, J. E. Johnson, Jr.; viola, E. G. Grimes; trombone, J. A. Moore, A. D. Holt; cornet, William Wilkerson, Jr., G. B. Allen, G. W. Palton, R. E. Oglesby, W. E. Hickson; clarinet, C. L. Baker, J. M. Jackson, G. H. Johnson; flute, R. D. Crawford, Jr., S. D. Kennedy; oboe, J. A. Rickard; piano, Virgil B. Hooks, Jr., Joe Finger; cello, L. B. Hardin, J. W. Eldon; tympani, George A. Morgan; drums, Morris Segal.

Notes From LaGrange College.

Dr. Charles Lane, of Macon, spent last week as the guest of LaGrange college, conducting evangelistic services every evening in the college prayer hall. On Friday evening Dr. Lane gave a lecture in the college auditorium, on the subject, "The World's Best Humor."

Miss Maude Helen Duncan, instructor of modern languages, led Y. W. C. A. vesper service Sunday evening using as her subject, "Permanent Universal Peace."

The Glee club sang "The Lost Chord" at the Armistice day exercises held in the First Baptist church last Tuesday.

Misses Mable Morrow and Amanda Glenn conducted the vesper service Saturday evening, and gave interesting talks on their trip of last June to the Y. W. C. A. conference at Montreat, N. C.

Debaters have been chosen for the annual junior-senior debate. They are: Misses Gertrude Strain, of Calhoun; LaMartha McCaine, of LaGrange; Bonnie Hale, of Rome, and Cornelia Haley of Elberton.

Burkhead-Greene Wedding Is Lovely Event in Opelika, Ala.

A wedding of widespread interest throughout Alabama and Georgia was that of Miss Annabel Burkhead and Dr. Edgar Hill Greene, of Atlanta, which was brilliantly solemnized Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother, in Opelika, Ala.

The bridal party entered to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march. Two little ribbon-bearers, Katherine Stewart and Erma Cook, in dainty cream net frocks and pink ribbons, came first, forming an aisle from the stairway to the altar. They were followed by the ushers, N. J. Bell, of Montgomery, and John Harwell.

Miss Jewett Greene, first bridesmaid, the sister of the groom, was gowned in flesh chiffon.

Miss Greene was followed by Miss Mary Wear Wilson, who was gowned in flesh cut velvet with ostrich and rhinestone trimmings. Next came Miss Virginia Burt in flesh panne velvet. The bridemaids carried arm bouquets of Russell roses.

Miss Forrest Buckhead, a sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore orchid satin with ostrich and maribou.

Mrs. John Harwell, another sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore an imported gown of white princess applique with trimmings of rhinestones and crystals. The maid and matron of honor carried shower bouquets of Russell roses and valley lilies.

The bride entered with her brother, Dr. J. DeWitt Burkhead, and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Dr. John Baker Fitts, of Atlanta.

The ceremony was performed by Dr. J. D. McPhail, of Cordele, Ga.

The bride wore a Drecoi model of white Canton crepe with motifs carried out in seed pearls, crystal beads and rhinestones. A train of the same material beaded in seed pearls added to the beauty of the gown. Her veil was of rose-point lace.

The bride is the daughter of the late Mrs. William DeWitt Burkhead and the late Dr. William DeWitt Burkhead. She is the granddaughter of the late Dr. J. DeWitt Burkhead one of the south's most distinguished divines. She graduated from Converse college in June and spent the summer abroad.

The groom is the son of Charles Jewett Greene, of Shellman, Ga. He is a graduate of Emory university and Atlanta Medical college. He is a member of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity and the Kappa Si Medical fraternity. He is also a member of the Academy of Fine Arts of the University of Paris. He was a first lieutenant in the Emory unit which went overseas and a major in the Georgia National Guard, and was awarded a medal for distinguished service.

Immediately after the ceremony a reception was held.

The bride's mother wore black lace beaded in rose and amethyst and a corsage of Russell roses.

Dr. and Mrs. Greene left after the reception for a bridal trip, after which they will make their home in Atlanta.

The out-of-town guests at the wedding were: Dr. and Mrs. E. C. Davis, Dr. and Mrs. Witherspoon Wallace, Dr. J. S. Deer, Dr. T. P. Goodwin, Dr. J. J. Martini, Dr. J. A. Wood, Dr. J. B. Fitts, Mrs. Harry Hatton, E. H. Hornaday, Miss Lilly Jones, all of Atlanta; Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Davidson, W. D. Davidson, Mrs. J. E. Morris and Dr. J. D. Deare, of Dawson, Ga.; Mrs. T. P. Wolf, of Ellaville, Ga.; W. J. Ussery, of Roanoke; C. J. Greene and Miss Jewett Greene, of Shellman, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Bell, N. J. Bell, Jr., Thomas Bell and Marie Bell, of Montgomery, and Mrs. F. W. Thaisan, of Houston, Texas.

Mothers' Club Will Hold Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Mothers' club of the Misses Van Hook's private school and kindergarten will be held at the Studio, 52 Inman Circle, Ansley park, Wednesday, November 19 at 3 o'clock.

Mrs. G. S. Bachelor is hostess for the afternoon. Mrs. Harry Wilson and Mrs. J. Douglas Swaferty have charge of the program. A discussion of modern education will take place.

A Visit to Rest Cottage

BY MRS. AUGUST BURGHARD, Macon.

Delegates and visitors to the great Golden gubilee jonvention of the National Woman's Christian Temperance union in Chicago, spent Saturday afternoon and evening at historic Evanston of sacred memories, the home of Frances Elizabeth Willard, founder of the World's W. C. T. U., "America's best loved woman"—beautiful Evanston of lively interest, the National W. C. T. U. headquarters.

The general officers of the National W. C. T. U. were at home informally to the deletgates at Rest cottage, willed by Frances Willard to Miss Anna A. Gordon, president of the National and World's W. C. T. U., and occupied by her as a home. Some of the officers received in the administration building from 2 to 6.

At the same time, informal receptions were held by the Woman's club of Evanston at the clubhouse, by the University women at Harris hall and Willard hall of Northwestern university, and by the women of Frances Willard's church at the First Methodist church.

Departmental Dinners.

"Round the table" conferences of department workers were held at a series of dinners at 6:30 o'clock at the Orrington, Parkway, Cricket-on-the-Hearth and the Purple Oak tea rooms, and in the dining halls of the Baptist and Congregational churches of Evanston.

Aside from the social pleasures, these conferences afforded opportunitity for full discussion of the plans of the different departments operated by the organization.

Rest Cottage.

Gabled-roofed, vine-embowered Rest cottage is on the handsome residence avenue leading to the campus of the Northwestern university.

"The Den," as Frances Willard called her study and library, is the heart of Rest cottage. There is to be seen the oak rocking chair near her desk, and the satchel, "Old Faithful," placed under it, are eloquent reminders of Miss Willard's unwearying, persistent journeyings over land and sea. Visitors reverently gazed upon Miss Willard's well-worn Bible and Testament, tied with the white ribbon, resting upon her desk. On the couch is an elegant silk quilt given by the white-ribbon women of Mount Vernon, N. Y., and many friends who contributed bits of embroidery.

Objects of Interest.

A beer mug decorated with white ribbon is a trophy of the Hillsboro, Ohio, crusade, December, 1873. In Miss Willard's handwriting it is inscribed as a gift from "Mother" Thompson, a leader in the temperance crusade from which the W. C. T. U. developed.

All over the house are reminders of Lady Henry Somerset. Miss Willard's great and gracious friend, but a copy of the famous painting, "Diana or Christ," over the desk, is the gift that attracts most attention. Near the handsome mantel and hearth is the spinning wheel that belonged to Frances Willard's great-grandmother, and a picture of her ancestor, "the Reverend Mr. Samuel Willard," president of Harvard college in 1701, and for 30 years pastor of Old South church, Boston.

The mottoes most conspicuous and most beloved by Miss Willard and her mother, known as "Saint Courageous," are: "Let something good be said;" "Nothing is inexorable but love;" "Those are of freedom life-deserving who daily take them both by storm;" "For who knows most, him loss of time most grieves."

A tall mahogany clock, quaintly displaying the face of the moon and the days of the month, made by Simon Willard, of Boston, stands to the left of the fireplace.

The Old-Fashioned Parlor.

Shown at the right is the parlor as it was in the olden days, except that Miss Gordon has added some family treasures and a few pictures. The central one of these is an excellent portrait of Madam Willard, and above it and around it are grouped the pictures of Mr. Willard, Frances, Oliver and Mary. In the corner is the organ used at family prayers. There are books and books, many of them the gifts of the authors.

In an Annotated Testament on the center table are these meaningful words from the last prayer of Mother Willard at family worship: "May we feel that we are so linked to Thee that no harm can come to us in this or any world." On a shelf of the closely-filled bookcases are the "samplers" made by Miss Willard and her sister, Mary. Miss Willard was 14 and her sister 11 when they finished these samplers, and this is the only piece of "finished" needlework, it is said, Miss Willard ever did.

The brass andirons at the fireplace and the candlesticks on the mantle are more than 100 years old and are the gifts of Mrs. Lillian M. N. Stevens, who followed Miss Willard as National W. C. T. U. president.

In the Hall.

In the hall are pictures of Forest home, the farmhouse near Janesville, Wis., where Miss Willard's childhood was "invested, not spent," as she declared.

Here also are Miss Willard's wheel, "Gladys," and the music-box given her by Countess Somers, Lady Henry Somerset's mother. Opposite the parlor is Miss Gordon's former office, where is shown a most interesting set of tiny pewter dishes and a toy village—Miss Willard's childhood toys.

Nearby are a cup and saucer that once were John Wesley's. One does not think of Susanna Wesley as having time for personal adornment, but here are a pair of earrings and bits of lace and ribbon that were hers. These Wesley souvenirs were given to Miss Willard by a descendent of the Wesley family on the occasion of her address in John Wesley's church in London.

Goucher Club Will Honor Dr. Peters.

Members of the Goucher College club of Atlanta, of which Mrs. Frank J. Henry is president, will honor Dr. Iva L. Peters, associate head of the Southern Woman's Educational alliance, by a social function on Tuesday afternoon. Dr. Peters, who will be in Atlanta this week, is to be the guest of Mrs. E. H. Cone at 288 The Prado.

On Wednesday Dr. Peters will speak on "Helping Girls Find Themselves Today" at luncheon at the Ansley hotel, at which leading educators of Georgia will be present. Mrs. Samuel M. Inman, president of the Southern Woman's Educational alliance, will welcome the guests.

On Monday Dr. Peters will speak at a luncheon of public school principals at Bass Junior High school, where she will be the guest of Miss Emma Wesley. On Tuesday she will give a talk to the vocational counselors of the schools at the city hall.

Dr. Peters is director of the vocational guidance work at Goucher college, and has been loaned this year to the Southern Woman's Educational alliance as advisor to colleges. During this week she will visit Agnes Scott college, University of Georgia and Wesleyan college, where she will speak to student groups, and hold vocational conferences.

Business Women Hold Banquet.

The Atlanta Business and Professional Women's club celebrated its third anniversary at the Atlanta Woman's club Wednesday evening with a banquet served in the banquet hall.

Mrs. Margaret Wimberly, president of the club, was toastmistress and introduced the speakers. Mrs. J. E. Hayes, of Montezuma, who is the past president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs and who is the present postmistress of Montezuma, spoke very interestingly on the trained woman and the untrained woman of today, also of the advantage and the disadvantage of women trained and untrained.

Miss Jane Van de Vrede, who is the past president of the Atlanta Business and Professional Women's club and one of its organizers, spoke very interestingly on the history of the club, pointing out that a club in its infancy could not have much history.

Mrs. Nellie Edwards and Mrs. Floyd M. Bridwell gave a beautiful musical program, singing a duet, "Fortune Teller," by Gabussi, also "Sing, Birds, on the Wing," by Godsey Nutting, and "I Bring You Heart Ease," by Branscomb. Ernest Hartsock, who is one of Atlanta's youngest organists, played the accompaniment for Mrs. Edwards and Mrs. Bridwell.

Mrs. Wimberly was assisted in receiving the guests and club members by the officers of the club.

Hearing Music in New York

In the Orchestral Realms

BY MARGUERITE BARTHOLOMEW.

The quality of musical appreciation in a community can be most accurately determined by its support of orchestral concerts. No form of musical expression is comparable to that of the modern symphony orchestra in its infinite variety and mode of appeal, and no form of musical expression can develop in the music-lover more intelligent discernment nor disclose to him more potential vistas of aesthetic enjoyment.

How subtle, how psychic are the nuances of a great orchestra! How faithfully they reflect the composer's inner-consciousness, his philosophy of life, the very essence of his personality! What an untold wealth of impressions, of varying moods are they able to convey! Exhaustive, they run the gamut of human emotions and sensibilities. They paint glamorous tone-pictures in glowing and exquisite tints, they unfold descriptive narrative, they impart nationalism and local color.

As Americans, we may well be proud of the prestige attained by our great metropolis as a purveyor of orchestral music. In quality and quantity her symphony concerts are unsurpassed, and her orchestral season, ever replete and brilliant, promises this year to attain greater preeminence than ever before.

Philharmonic First.

Among the three local organizations the veteran Philharmonic society ranks first in importance and is entering upon its 83rd season. Its splendid body of musicians will be conducted by Willem van Hoogstraten during the first half of the season and in January Willem Mengelberg, that dynamic genius of the baton, will return from Holland for the remainder of the season. Henry Hadley, of New York, is associate conductor and aside from its regular program, the Philharmonic society announces the importation of two celebrated Europeans as guest-conductors—Wilhelm Furtwaengler, of Leipzig, Germany, successor to the late Arthur Nikisch, most renowned chef d'orchestre of his time, and Igor Stravinsky, noted Russian composer, and leading spirit among the modernists. His music—the writer hesitates to associate a word of such aesthetic implication with the output of this radical iconoclast—has revolutionized the creative tendencies of today and his stentorian promoters are valiantly endeavoring to popularize it in this country. The prospective visit of this much-discussed and erratic genius promises to create a stir comparable to the recent flutter of royalty in musical circles!

The New York Symphony under its well-known conductor, Walter Damrosch, announces 51 concerts, and of that number there will be six for young people and five for children.

The State Symphony, under Joseph Stransky, formerly with the Philharmonic, will give 21 concerts in New York.

Boston Orchestra.

Lovely interest conters in the annual series of ten concerts by the Boston Orchestra this year, due to the fact that it has recently acquired, as wielder of the baton, that most spectacular figure among European conductors, Serge Koussevitzky, a Russian, who has been the sensation of Paris since the war. Indicative of his impetuosity and indomitable energy, it is told of him that his only means of obtaining entry into Moscow conservatory was by accepting a scholarship open to a player of the double-base. He took up this rather ungrateful instrument and became so proficient that he was known as the most remarkable double-bass player in Europe.

He is described as a master of orchestral technique and color, with a genius for assembling novel and interesting programs and a decided flair for modernism. His New York appearances will rank among the most engrossing musical events of the season.

And that superb ensemble from the Quaker city under its famous leader, Leopold Stokowski, will contribute its annual musical symposium for the delectation of the fortunate few—comparatively speaking—who hold subscription tickets.

Like his Russian colleague, Leopold Stokowski was willing to seek recognition in a humble way until an opening in his chosen profession should present itself. After coming to America he held the position of organist and choirmaster at St. Bartholomew's Episcopal church, on Park avenue, for several years.

The Metropolitan orchestra will be heard in other than operatic repertoire in ten Sunday afternoon concerts, sponsored by the Society of the Friends of Music and conducted by Arthur Bodansky.

The Schola Cantorum and the Oratorio Society will each give a separate series of oratorio concerts and thus ad infinitum does the season unfold its manifold prospects.

Girl Scout Activities.

Presentation of merit badges to 15 Atlanta girl scouts for distinctive home and community service marked the meeting of the Atlanta Girl Scout Court of Awards which met Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Sigmund Pappenheimer on West Eleventh street.

Mrs. H. L. N. Parrry, local director, presided and made the presentations. Miss Sue Claflin, who organized the first girl scout troop in Atlanta, made a brief talk. Mrs. William Gunn spoke on "what it means to be the mother of a girl scout." She is mother of three girl scouts. Mrs. Pappenheimer was assisted in receiving her guests by her daughter, Miss Louise Pappenheimer.

The members of the court of award are, Mrs. Edwin Peeples, chairman; Mrs. Frank D. Holland, Mrs. H. L. Parry, Mrs. J. G. Thrower, Miss Rosemary Stevenson, Mrs. Sigmund Pappenheimer, Mrs. Alfred Newell, Mrs. Malcolm Fleming, Mrs. George Gannt, Mrs. Sam Finley, Miss Sue Claflin, Mrs. Henry Davis, Mrs. William Arnaud, Mrs. William Gunn and Mrs. Holland Judkins.

Planning for Your Washing

Thousands of housewives know, and have always known, that the laundry's method of washing in its big, clean, sanitary plant is superior to the washwoman with her dirty washtubs and wearing washboards.

But many of them, even now—although they would much prefer to—do not use the laundry because they do not know that the laundry has a particular family wash service to suit all needs.

No matter how large or how small the family may be, or how large or small the wash allowance, you will find a service at the laundry that you will call ideal. You'll think it was just made for your needs, and it was. From the economical wet wash to the immaculate prim-prest, all of these services are the outcome of many years of experience.

Just call your laundry. Tell them your family wash requirements. Let them be your wash advisers. That is the best way to solve your family wash problems for all times.

HAROLD LLOYD STARS IN 'HOT WATER,' HOWARD

The Boy in This Picture Will Make You Laugh for an Hour.

You have heard of the fellow who vowed never to fall for a pair of "soft-boiled eyes?" He usually is the first to flop. It is this type of character Harold Lloyd portrays in his newest laugh sensation, "Hot Water," his second venture as an independent producer, which will be the Howard attraction next week. In the opening scenes of the picture, Lloyd is shown running to a wedding to play best man for his pal. On the way he bumps into pretty Jobyna Ralston, and all his resolutions never to give up his freedom for any skirt are shot right there. The balance of the picture relates the story of their matrimonial life, with their ripples turned into wild waves of discontent through the intervention of the girl's mother, and her two brothers. There is much that's true to life in "Hot Water," but even the mother-in-law with the heart of a traffic policeman, depicted in this fun-maker, will have to laugh at the development of the film. One wonders how so many laughs can be created as are crowded in the reels of "Hot Water," but Lloyd and his staff eat and sleep gags while they are engaged on the picture. They never allow their thoughts to wander, and it is this concentration which brings them the tremendous success that has been won by Harold Lloyd and his pictures in the last few years. Jobyna Ralston, Josephine Crowell, Charles Stevenson and others will be found in the support of Harold in "Hot Water." "Maud Muller," a dramatic, beautiful and inspired picture version of a favorite poem by John Greenleaf Whittier, one of America's greatest poets, will be a novel offering, with Marjorie Daw, Bruce Fordon, Elinor Field and others in the cast, will undoubtedly make a decided hit with the Howard patrons during this coming week. Other novelties such as the news-reel, etc., will help to put "Hot Water" over in great style.

A special prologue billed under the heading of Harold Lloyd, Jr., will be impersonated by Morris Tupman. This is a surprise offering to Howard patrons, so full details are withheld.

Mr. Risinger, carrying out his policy of giving the Howard patrons a wide variety of overtures, has compiled for this week a pleasing arrangement which he calls "Bits of Hits." He has chosen the most popular numbers from past musical comedy successes, namely: "Look for the Silver Lining," from Sally; "Please Turn to Love," from Buddies; "Allah's Holiday," from Katinka, and "Until You Say Goodbye," from Lady Billy. In addition to the overture, he will present the latest comic success with unique verses entitled, "Go 'Long Mule." The feature, "Hot Water" will be scored in the usual painstaking manner, enhancing the comic situations by the proper musical setting. Among the numbers used will be many former hits, including "Stumbling," "Runnin' Wild" and selections from "Jack-o'Lantern." For the short subject entitled "Rambles of a Raindrop," Mr. Risinger will use the overture to "Midsummer's Night Dream," by Felix Mendelssohn.

Sabatini Story Captain Blood At Metropolitan

With all the sweeping drama, the moving pageantry, the gorgeous color that made "The Sea Hawk" the outstanding picture of the year, and the name of Rafael Sabatini famous, there comes to the Metropolitan theater this week another picture based on an even more popular story by the same author, and proclaimed the finest sea story even filmed. It is "Captain Blood," a David Smith production, sailing under the Vitagraph banner.

It is the most ambitious production in Vitagraph's long list, and it rivals the best efforts of the foremost producers. Like "The Sea Hawk," the action takes place almost entirely on the high seas with great Spanish galleons engaged in mighty battles, while a charming Irish doctor, Peter Blood by name, unjustly accused of treason and forced into slavery, wins his way to glory and to freedom.

Into the character of Peter Blood, Rafael Sabatini has woven all that is most lovable in the Irish temperament —a fine courage, a sturdy bravery, an abounding love of adventure, a sense of humor that is a saving grace, a ready wit that is the gift of the gods, impulsive generosity and enduring charm. In a role that suits him better than anything he has ever played —even better than his delightful Will Banion in "The Covered Wagon," J. Warren Kerrigan is the outstanding figure in the title role of "Captain Blood."

A considerable fortune went into the making of the picture, for one could not translate Sabatini's colorful story to the screen without a lavish outlay of money. But it is not on such grounds that "Captain Blood" makes its bid for fame. The moving drama of the story, the delicious romance, and its fine detail, reflecting accurately, dramatically and feelingly the customs as well as the events of that vivid period of history guarantee "Captain Blood" an enviable place in screen art.

Briefly the story relates the adventures of Peter Blood, handsome young Irish physician, who because he gives medical aid to a follower of the Duke of Monmouth in his rebellion against King James, was condemned as a slave to the Barbadoes, from whence he escapes with his fellow convict-rebels during an attack on the colony by the Spaniards, by capturing the enemy's galleons. Establishing himself as captain of the vessel, Blood becomes leader of the buccaneers and the terror of the seas.

Eventually when an emissary from the king comes to offer Captain Blood a commission in the king's navy and Peter learns that James II has been dethroned and a friendly king has ascended to the throne, he accepts the commission, gives up the pirate life, signalizes himself on many occasions for exceptional bravery, and is rewarded by the governorship of Jamaica and the affection of the charming Arabella, whom he had long adored.

Besides J. Warren Kerrigan, who plays the title role, the cast includes Jean Paige, Alan Forrest, James Morrison, Charlotte Merriam, Bertram Grassby, Wilfrid North and Otis Harlan.

Another score as important in its scope and classic in its construction as the one assembled for the "Sea Hawk" has been written by Enrico Leide to accompany the action of Captain Blood. It contains bits of old English and Spanish melodies and folklore, and it will be enhanced by love themes typical of the period in which the picture evolves. The main musical theme used when Captain Blood and Arabella appear in love scenes is "The Swan," by Saint Saens, an ethereal melody with a swing specially orchestrated for this score. To open the program in the same atmosphere of the main photoplay, Mr. Leide has selected the "March of the Prophet," by Meyerbeer, and the triumphal march, "Dream of Glory," as used in the Parisian production of the Folies Beregere, will follow the entrance of the invading armies.

"Three Weeks."

(Palace Theater.)

"In the life of every man and woman comes a "Three Weeks.'"

That is the claim of Elinor Glyn, authoress and expert on love, whose most famous novel, "Three Weeks," was filmed for the Goldwyn studios by Alan Crosland, and comes to the Palace theater Monday.

"One in every human being's life comes a period of supreme happiness brought about by love. Every woman, for a time, is The Lady, and every man is Paul.

"It may last for months—it may last only a few days. But in that time every person reaches his highest mental and moral point.

"One does not know at the time that he is experiencing his 'Three Weeks.'"

It was with this fact in mind that Mrs. Glyn wrote "Three Weeks," in order to idealize love and depict the "three weeks" of every man and woman.

Agnes Ayers will begin work on her starring picture for Paramount, "Tomorrow's Love," within a few days. Paul Bern, who recently completed "Worldly Goods," starring Miss Ayers, will again direct her. The story was adapted to the screen by Howard Higgins from the Saturday Evening Post story, "Interlocutory," by Charles Brackett.

'THE BORDER LEGION' RIALTO FEATURE SHOW

"The Border Legion," starring Helen Chadwick and Antonio Moreno, which is going to be shown at the Rialto theater this week, will be one of the most thrilling picture shown in Atlanta in months. It is one of Zane Grey's most thrilling pictures and he himself thinks it very fine.

"The Telephone girl," starring Alberta Vaughan in "Money to Burns," also is on the fine program which the Rialto management has assembled for the week's entertainment of it's patrons.

"The Border Legion" tells the story of a cowpuncher who was told by the "sweetest girl in the world" and that he was "too lazy even to be bad." He turned desperado and joined a band of outlaws to become a rip-roaring, law-defying, six-shooting cut-up. She reformed him and brought him to the altar tamed. There is more thrilling drama in one foot of this film than any other Zane Grey story ever put on a silver sheet.

The brand new comedy of "The Telephone Girl" has made a hit everywhere shown and is sure to throw Rialto fans into paroxysms of merriment.

The Rialto's "lost and found" list also has brought the theater great credit for considerations of patrons.

But don't forget to see "The Border Legion."

Antonio Moreno, as the cowpuncher in "The Border Legion," is in love with a beautiful daughter of the west, played by Helene Chadwick —so much so, in fact, that he neglects his work to visit her and is discharged by Charles Ogle, playing the part of a cattle owner. The girl taunts Moreno and he rides away to join "The Border Legion," a band of conscienceless outlaws headed by Frank Carlton, leading man and baritone. Miss Loie Bridge, star of the company, has never played in New York since she became a leading comedienne, although she has been offered starring parts in one or more Broadway productions for each of the last five or six years.

Other members of the cast principals, all of whom are well known in musical stock, are Earle Young, second baritone and character man, and Tommy Wiggins, general utility actor.

The chorus girls are: Josephine Beach and Garnett Beach, Virginia and Jane Bane, Alice Norris, Patricia Evans, Rose Elwood, Priscilla Winthrop, Dorothy Crennan, Betty Prue, Virginia Birmingham, Dorothy Winters and Marion Bonnell.

Miss Bonnell is the only Atlanta girl in the company, having been cast in the chorus with prospects of getting small parts and some specialty numbers from time to time after she had been selected as the only one of 20 Atlanta applicants who could qualify for a place in the company.

Miss Birmingham, another of the chorus, was the comedienne and co-star, with Eddie Heffernan, director and leading man of the "Georgian Frolics" at Loew's Grand theater in October of last year. Mr. Heffernan and Miss Birmingham have both been featured in a musical revue on the Keith circuit and in a revue in one of the smartest New York roof gardens since they left Atlanta.

All members of the chorus have participated in at least one big Broadway success and were picked for voice and acting ability as well as for grace, shapeliness and good looks.

Nearly half of the household labor-saving equipment used in Australia is from the United States.

An electrical wringer that can be easily moved to any part of the house has been invented.

New Musical Company Chorus and Principals Now Ready at Lyric

The complete cast of the Loie Bridge Musical Comedy company, which opens Monday at the Lyric theater in "Syncopated Nerves," was announced Saturday, and includes four singers who have starred in Broadway productions and the technical director who was responsible for the last three productions of the "Passing Show" and for a number of other big hits in American musical comedy.

The Broadway stars include Jeanne LeBrun, dramatic soprano and prima donna; Blanche Granger, mezzo-soprano and ingenne; Eddie Heffernan, tenor and comedian, and Rockliffe Fellowes and Gibson Gowland.

Later the girl repents and takes Ogle to ride with her to find Moreno and bring him back. They are intercepted by Fellowes, who kills Ogle and steals the girl. In the lonely cabin where she is Fellowes' prisoner, the girl is found by Moreno when he comes to join the legion. They plan to escape but are frustrated. Moreno finds a wandering preacher and he and the girl are married, she leaning from the window of her bedroom prison.

The legion goes to raid a gold camp, but is betrayed. Fellowes, Gowland and two other bandits alone escape from a street fight, during which Moreno has rescued the girl and is fleeing with her on the gold coach. The remnants of the band hold up the coach, wound Moreno and again capture the girl.

In a game of cards in another cabin, the girl is won by Gowland, but at the crucial moment Moreno staggers in and stands swaying in the doorway. Then he ensues one of the most dramatic points in the picture, in a scene fraught with stirring action. William Howard directed.

TOM MIX IS STAR IN LOEW'S PHOTOPLAY

Popular Screen Actor at His Best in "The Trouble Shooter."

If you want to watch Tom Mix hit the mark see him in "The Trouble Shooter," the new Fox picture which comes to Loew's Grand theater tomorrow. He rides that dare-devil little horse, Tony, across a swaying trestle with a speeding locomotive coming up behind. He takes the nervy animal through a mountain storm on "horse snowshoes." Never heard of them? Well, Mix invented them and Tony wears 'em.

The story of "The Trouble Shooter" was written by Frederick and Fanny Hatton, after a searching study of the lives and duties of western linemen employed by the power companies which string wires through the mountains and the desert wastes.

"The Trouble Shooter" is the name of the lookout man for a big power plant, whose dangerous job is to see that wires and cables are kept in perfect condition. The story suggested itself to the Hattons as a result of a talk with George T. Bigelo, third vice president of the Southern Sirras Power company. Mr. Hatton, roomed with Mr. Bigelo at college, and they met again recently at a fraternity dinner. Expressing keen interest in the work of the "trouble shooter" with a power plant, Mr. Bigelow invited them over to his plant in Riverside, California, and they were taken through it. As a result of their study of this all important work, they wrote a story around the "trouble shooter" for Mr. Mix.

Most of the location is in the mountainous, snowy country, and Mix taught his famous horse, Tony, how to walk on snowshoes, for the "trouble shooter's" horse, in order to traverse the dangerous snowy country must wear snowshoes. Mr. Mix wore skiis.

Working with Mix in the cast are Kathleen Key, Earl Fox, J. Gunnis Davis, Howard Truesdale, Frank Currier, Mike Donlin, the former big league ball player, Dolores Rousse, Charles McHugh and Al Freemont. The picture was directed by John Conway and Mix never appeared to better advantage in any part in his spectacular career.

In every scene Mix and his colleagues hit the mark. Spectacular daring, a good story, romance, action and pathos, mingle in a picture which sets a new standard.

"Loving Lies."

(At Alamo No. 2.)

Monte Blue, leading star in the film production of "Loving Lies," an adaptation of Peter B. Kyne's famous story, "The Harbor Bar," and coming Monday to Alamo No. 2 for the first showing in Atlanta, has had a varied and adventurous career, covering the gamut of life's most hardy experiences. He has been a railroad engineer, a cow-puncher, has served several years at sea and made his debut in pictures as an extra in D. W. Griffith's "Intolerance." His love for the outdoors and adventure may be attributed in a great measure to his heritage, for he is one-eighth Sioux and Cherokee Indian.

"Loving Lies" offers Mr. Blue one of the best roles of his meteoric career. The supporting cast includes Joan Lowell, the 17-year-old screen star, whose rise from an extra girl to celebrity in the short period of one year is the talk of all filmdom; Evelyn Brent, another screen beauty; Charles Gerrard, Ralph Faulkner, Ethel Wales and others.

Ore from Tasmania is to be converted into steel at a mill to be built in New South Wales at a cost of $10,000,000.

LITTLE JESSIE JAMES COMING TO ATLANTA

Atlanta Theater To Have Snappiest Musical Show of Years.

To receive the unanimous indorsement of the New York critics now-a-days a musical comedy has got to be good, for with the annual production of Ziegfeld's "Follies," George White's "Scandals" and Fred Stone's "Stepping Stones," most of the reviewers are inclined to draw comparisons. So when L. Lawrence Weber offered the musical comedy sensation, "Little Jessie James," to metropolitan playgoers last season without a star he was giving the work of Harlan Thompson and Harry Archer "the acid test." Mr. Thompson wrote the book and lyrics and Mr. Archer the music, and when "Little Jessie James" became the outstanding success of the theatrical season in New York it was indeed a triumph for both of these authors. When "Little Jessie James" comes to the Atlanta theater for the week commencing Monday, November 24, with matinees on Wednesday, Thursday (Thanksgiving day) and Saturday, there is a real treat in store for local theatre-goers, for Mr. Weber has mounted the play prodigally; there is an excellent company and the smartest chorus of youth and charm seen on a local stage in a long time. Mr. Weber believes, too, in having good music well played, and to that end has engaged a Paul Whiteman Band to play Mr. Archer's score during the performance and render a jazz concert during the intermission. The band, a feature in itself, composed of the best musicians obtainable in New York, will have one of the most popular scores to play that has been written in recent years. The song hit, "I Love You," is now being sung in 32 different languages and bids fair to become more popular than "After the Ball," if such a thing is possible. The well-trained musicians under the direction of Paul Whitman, consists of piano, first and second violin, saxophone base, saxophone solo, trumpet solo, clarinet, 'cello, bass, banjo, trombone. Little Jessie James" created just as big an impression in Chicago at the Garrick theater as it did in New York and ran six months to capacity business there. It is a delightful farcical play set to tinkling tunes, telling a merry story of romance and fun with its scintillating lines, a fitting accompaniment to the clever situations of plot, and the entire musical score is of the whistleable sort that is so pleasing to the American ear. In fact, "Little Jessie James" may be justly termed the genuine American musical comedy. "Little Jessie James" is without question an ideal Thanksgiving attraction, and it seems certain that the Atlanta theater will be crowded to the utmost capacity at every performance to be given here. Arrangements have been made whereby mail orders, accompanied by remittances, will be received now, both from local and out-of-town patrons. These will be filled in the order of their receipt and in advance of the regular box office sale on Thursday.

FLA. REVUE DIRECTED BY ATLANTA PRODUCER

Miss Nellie Sullivan, Atlanta producer and director of the Nellie Sullivan School of Dance Arts, of this city, with her long list of successful productions to her credit, is at the present time in Jacksonville, Fla., where she has been favored with a handsome contract to assume entire charge of the rehearsals and direct the staging of the mammoth production to be held in that city in connection with the Florida state fair November 20-29.

It is stated that more than 400 Florida girls will take part in the production, which is well under way and one which forecasts success beyond the expectations of the fair association officials.

Loie Bridge's Musical Comedy Now at Lyric

Cast of Thirty People With Twelve Principal Characters.

"Syncopated Nerves," the merriest travestry on music ever combined with good music, is to open the engagement of the Loie Bridge Musical Comedy company at the Lyric theater.

Musical comedy starts with the first performance at 7 o'clock Monday night and continues "from now on," with performances at 7 o'clock and 9 o'clock each night and at 2:30 o'clock matinee Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

The opening bill gives each of the principals a corking comedy role and at least one real song hit that will give Atlanta an inkling as to the kind of voice the Famous Players have sent down south with Producer Edgar Barnett and Miss Lois Bridge, the star and comedienne.

The girls of the chorus will be gorgeously attired in costumes created by Director W. Francis Weldon, of Shuberts' "Artists and Models," of Ziegfeld's "Follies," of "Innocent Eyes" and a half dozen others of the artistic and popular successes of the last few years on Broadway.

The "Monsieur Beaucaire" fantasy in the first act is the only one for which costumes were not made right here in Atlanta. In that, the girls of the chorus wear the original costumes of Rodolph Valentino and Bebe Daniels which were used in the production of the motion picture of chivalrous France. Jeanne LeBrun, who plays the alluring nurse in the comedy, has a song number that approaches light opera in quality in the big feature number and Ione Barnett, daughter of the producer, is the child to whom she sings the story of romance and adventure.

Loie Bridge, star of the production, appears as "Falsetto," the musically ambitious bride of "Major Scale," a music-hating old bridegroom, played by Tommy Wiggins, character man.

At opera they meet "Count Crescendo," played by Earl Young, the juvenile. The count is "sympathetic" with Falsetto's musical aspirations and a deep-dyed intrigue begins. The major collapses finally under the strain of repeated voice lessons and concert and "Dr. Sharpe," played by Eddie Heffernan, the light comedian and tenor of the company, steps in to save him from death in the agonies of harmonitis. A soprano nurse, Miss LeBrunne, is summoned to the bedside. Then another deep-dyed intrigue begins.

Frank Carlton, leading man and baritone, and Blanche Granger, ingenue and lyric soprano, as valet and maid to the household, develop a parallel comedy romance that is as screamingly funny as either of the others.

The chorus figures, and figures is a word carefully chosen, in half a dozen real song hits and much incidental entertainment. Miss Granger's lyric soprano is revealed in a medley of light opera selected by Director Francis Weldon and Orchestra Director Calvin Rolfe. Frank Carlton's baritone booms out in a comedy song, "Charleston." Miss LeBrun has the leading voice part in the "Monsieur Beaucaire" fantasy. Eddie Heffernan gets off a spirited tenor solo with the girls in "I Wonder Who."

Miss Bridge has the big comedy hit of the evening in a travesty singing lesson, involving the entire company, girls and all.

Costumes, stage settings, lighting effects, songs, dance steps and everything else is brand new and most of it created especially to make a smashing impression on Atlanta in the opening performance.

"True Enough."

Shortly before departing for Paris to play the leading role in Rex Ingram's Metro-Goldwyn production of Ibe Blasco Ibanez novel, 'Mare Nostrum," adapted for the screen by Willis Goldbeck, Antonio Moreno was discussing bobbed hair with certain friends.

"It's easy enough to tell who is boss in the average American home today," he said.

"How so?" he was asked.

"Well," he replied, "if the wife is bobbed she's boss. Unbobbed, bossed."

O'BRIEN SEXTETTE HEADS KEITH'S SHOW

The "O'Brien Sextette," an organization of singing musicians, give positive proof that "music hath charms" in their act that is to appear three days of this week as the headlining attraction of an excellent vaudeville program.

The sextette started out to show that musicians can be singers and singers can be artists in musical endeavor. That they have accomplished their aim is answered in the immense popularity of this team in every city along the Keith circuit.

They have an aimost unique organization. It is composed of six young men, each of them a trained musician and a singer of ability. A special stage setting of beauty is a suitable frame for the aggregation.

Also the bill includes the act of Larry Meehan and Gertrude Newman, entitled "Broken Promises." And while the title has a tragic air, their act is exceptionally sprightly, they offering a lively singing, dancing and talking skit well mounted with special scenery.

One of the sets depicts a crowded theater and the drop is certainly a credit to the artists who painted it. However, it is not the frame but the picture that counts, and in this connection, Meehan and Newman possess talents sufficiently great to be effective irrespective of their scenery.

They have a fine understanding of fun and dance capabilities.

Fern Redmond and H. Wells have a delightful skit which has to do with the fortune of a gypsy fortune teller. It presents a fine character comedy with song and dance that is particularly noteworthy not only for the acting of the principals but for the clever songs and humor as well. Miss Redmond enacts the part of the fortune teller who predicts the things her victims most like to hear. Their comedy is very bright.

Van and Bell have one of the most novel acts in vaudeville. They are boomerang throwers and are remarkably adapt in this accomplishment.

The due are clever funmakers. Their humor is contagious and the manner in which they apparently enjoy the performance themselves is enough to effectually chase all signs of gloom from an audience.

Lawton, the juggler, also offers a remarkable act of skill and fun.

A Pathe newsreel and a Felix the Cat comedy complete the program.

"Contraband," Alan Crosland's new production for Paramount, has been begun at the West Coast studio. The screen play was prepared by Jack Cunningham from the novel of the same name by Clarence Buddington Kelland.

How It Happens.

Robert Z. Leonard recently raised a laugh at the expense of his wife, Mae Murray, who is shortly to be starred in Erich von Stroheim's forthcoming Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of Lehar's "The Merry Widow," which Von Stroheim has adapted for the screen in collaboration with Benjamin Glazer. Leonard and his wife were dining at the home of friends, and the conversation turned to mesmerism.

"Yes," remarked their host presently, "I was hypnotized once."

Said Leonard—

"I'm a married man, too."

DOUBLE HEADLINERS AT LOEW'S GRAND

Primrose Minstrels and Dave Harris Offered on Big Bill.

Two vaudeville acts of the big-time variety are booked for Atlanta this week, and this double headline offering will be the feature attraction at Loew's Grand theater. The acts are the Primrose Minstrels and Dave Harris, and will be seen in conjunction with one of the biggest bills of vaudeville arranged for the season at the popular vaudeville house.

Mrs. George Primrose, wife of the famous minstrel, heads the Primrose Minstrels, a cast of seven entertainers picked from the biggest minstrels and shows of the year. Chosen for their ability to sing, dance and make you laugh, Mrs. Primrose promises an act that in point of entertainment is second to none.

This edition of a real minstrel show gives you all the high spots of the real minstrel production with the songs, including the latest hits of the day in comedy and ballads, while the dancing of this troupe of artists cannot be surpassed. The Primrose Minstrels have made a big hit in the north and east, and their tour of the south is sure to add to their successes. Mrs. George Primrose is one of the active members of the Primrose Minstrels, with her seven entertainers working in fine support of this well-known star.

Dave Harris is known from coast to coast as one of the greatest entertainers on the stage today. His comedy will keep you laughing from the very second he appears, while his skill with all kinds of instruments will amaze you. Dave Harris is one of the top-notchers of vaudeville, a strictly big-time artist, and to miss him at Loew's would be missing one of the best hits of the year.

Lou Miller and Alice Bradford are a clever pair of artists, and with their sketch, "The Beauty Shop," by William K. Wells, they offer something catchy and clever in the vaudeville line.

Edna and Gracia, the Dreson sisters, are known as "the love bandits" on the stage, and these two pretty and attractive girls are sure to win a strong place in the hearts of Atlanta vaudeville fans.

Gibson and Price are eccentric manipulators, funny to the extreme, and their offering of comedy-juggling is sure to prove a hit.

Tom Mix comes in his latest photoplay, "The Trouble Shooter."

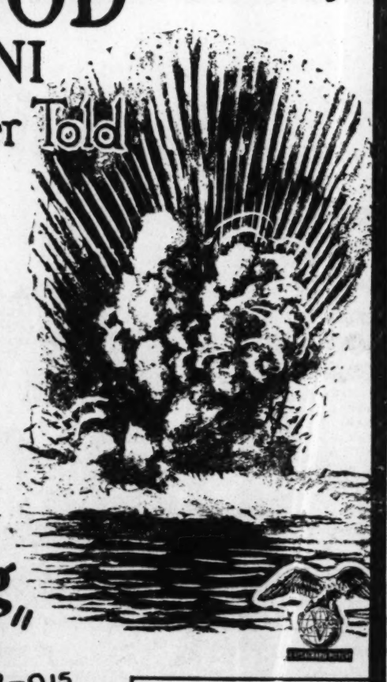

"East of Suez," chosen as Pola Negri's next starring picture for Paramount, has gone into production at the West Coast studio. Raoul Walsh will produce the film, the story of which has been adapted by Sada Cowan from Somerset Maugham's novel of Oriental life.

"PANDORA" SETTING WILL BE GORGEOUS

A stage setting of unusual grandeur is promised by V. W. Sheppard, chairman of the stage committee for the coming presentation of the dramatic opera, "Pandora," December 1-6, in the city auditorium. Many trees, shrubs and flowers have been ordered and there will be running water, fountains and a replica of a beautiful sunken garden.

Clifford Cunard, who plays the leading role, arrived Saturday following the close of a long engagement in New York. Miss Virginia Futrelle, an Atlanta girl who has risen to fame in New York theatricals, will play "Pandora."

At the rise of the curtain the audience will behold a gorgeous setting and watch the skilful hands of the sculptor as he puts the last and final touch to his immortal "Pandora." There will be thrills as the beautiful divinity comes to life. The story is told how "Pandora" was given a box, the contents of which were unknown to her, with the admonition that it was not to be opened nor its contents revealed until a certain time, and thereby hangs the plot and purpose of the drama.

One of the delightful dancing numbers will be the interpretative dance, "Spirits of the Air," with special music and electrical effects.

Dancers will be Laura Byrl Hicks, Alice Moore, Madge Marshall, Gertrude Davis, Maybelle Howard, Catherine Howard, Marion Brandon, Nannell Bagwell, Cecilia Agnew, Clare Dickson, Georgine Coppage, Frances Coker, Minnie Dunlap, Helen Odum, Daisy Garrett, Elizabeth McGee, Frances Holden, Bobby Lawrence, Nell White, Sarah Smith, Helen Anderson, Nancy Hill, Dorothy Argus, Annie Margaret Presson, Mary Etta Black, Constance Pardee, Mabel Abercrombie, Virginia Howard, Dorothy Simpson, Myrtle Sullivan, Virginia Roberts, Pauline Copeland, Marguerite Akers, Elizabeth Barge, Frances Barge, Mary Simms, Hilda McDonald, Louise Avery, Vera Archer, Gene Howell, Gene Kilian, Frances Parker, Lucia Linsey, Ruth Layfield, Marion West, Dorothy Layfield, Jacqulyn Snelling, Mary Chapman, Catherine Donahue, Mary Charles Berry, Esther Rosenthal, Carol Black, Harriet Adams, Josephine Skinner, Jean Raper, Carlton Raper, Harriett Fuller, Elizabeth Talbot, Margaret Vaugh, Elizabeth Ann Davis, Marcenia La Blanche, Mandalene Neilson, Helen Greenoe, Louise Eaton, Ruth Clotfelder, Amy Witherspoon, Clio Ross, Wauneta Moody, Marguerite Moody, Dorothy Andrews, Jewell Lester, Virginia Powell, Frances Garmon, Susie Johnson, Dorothy Cathcart, Julia Gatewood, Margaret Tibbs, Marcia Joue Neilson, Shirley Mathews and Thelma Anderson.

Tickets were distributed last week and are to be had from members of Coeur de Lion commandery, members of the Atlanta Federation of Women's clubs and members of the Eastern Star. Purchasers will have the choice of reserved seats two days beforet he box office opens for the public sale.

Ann Cornwall returns to her post as leading lady with Bobby Vernon in his new picture just entering production, "French Pastry." The comedy just finished, "High Gear," has Marian Harlan as leading lady, while Miss Cornwall played with Douglas McLean in his latest feature production.

The story of the new comedy will be laid in France and Germany with the doughboys.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

Children's Book Week

One of the most attractive Book week posters that has been used successfully is entitled "Why Not Books?" but we wish to add another word to it for this occasion: "Why Not Children's Books?" This is the month that celebrates children's book week—the time when the book stores turn their shops and windows over to the display of children's books. Among them will be the following:

Cecily (Elf Goldihair) by Clementine Helm, translated by Elisabeth P. Stork, with eight illustrations in color and specifically lining papers and title page, by Gertrude A. Kay.

ELIZABETH STORK.

This is a very popular European classic for children, of which this is the first translation in America.

"There is no doubt that Cecily, or "Elf Goldihair," to give her circus name, is a small heroine whom the little folks of the nursery will be sure to fall in love with and will invite her to remain in the U. S. A.

It is a beautiful story of how this dear little girl in riding on her white pony just rides right into the heart of all the little folks who attend the circus.

Cecily is a very happy little girl and everybody loves her because she loves everybody and tries to make them happy. She loves all kinds of animals from the fireside kittens to the circus menagerie. She delights in playing games with the little folks whom she meets and while she liked adventures and was always seeking them she finally found a fairy by the name of "Good Fortune" and then the story changes and the little circus girl learns what real home happiness is. It is a wonderful story and one that will please all the little folks.

Gritli's Children. A story of Switzerland. By Johanna Spyri, translated by Elizabeth P. Stork. The gift edition by Maria L. Kirk has 44 illustrations in color. All the little folks will recall what a beautiful story "Heidi" was, so they will be delighted that this splendid woman writer of children's stories has contributed another charming story for the Christmas of 1924.

It is a story of boy and girl life and is told by one who knows how to enjoy childish pleasures. She has created two dear little characters, Elsi and Fani, Gritli's children, and their young friends at Buchberg. There's Freddy, who is a real naturalist, for in his pockets can be found bugs, butterflies and other insects, and there is another little girl whom they meet by the name of Nora Stanhope, who has been brought to this quaint little Swiss village because she is frail and needs pure mountain air.

But the story is too beautiful not to read first-hand and there is no story-teller like the one who wrote the story. If you want to read a real sweet story about lovable children, read about Gritli's.—(Lippincott's.)

Tony Sarg's Book for Children is such a handsome and interesting picture book that it will entertain all the folks from six to sixty. There is not a dull line in the book and the illustrations picture the little boys and girls and all our friends of the animal kingdom. There is so much history in the stories, which are in rhyme, that before he knows it the little boy or girl has begun the interesting study of history. For instance: "Sir Walter Raleigh and the Hot Potato"; "Columbus and His Educated Pig;" "Demosthenes Inspires a Famous Phrase"; "Sir Isaac Newton Tumbles to the Fact That What Goes Up Comes Down," etc.—(Greenberg, Inc., New York.)

Silverfoot, by Maud Lindsay, author of, "A Story Garden for Little Children," "The Story Teller," and other books containing beautiful stories. With illustrations and picture jacket in colors by Florence Filey Young.

Any little girl from eight to twelve will enjoy the story, which I am inclined to believe is true, about a beautiful horse named Silverfoot.—(Lathrop, Lee & Shepard Co., Boston.)

CHILDREN'S BOOKS.

Clown Town—By Dixie Willson. Pictures by Erick Berry. A collection of amusing stories for the little folks—the first one being about a man and mule which is sure to make everybody laugh, and the next one is all about Clown Town which was not under a circus tent, but down in a meadow; the next is a story about a remarkable baby which will make you open wide your eyes and ears until you hear all about it. "Call the Neighbors In" to help to name the baby will be real funny and then the mule's little joke will tickle them. Chapter Six tells about the presents and the cross neighbors which will be worth reading. Other chapters are "Mother Plans a Party," "Moving Day," and then "The Circus Begins," and turn the page for a surprise—and then enjoy the surprise. (Doubleday Page & Co., New York.)

Pussy Willow's Naughty Kittens.—Lillian E. Young has written such a fascinating book for children—it is both original and appealing. It is simply and delightfully told so the little folks can enjoy it for there are lots of delightful little incidents that will keep the attention of the children.

There are 19 multi-color illustrations which are not only beautiful but will appeal to the children. Their arrangement is one of the attractive features of the book—the whole book is original from the first to the last and there is always a new surprise for the little folks for by simply opening a door, now and then, you will find a new surprise each time.

The author of the book is a talented artist, a writer who knows how to interest children, and a mother who learned it through the necessity of entertaining her own children. (Price $2. Funk & Wagnalls Co.)

The Poppy See Cakes—By Margery Clark, with illustrations by Maud and Misha Petersham. This trio of delightful people have given the little folks one of the merriest, jolliest books of nursery rhymes that has as yet been published.

Among the list of those who helped to contribute to the merry laughs that are heard from the nursery are Auntie Katushka in her bright red shawl, Andrewshek and Erminka and poppy seed cakes, goat, goose, swan, chickens, dog, cat, red-topped boots, all these figure very conspicuously in the best time the little folks ever had.

The Petershams know how to entertain and the amusing situations in this beautiful book in its gay colors will bring happiness to any little tot from three to seven years of age. (Doubleday, Page & Co. New York.)

Number Two Joy Street. This is the kind of a story that makes one wish oneself a child again! Such a wonderful book! Such a handsome book! Just such a book that a child would like to present to a little friend, for among the contributors are G. K. Chesterton, Hugh Walpole, Bell and others. (Appleton's. $2.50.)

Recitations Old and New for Boys and Girls. By Grace Gaige, who has selected the poems best suited for any occasion. $3.00.

The Wiggly Weasel and Other Stories. By Mabel Marlowe. A charming book of stories of clever animals, brownies and all their kin. The illustrations are by Harry Rountree. $1.25.

Fifty New Poems for Children and Fifty Xmas Poems for Children are anthologies of the highest type of verse for children today. $1.00.

Why Be a Goop? Gelet Burgess, author of this amusing collection of stories—prose and poetry—says that the average child has about 150 faults. He goes further and says that children gradually outgrow most of these faults, but that they need a little help to do so.

Why Be a Goop? This is a most attractive little volume. It contains painless treatment for 76 of these little errors which are administered with a sugar-coating of humor. They are put up in attractive jingles and Mr. Burgess presents them so as to make an impression on both the mother and the child. (Frederick A. Stokes & Co. New York.)

Pepin: A Tale of the Twelfth Night. By Evaleen Stein, author of "The Christmas Porringer," etc. The illustrations are by T. Matsubara. This is a volume that should be in the library of each little reader of classics. The author has many friends among the children and her contributions are unusual in their simplicity and sympathy, which always appeals to children.

While these are fairy tales, they are unusual stories and it will be a pleasure for the parents to read them to their children. (The Page Co. Boston.)

Nan's Christmas Boarder. By Francis Margaret Fox, author of "The Country Christmas," "How Christmas Came to the Mulvaneys," "Seven Little Wise Men," with illustrations by Elizabeth R. Withington and Gertrude E. Martin. The chapters are as follows: "Nan and the North Pole Scrapbook;" "The Arrival of the Boarder;" "Departure From the Dragon's Inn." and "The Perfect Christmas." Each page is so attractively illustrated that it is sure to impress the child. (L. C. Page & Co. Boston.)

The Circus A. B. C. By Dixie Willson. All about the circus and a novel A. B. C. as well.

The Little Girl's Sweet Book. By Flora Klickmann.

The Little Girl's Fancy Work. By Flora Klickmann.

First steps in candy-making and simple fancy work explained and illustrated for little folks.

The Boy Scout Yearbook. This handsome book for boys is making its annual visit, and it always receives a warm welcome, especially from the Boy Scouts. The first Boy Scouts' Yearbook was published in 1916, and for nine years it has been coming regularly to help the Boy Scouts by contributing healthy literature for their entertainment, most of the stories being taken from the lives of boys who have become splendid scouts through the right kind of reading and training.

This handsome volume contains stories of "Boys Who Made Good," "Stories of What Boys Make and Do." All this interesting and entertaining work has been accomplished through the untiring efforts of Dan Beard, a friend and lover of all boys and animals and one of nature's noblemen. (Appleton's.)

THE U. S. SERVICE SERIES.

The Boy With the U. S. Radio. By Francis Rolt-Wheeler, whose books show the interest he feels in the happiness of the boys by writing instructive books for young Americans.

The U. S. service series is considered one of the best series being published for boys. "The Boy With the U. S. Diplomats" and "The Boy With the U. S. Radio" are interesting, instructive and timely, and should be in every home library where there are boys and girls. (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard company, Boston.)

FOR BOYS EVERYWHERE.

With attention concentrated on Children's Book week it is a pleasure to note the change in the style of literature over the old books, especially those for boys. Among the books for boys are:

The Fighting Scrub. By Ralph Henry Barbour, who knows what boys like and the healthy literature they need. This is a story of a scrub football team—it is really a story of the football spirit.

Follow the Ball. by Mr. Barbour, does an unusual thing of carrying a lad clear around the year, thus including all the sports and interests of the seasons.

Infield Davis, another book in which Mr. Barbour brings out the thrills and hopes and accomplishments of a young baseballist's ambitions.

Among other stories for boys are several with historical settings; among them being Redcoat and Minute Man. A Revolutionary story by Bernard Marshall, with illustrations by Scott Williams.

Pioneer Scouts of the Ohio. By Everett T. Tomlinson, who has written a story of the pioneer days in Ohio after the Revolutionary war. It is an adventure story.

Scouting in the Wilderness. A story of scouting in 1757 by the same author, who relates some interesting events leading up to the capture of Fort William Henry.

Captain Jim Mason. By Gordon Hall Gerould, who writes an interesting and exciting story about a frontiersman's fortunes in the French and Indian war.

Filibuster is another historical fiction story, in which the hero is carried off as an unintentional stowaway to participate in the Cuban rebellion against the Spanish.

The Blue Ridge, by Scott Burton, is the tale of a mountaineers' feud.

Medicine Gold. By Warren H. Miller, a well-known big-game hunter, who knows all about the north woods and tells about it in a way to interest boys.

Deep Sea Hunters in the South Seas tells its own story.

Rat's Castle. By Roy Bridges, who interestingly relates stage coach days in England, will be thoroughly enjoyed by lovers of "Treasure Island."

The Listening Man. By John A. Moroso, who knows just what boys like and adds another thriller by writing a real detective adventure story.

JUNIOR BOOKS.

The Little Cockalorum on Her Own. This is the last book of the set comprising "The Little Cockalorum," "The Little Cockalorum Crows Again." The illustrations are by Ralph Dunkelberger. It is dedicated to "All the Little Cockalorums who have been brave enough to try their wings in the world." Penns, Philadelphia.

Jimmy Sharswood. By Roy Helton who has written the story of three months of a real boy's life. It is a most interesting story and if you will listen to this you will agree with me: "The 'gang' cavs on the empty lot under the shadow of Harrison's barn, once the home of the King of the Gypsies," furnishing the starting place for a series of unexpected happenings, and you know lots of things can happen to boys. Penns, Philadelphia.

Hilda of Landis and Company. By Pemberton Ginther, author of the "Beth Anne" books, with illustrations by the author. The books in this set Landis and Company," and the next one, which will be published by Christmas, is "Hilda of the Green Umbrella."

It was while Hilda was at Grey Cot with Mrs. Bradford, Page Carter, Cousin Jack and Esther Marie. The story is intensely interesting and will be followed with pleasure to the end.

Red Gilbert's Flying Circus. By Russell Gordon Carter, author of many interesting books for boys and girls. The illustrations are by Percy Cobse. The story of a boy who owned a circus of his own composing a pair of clowns like Vaseline and Creampuff and strange animals like Silverheels, King Richard, King Tut, Jr., and who with a chum had a fine time going around giving circus performances in little towns until they happened to meet a real circus and then they had still more fun. Penns, Philadelphia.

The Story of the Elizabeths. By Grace Humphrey, who has written a wonderful story for the boys and girls weaving the same around ten famous women who have borne the name of Elizabeth and who are considered among the noblest and the truest of all the world's womanly women. Among the names are Queen Elizabeth, Saint Elizabeth, Elizabeth Barrett Browning and others whose names are well known to all young readers. (The Penn Publishing Co., Philadelphia).

The Mushroom Boy. By Theodore A. Harper, with illustrations by Florenz Clark The story goes that to be a Mushroom boy is to see with one's imagination, and the story tells about David, a little boy who lived in a small New England village. The picture on the cover shows David and his dog sitting on top of a big toad stool. (Penn's Book).

A Little Maid of Mohawk Valley. Alice Turner Curtis, who has written a delightful story for little girls and boys about Joanne Clarke, who lived with her father and mother in a big log cabin in the Mohawk Valley. Joanne and her little playmate, Nancy Wagner, were captured by Indians while they were playing outdoors, and were carried into the depths of a big forest, but they managed to escape with the aid of an American scout. She found the Indian's pouch in which were some valuable papers which she carried to General Schuyler

There are numbers of books in this series all with historical settings and all woven around some little maid of a different town. For instance, Princetown, Massachusetts Colony, Narragansett Bay, Bunker Hill, Old Connecticut, Old Maine, New York, Philadelphia, Virginia, Maryland and Mohawk Valley. (Penn's).

Memoirs of a Donkey is a little classic for children, by Madame De Segur, translated from the French by Marguerite Fellows Melcher, with illustrations by Lauren Ford. Among the classics for little folks listed in The Little Library are, "The Rose and the Ring," "Memoirs of a London Doll," "The Little Lame Prince," "The Adventures of a Brownie," "Goody Two Shoes," Susan's Auction," "The Magic Forest," "The Peter Pan Picture Book," "Charlie and His Kitten, Topsy," "The Peep-Show Man," etc. (Published by the MacMillan Co., New York).

Honey-Sweet. By Edna H. L. Turpin. This is the first of a group of books, stories written by a southern woman who tells what she likes best in the southland. Each book is a complete story though they are all woven around the same old lovable village which she so well remembers, and many of the same characters appear in all the books. (The MacMillan Co., New York).

WOLFE SHOWS OPEN HERE MONDAY NIGHT

Atlanta's circus-loving public will have an opportunity this week to see the combined features of one of the best known organizations on the road, the T. A. Wolfe shows, which arrive here today and open Monday night for daily and nightly shows through November 22. The shows, with winter headquarters at the old Camp Gordon site, has become a permanent Atlanta organization and already scores of wild animals from jungles of Africa, India and South America are housed on the former grounds of the war camp.

Atlanta is permanent headquarters for the shows and circus officials are expecting large crowds at each performance. The tents will be pitched at Highland avenue, at the bridge, where Ringling and Barnum shows held forth when here. Convenient car schedules will be operated, it is said, and every effort will be made to accommodate show visitors.

The shows arrive early Sunday morning, via three sections of the Southern railroad, and will unload near the show grounds, on Highland avenue. "Miss Trixie" and "Miss Edna," weighing 685 and 550 pounds respectively, and said to be two of the largest women alive, will be among the first to leave the train, it is said, provided no difficulty is experienced in opening up the ends of the Pullman coach in which they will arrive. The unloading of a large collection of unusual animals, natives of far-away islands and other attractions will require a large force of hands throughout Sunday.

The amusement lovers will find over twenty different exhibitions, all the popular rides, free acts, and many novelties. Circus, museum, menagerie, wild west, far east, tropical south, frozen north, follies, musical comedy and minstrel features are presented.

There are all sorts of strange people—Hawaiians, Filipinos and Igorottes. The Igorotte village, and Dr. Frank LaMarr, in his "China Town," exposing the vices of the Chinese underworld, are educational exhibitions of the highest kind. Miss Ruth Duncan is a great feature. She is claimed to be the world's greatest giantess. Only 18 years old, she is over 7 feet tall.

There is a "Canvas Church" with the shows for the 500 members, and services are held regularly.

The public is invited to come to the show grounds any morning at 10 o'clock and see the Igorette children, savages from the Luzon islands, taugh "reading and 'ritin' and 'with-metic." A circus school is held daily by Mr. Wolfe for his employees, and they are taught and examined along the lines of their respective endeavors. There will be no street parade.

Silent Watchers Organize.

To help in the work of bringing out a record vote at the national election November 4, 20 celebrated film stars of Hollywood organized "The Silent Watcher Club" and carried out an active pre-election program in behalf of the ballot.

Members of the club were Bessie Love, Alma Bennett, Patsy Ruth Miller, Marguerite de la Motte, Ruth (Clifford Neff, Helene Chadwick, Helen Ferguson Aileen Pringle, Alice Terry, Louise Glaum, Mrs. Wallace Beery, Claire Windsor, Kathryn McGuire, Mae Busch, Gertrude Olmstead Dorothy Mackaill, Phyllis Haver, Rene Adoree and Viola Dana.

Elaborate Plans Made for Exhibit Of Commercial Art

Nothing has been left undone to assure success of the first annual commercial art exhibit, to be held in this city from November 29 through December 6, according to reports given by the various committee chairmen at a meeting Friday. The Advertising club, under whose auspices the big exhibit is being staged, is being ably supported in its endeavors by the Retail Merchants' association and various civic bodies, and from letters received from advertising men in all sections of the country, it is evident that interest in the exhibit is not only local or sectional, but even national.

"Although we will have displays from every prominent commercial art center in the land," said F. A. Wilson-Lawrenson, general exhibit chairman, "easily one of the outstanding features of the exhibit will be the work of local talent. Visitors to the Ansley hotel roof during exhibit week will be truly amazed at the calibre of commercial art being produced every day right here in Atlanta."

St. Elmo Massengale, who is seeing to it that the various southern advertising agencies are represented with adequate displays, announces that he anticipates a good response.

"The Massengale Advertising agency is at work preparing an exhibit," he said, "and the Kenneth S. Keyes company has also promised an agency display. Of the out-of-town agencies, we're sure of some interesting material from the Chambers agency, of New Orleans; the D'Arcy Advertising agency, of St. Louis; Calkins & Holden, of New York; George Batten agency, of New York, and at least six or seven other prominent advertising agency organizations."

To insure an exhibit by every commercial artist in Atlanta, A. T. Swanson, Ad club representative for this special work, is busy lining up local displays. He reports to the general committee that he expects to see work exhibited by the following local artists; Frank A. Russo, Joseph Ness, S. W. studio, Hugh C. Dennis, Louis Gregg, Julian O'Donnell, Axel Enge and the Wagstaffs.

Harrison Jones, vice president of the Coca-Cola company and vice chairman of the exhibit committee, states that he looks for excellent displays on the part of local manufacturers and advertisers. Among likely exhibitors of commercial art in its various phases he mentioned Norris, Inc., Montag Bros., Coca-Cola company, F. O. Stone Baking company, Southern Spring Bed company, and the Haverty Furniture company. The committee wishes to stress the point that the exhibit is open to all users and producers of commercial art and any prospective exhibitors are urged to get in touch with the Ad club office at Walnut 3884 at once.

George Ripley, Jr., who is in charge of incoming exhibits, announces receipt of over 75 complete displays from out-of-town, these being valued at many thousands of dollars. The National Safety council has sent in six unusual designs, and Knox hats have contributed two masterpieces of commercial art. The Coles Phillips series on Holeproof hosiery is now in the city, these paintings alone being valued at $4,000. William F. Millburn, district manager of the Addressograph company, has obtained from the headquarters of his concern a very comprehensive exhibit showing the uses of commercial art in direct mail advertising.

All exhibits, it is said, must be in the hands of the committee on or before Monday, November 24. The necessary display stands—the same type used at all the big national conventions—have been ordered from St. Louis and are expected here the last of this week.

Do Cross-Word Puzzles Strain Your Eyes?

That's a good test—if your eyes tire easily, or smart and burn, when trying to make out a cross-word puzzle, it's a safe plan to have them examined.

However, ours is a more scientific test which will determine definitely whether or not your eyes are defective. We won't advise glasses, unless you actually need them. Only men of scientific training and long experience serve you here.

HENRY GRADY HOTEL OPENS WEDNESDAY

The Henry Grady hotel will open its doors to receive its first guests on Wednesday when it will be host to 500 members of the North Georgia Methodist conference, which convenes in this city on that date. Complete hotel service will be furnished guests but no accommodations will be offered the general public until after the close of the conference, it is said.

The formal opening will come the following Tuesday when registration books will open and the hotel, with its exquisite furnishings and exceptional facilities, will be thrown open for the inspection of the people of Atlanta. The formal opening dinner-dance will begin at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening.

A special request has been issued by the management that those who are interested in inspecting the building not attempt to do so during the coming week, although the doors will be open to members of the conference. Many of the most interesting features of the hotel's facilities, particularly the public rooms on the mezzanine floor, which are among the most attractive to be found in American hotels, it is said, will be closed and workmen will not have completed their task there until the following week.

Sets Building Record.

The readiness of the great structure to receive guests at this time is said to create a new record for construction in this type of building, it is believed by Gude & Co., contractors. The finished building is being delivered to owners two months in advance of the guaranteed date.

Workmen were busy Saturday removing all evidences of recent building activity from the scene. Monday, finishing touches will be administered to the lobby, kitchen and ballroom, the three public rooms which will be used in connection with the preliminary guest service. On Monday, also, Manager James F. deJarnette will assemble the 200 or more men and women who are to provide the service of the institution for inspection and assignment. It is said that the hotel will emphasize the perfection of detail of its personnel service. Heads of departments have been secured from many parts of the country and from several world-famous hotels.

Beginning on Tuesday, November 25, with the formal opening, the hotel will be the scene of social activity for the remainder of the week. Following the opening dinner-dance the hotel company will be hosts on Wednesday evening to 125 men who have had a prominent part in designing, building, financing and equipping the hotel.

Thursday, which is Thanksgiving, will be signalized with a special Thanksgiving dinner. On Friday evening the junior chamber of commerce will hold a ball and on Sunday, the first of a notable series of special Sunday dinners will be served in the main dining room.

The opening reception is under the auspices of the Atlanta chapter, U. D. C., who have taken the opportunity to pay tribute to the statesman for whom the hotel is named. Members of the family of Henry W. Grady will be guests of honor and, the receiving line also will include many high officials of city and state.

The dinner which is to follow will bring together many social, civic and business leaders of the city and section. Places have been provided for 325 persons and reservations are now being accepted by the management for this event. Dancing which is to follow the dinner will begin with special dances of former eras, portrayed by pupils of Mrs. William Claer Spiker.

BIG MAIL HOUSE QUITS SALE OF ALL FIREARMS

Chicago, November 15.—As a matter of public protection, in view of increased crime throughout the country, and especially in Chicago, Julius Rosenwald, chairman of the board of Sears, Roebuck & Co., announced today that the mail-order house had discontinued the sale of all forms of firearms.

For many years newspapers and police officials have advocated discontinuance of the sale of firearms and as far back as 1916 his company had begun to limit such sales, Rosenwald said, and in cataloguing such weapons for sale published a notice that "intending purchasers shall furnish us with evidence that they are legally entitled to the possession of such firearms." The company then had sought to limit such sales to police and military officers and members of police and military organizations and others such as bank and express messengers.

"Our action in limiting the sale of firearms to officers of the law and finally discontinuing the sale of them altogether," said Mr. Rosenwald's announcement today, "is based on our desire to protect our good name and maintain the public good will. We feel that the moral side of all public questions is the right side, not only because we want to be right, but because it is good business."

DECATUR PREPARES TO SELL BIG CROP OF TOBACCO IN 1925

Bainbridge, Ga., November 15.—(Special.)—A committee of the Bainbridge board of trade Thursday closed an agreement with Bunn & Williams, of Tarboro, N. C., to manage and operate a bright-leaf tobacco warehouse, which will be built by local capital to handle the 1925 tobacco crop of Decatur county.

Bunn & Williams is a tobacco firm of many years' experience, and comprises four members, one of whom will be in Bainbridge, to advise with and assist farmers in the growing and marketing of the crop. This firm also will have charge of all demonstrators in Decatur and adjoining territory.

Four demonstrators have already begun work in Decatur county and more than 1,000 acres of bright-leaf tobacco contracts have been agreed on. It is expected that between two and three thousand acres will be signed up before January 1.

FIFTH AVENUE IS CELEBRATING 100TH BIRTHDAY

New York, November 15.—Today marks the 100th birthday of one of the nation's most famous thoroughfares.

One hundred years ago three commissioners appointed by the common council of New York prepared a map that represented the city's first official plan for its growth. On the map was recorded for the first time the name "Fifth avenue."

It is in honor of that event that the Fifth Avenue association has planned a week's celebration that opened today. The insignificant New York street of 100 years ago is now one of the show places of the nation.

President Coolidge, in accepting the chairmanship of an honorary committee for the centennial, sent the following letter:

"Realizing the significance and sentiment that attaches to Fifth avenue, not only in the nation's metropolis, but throughout the entire country and even the world, I find it satisfactory to accept."

The Roux prize, awarded by the French Academy of Fine Arts this year, was divided between two sisters, Lucienne and Madeline Leroux, 21 and 22 years of age.

GENERAL W. A. BETHEL PUT ON RETIRED LIST

Washington, November 15.—Major General Walter A. Bethel, judge advocate general of the army, completed today a continuous service of more than thirty-nine years and, at his own request, Secretary Weeks placed his name on the retired list on account of failing eyesight. General Bethel was succeeded in office by Colonel John A. Hull, a former acting judge advocate general of the army, who automatically assumed the grade of major general for the duration of his service in that post.

General Bethel was appointed judge advocate general of the army in 1923, succeeding Major General Enoch H. Crowder, now ambassador to Cuba. During the world war he served with distinction as judge advocate general of the American expeditionary forces in France, and received for that work the distinguished service medal and a citation which mentioned, among other praiseworthy qualities, the "marked legal ability and sound judgment" he displayed in the adjustment of delicate international problems arising from the operations of the American army in France.

General Bethel was appointed to the Military academy in 1885 from Ohio, was graduated in 1889 and served in the artillery branch of the army until he had reached the rank of major, in 1902, except for a brief interval during the Spanish-American war, when he served as an assistant adjutant general.

Georgia's Sea Food Industry Studied by State Officials

BY RALPH T. JONES.

After a week spent investigating conditions in the oyster, shrimp, prawn and general sea-food industries on the Georgia coast, a party of state officials, members of the newly-created tidewater commission, the state game and fish warden, the tidewater commissioner and others, will return to Atlanta Monday morning.

The trip by boat along the coast of Georgia revealed to officials charged with the duty of enforcing Georgia's new law for the protection of her natural ocean resources, and with developing these great industries, that there is a source of untold wealth to the people of the state in the catching, canning and distribution of sea foods, if properly conserved and developed.

Officials found that in the past there has been little or no effort to conserve and develop these resources. As a result of this neglect, oyster beds, shrimp, prawn and other fish are fast disappearing from Georgia waters and it is the opinion that the state, in enacting the tidewater law at the last session of the legislature, took a forward step which should have been taken ten or more years ago.

Protection Afforded.

Under the new law it will be the duty of the tidewater commission and tidewater commissioner to lease waters within the state's jurisdiction to commercial fishing concerns, and then to protect lessors from poachers and unlicensed fishers. Revenue obtained from leases will be used in enforcement of those sections of the law which look to the development and protection of fish and for planting and developing of oyster beds in all suitable locations along the coast.

It was made plain by the trip last week that one of the first things necessary, if the law is to be successfully carried out, is a thorough survey of the coast, with especial regard to the suitability of the various sections for the growth of oysters and the condition of existing oyster beds. In this respect it was cited that there now are large beds of oysters where the bivalves are so thickly clustered that they have been unable to grow their full size, with the result that oyster men have not found it profitable to dredge these oysters, as their size was so small they could not be marketed. It is the intention of the new tidewater commission, as soon as necessary funds are available, to so dredge these beds as to thin out the oysters to such an extent that those remaining will grow to full size. Oysters taken from this bed will be replanted in places that are now barren where they will grow and form new and virgin oyster fields.

Sea Acreage Valuable.

It was pointed out on the trip that the value of food products from the sea was greater, acre per acre, than that from land and it was stated by all who have investigated the possibilities that there is, awaiting proper development, a natural resource which in a few years will yield crops valued at many millions annually.

The party visited Savannah, Brunswick, Darien, St. Mary's and other points along the coast, where they met with and were entertained by leaders in the fishing and packing industry. Fullest cooperation was pledged by all these men, it being the opinion that unless the new law is impartially and vigorously enforced the next few years will see a complete devastation of sea-food areas of the state.

That Georgia may, in the next few years, see the development of a sea food industry which will rival, if not outstrip, that of Virginia, Maryland and other Atlantic coast states, was the general opinion of members of the party, and each member of the commission admitted that the vast possibilities in the coast resources had been revealed as never before as a result of the trip.

Included in the party were Peter S. Twitty, state game and fish warden; James A. Dozier, of Athens, chairman of the tidewater commission; M. O. Dunning, of Savannah, a member of the commission; Trowell Cravens, of South Carolina, commissioner of fisheries for that state; W. W. Larsen, of Dublin, congressman for the twelfth Georgia district; Mr. Dunning, Sr., of South Carolina; F. B. Reins, of Dublin, Ga.; J. D. Clancy, newly-appointed Georgia tidewater commissioner, Mr. Martin, editor of several Georgia weekly newspapers; Mr. Beard, chief inspector of the Savannah district of the state coastal patrol; C. E. Gregory of the Atlanta Journal; Ralph T. Jones and Francis E. Price, of The Atlanta Constitution.

Things Were in a Bad Way With the Beelsbys; One Scene Followed Another . . . With Threats and Recriminations.

She knew that the kind of burlesquing into which Corbitt and she had fallen was the kind most offensive to her husband.

THE "Five-forty-five," favorite homeward transport for inhabitants of the nothern suburbs, was so crowded on this wet and dark January afternoon that Henry Beelsby could not find a seat, and had to stand in the aisle. The aisle, moreover, was a jam of commuters rather than a thoroughfare, and to permit the necessarily frequent passage of the train's conductor, Beelsby had not only to stand but to continue holding the bundles that already made his arms ache—he had carried them a hurrying half mile before he reached the station; one of them contained an electric iron and another five pounds of "dog biscuit."

Beelsby, tall, dark haired, long featured, and stooping, was not yet middle aged but of a fragile appearance and constitution. He was habitually sallow from indigestion, and every December he caught a cold that "hung on," badgering him and gnawing at his disposition, until late in the spring. His discomfort was most acute in January; and today he had worked harder than usual, down in the dense winter smoke of the city, where he had the smallest partnership interest in the smallest of commission houses. All day long he had coughed, sneezed, and wheezed over his work, unable to comply with the exasperated requests of his partners to "Cut it out for gosh sakes!" He coughed, sneezed and wheezed on the train, too, where his bundles prevented him from taking any decorous or hygienic precautions, though the annoyed glances and mutterings of passengers near him plainly expressed their anxieties concerning contagion, and made him well aware of their opinion of him.

His unpopularity among them became vivid; he heard (and perceived that he was intended to hear) repeated suggestions that the conductor should be requested "to do something about it;" but as Beelsby couldn't do anything about it, himself, he failed to see how the conductor might be more effective. Besides, he was too tired to care what they said, or what they caught from him—especially those who were seated at ease and unencumbered—and when the train reached his station he coughed his way out with a dogged bitterness. "Wish some of 'em would catch it!" was his thought. "Doggone selfish pigs!"

The station taxicab men of the affluent suburb let him pass without a hail. His two year old derby hat and the older overcoat, with the collar turned up to his long, tenuous ears, were familiar to them, and they knew he would not ride, although the rain, just turning into snow, was flying heavily on the January wind. He paused for a moment before taking the elements upon his chest, and from under the eaves of the station shed watched befurred men and women stepping into the lighted interiors of their closed cars, where little radiators made the air tropical. Gaitered chauffeurs solicitously closed the doors lest the occupants should be put to so dangerous an exertion; and one after the other the limousines powerfully glided away, preceded by long twin cones of white light alive with flocks of snowflakes in irresponsible commotion. The taxicabs and two omnibuses filled themselves with passengers, roared, trembled, heaved and departed; Beelsby was the only pedestrian to face the winter storm.

"Doggone old pigs!"

HE said it again at the next corner, where he had the misfortune to drop one of his bundles, and, in retrieving it, to let two others slip from his exhausted arms. The snow came so thick and so fast, and was so clinging, that by the time he contrived to be again on his way much of him was indistinguishable from his background.

"Gettin' inside my collar now!" he muttered. "Doggone selfish old pigs!" And there was still before him a windy and wet half mile as long as five times that distance would have been in good weather.

When at last he came stamping upon the small veranda of the white colonial cottage that was his home he announced hoarsely to the brass knocker upon the closed door that he was "ready to drop," and added that he couldn't have gone another step if he died for it. Nevertheless, he continued to stamp and shake himself, coughing an accompaniment; and he was still thus engaged when his wife opened the door for him.

She was a glittering slender figure in the sudden light, though his eyes were too wet to see her better than as a watery dazzle, and he was too tired to draw inferences from the fact that she wore her white taffeta evening dress, her crystal necklace and the blue glass sapphire earrings he had given her for his Christmas present a month before. Crystal and blue glass were becoming to her blonde coloring; she was a pretty woman, as perfectly dainty in feature and outline as if she had been fabricated at Sevres.

The fault in her prettiness was that it was a little overcast by the plaintive anxiety, already querulous, sometimes to be seen in the expressions of es of men who are remaining unsuccessful rather hazardously deep into their thirties. Between her eyebrows the infamous vertical line that prematurely mutilates the beauty of the discontented had begun to appear with the ready celerity almost always the harbinger of permanence; and her white forehead was misshapen by it now, as she stared forth upon her husband while he stamped and flapped the snow from him.

"Well, for heaven's sake!" she cried, "do you realize what time it is? I told you to take the four-fifty, not the five-forty-five!"

"I know you did," he returned, as he came indoors and inimically deposited his burdens upon a chair in the little hallway. "You also told me to get you an electric iron, your mended glass fruit dish, your new plated teapot, a box of brass headed tacks, and five doggone pounds of doggone dog biscuits! How'n the name of conscience do you expect a man to—"

"Henry," she interrupted, "will you be kind enough to stop swearing merely because I happened to ask you to do your share of the household errands? It wouldn't have hurt you to hurry a little."

"Hurry," he repeated, dropping his soggy overcoat upon the bundles. Then with a feeble remnant of strength he slapped his hard wet hat angrily down upon the overcoat. "Don't you s'pose I had to hurry to get all that done and expect to get home before day after tomorrow? 'Hurry!' I guess so! I'm tired to death and sick as a dog, but I'm going to hurry to bed! I don't want any dinner; you needn't have waited for me."

"I needn't?" she cried, her eyes opening wide. "Are you crazy?"

"I guess so," he answered, beginning to ascend the narrow white railed little stairway that lead to the second floor, eight feet above. "Anyhow I'd just as soon be."

"You know this is the night we're to dine with the Corbitts!"

He stopped ascending and stood still, not turning to look at her. Her information arrested him, but appeared to fall short of interesting him; and after a moment of silence he took another upward step.

"Well, I don't care," he said in a low voice, "I won't go.' '

"Henry!"

THE strenuousness of her appeal made him stop again, but, as before, with his stooping and dogged back to her. "I don't care," he repeated. "I won't go."

She came to the foot of the stairway.

"Henry Beelsby, you fly straight up there and into your clothes. They're all laid out on your bed for you. Jump!"

"I won't," he said thickly, and still maintained his frozen attitude. "I won't go."

"You will!"

"I won't," he said again. "I won't go. I won't go. I won't for anything."

Mrs. Beelsby burst into tears. For a long hour she had been anxiously waiting, more and more fearful that his delay might make them late for their "dinner engagement," and waiting under these circumstances is for women a greater nervous strain than husbands realize, or are able to comprehend. Moreover, Mrs. Beelsby's husband made a verbal mistake of a kind lately growing habitual with him; if he had said what indeed appeared to him as the mere truth, "I can't," his wife might not have wept; or, at least, she might not have wept so soon—but the irritated and irritating "I won't" came of its own volition into his mouth; and he had no impulse to be more accurate. Even when she thus suddenly wept aloud he said once more, "I won't;" and continued to stand motionless, like an Alpinist overcome by a day dream half way to the summit.

"I might have known you'd act this way!" his wife sobbed. "You knew I'd looked forward to this evening for days and days, so I ought to've understood this is what you'd do! Of course you could not let me have this one little pleasure without spoiling it!"

"I'm not going," he said doggedly. "I'm not."

"Of course you're not!" she cried. "Why should you? I've been working all day like a Swede farm hand. I shoveled the ashes out of the furnace; I bathed the dog; I scrubbed the kitchen floor on my hands and knees; and you've got a nice, clean, warm house to come back to and go to be din! Why should you go out, just to please your wife and keep her from being socially disgraced?"

"'Socially disgraced?' Now what do you think you're talking about?"

"I'm talking about accepting a dinner invitation and not being there! You can't do anything worse than that."

At this he turned his head and looked down to behold her uplifted face contorted in pain and anger, with the white globed ceiling light above her gleaming upon the sliding bright lines of her tears. "Oh, cut it out!" he said. "You can call 'em up and give 'em a plenty good excuse."

"At this hour?"

"Tell 'em I'm sick."

"What of?" she cried. "You've been well enough all day to go into town and sit tilted back and smoking in your comfortable office and dictate to a bob haired stenographer!"

"Look here!" he said with a sudden fierceness. "Is that all you think I do?"

"It's what you were doing the last time I was in and saw you. You sit and tilt back and smoke and make jokes for half an hour or two, and then you go out to a comfortable lunch at a restaurant, while your wife has to stay at home and break her back shoveling ashes, and get her own lunch—or go without—and then begin to cook your dinner for you."

"You didn't need to shovel any ashes: I told you to let 'em alone till the furnace man is well again or I could find a chance to get around to it. Anyhow, I'd rather shovel a few handfuls of ashes than get two hundred crates of vegetables out of a half frozen wet cellar, and that's what I been doing!"

"Oh, yes!" she cried. "Telling other men to do it!"

"No, madam! Doing it myself, because we're short handed; I had to get down there with only two men to help me, because water got into the cellar—and I had to slosh around in it, too, half the afternoon. Then I had to slosh half over town in slush and rain after your electric iron and your glass fruit dish and your grandmother's plated teapot and your brass headed tacks and your doggone dog bis—"

"Oh, hush!" she cried.

"And then when I do wobble home at last," he persisted; "and all I want it to get to bed and die there, you tell me I got to change my clothes and get out the doggone old Ford and drive you two miles to eat a bum cavier sandwich and two bites of squab and listen to the Corbitts telling about the new golf club they've joined! I won't do it, Ella."

"No, you won't! That's the kind of a man you are! If you're wife wants to do a thing, that's enough for you; you won't! You just keep on that way, Henry Beelsby! Everybody knows!"

"Everybody knows what?"

"EVERYBODY knows how you treat me!" she cried, and her voice was louder as her bitterness became deeper. "You don't suppose I can cover that up, do you? Is there a woman I know who has to undergo the drudgeries I do? Do you suppose they don't see driving that miserable old Ford around to the cheapest groceries and butcher shops? And when have I had a new dress? Don't you suppose they know I've made this poor old taffeta over four times? Look at the fur coats and limousines other men give their wives! You talk about the Corbitts and their new country club; I guess it'll be many a long day before I ever get to say anything about one we belong to! Just look what other men give their wives! And what do you give me?"

"My gosh!" he said heavily. "I haven't got any new dresses and limousines. You talk as if I owned the moon. I haven't got it, I tell you! I haven't got it!"

She sat down upon the steps below him and began to sob brokenheartedly. "No! Not for your wife!" she wailed. "When it comes to anything your wife wants, you haven't got it!" Here her unhappy vehemence was so great that it drew the sympathetic attention of a third party. An Airedale dog, still damp from the bath she had given him that afternoon, and shivering slightly as he walked, came into the hall, looked plaintively at his master and mistress, then gently nuzzled Mrs. Beelsby's bowed head. "Even Shanty's sorry for me!" she wept. "He knows! He knows you won't even make enough exertion to go out to dinner for your wife!"

"No, I won't," he said. "I won't do it. I doggone won't!" And with that, still muttering "I won't," he turned from her and plodded wretchedly up the stairs to change his clothes.

Sitting bent and obscurely plaintive in his rather Sheraton chair at the Corbitts' jovial bright table, Beelsby had no inclination to talk to either of the ladies beside him—or to anybody —though he thought of a few more things he wished he had said to his wife before their arrival upon this hospitable scene. And even if he had been in the mood to talk, some appearances of deferring to the principles of hygiene must have withheld him from directly and frankly addressing anybody, for, as he but too plainly demonstrated, he was perilously explosive. If he was not coughing, he was being inevitably recharged and distended in preparation for another sneeze; and when it came, his wife, at the other end of the table, would break into her gayeties with the red faced host long enough to send the disturber an annoyed glance; to which his dark and brooding eyes would smoulderingly reply: "You had your way and this is it."

He sent other lurking glances at her from time to time; as she was aware, though she did not seem to be. She chatted vociferously, accompanying the chatter with an ever pealing laughters, as did the host and the eight other guests simultaneously, so that their vivacity produced one of those continual vocal uproars of which an oversized cocktail shaker is usually a more ardent provocative than is wit. Henry Beelsby had not partaken of any of the three capacious amber glasses urged upon each of the company before dinner; his head already felt "enough like a boil," he had ungraciously informed the hospitable Corbitt; and he decided it felt more like one than ever as he sat fiddling with the silver beside his successive plates of untouched food. The cocktail hilarity rang brassily in ears persecuted by his cold, and he had taken an overdose of quinine, so that somewhere near the central interior point of his head a busy little engine room seemed to be in full operation.

"Pigs!" he muttered, referring to the merry company about him. "Doggone selfish pigs!'

Across the table a vociferous man leaned backward to shout behind the intervening guests an uproarious narrative for the benefit of the popular Mrs. Beelsby; whereupon the lady upon his right immediately bent her head to that of the lady at his left; and they quickly began one of those low voiced dialogues in which women sometimes seem to confess that they participate in festivity not wholeheartedly and actually, but in pretense, as actresses play roles upon the stage. Conferences in the wings take place between cues.

"Have you noted Mr. Henry Beelsby Killjoy opposite?" the first of the two ladies inquired.

"My dear! Have I 'noted' anything else!" the other exclaimed. "Ella tries to cover it up, but have you ever seen anything so awful? He justs sits and swears at her with his eyes! How long can she keep on standing that man? If my husband treated me the way he does Ella—"

"I'd leave my husband," the first declared vehemently, "in a minute! She told me in the other room she positively had to go on her knees to get him to come here tonight. At the last minute he absolutely swore he wouldn't budge."

"She told me, too. And look at him, now he has come! Sulking to show he didn't want to, and glaring at her like a panther, and sneezing at everybody so that the people on both sides of him don't dare turn their heads that way and are half scared to death! I must say I wouldn't blame her if she left him just for the way he's treating her tonight."

"My dear, this kind of thing isn't the half of it! He never gives her a thing! She told me herself, except those imitation sapphire earrings, he hasn't given her one single thing in almost two years! She asked him last summer if he wouldn't let her have a maid this winter, and he wouldn't even do that! And a month ago I told her I'd put them up for the new country club; she was crazy to join it. Not he! He gave her fits for even thinking of it!"

"Yes, she told me. And look at the car he makes her drive—if you want to call it a 'car!' And she has to take all the care of it, except Sunday; she told me that much, herself. Ella says what hurts her most is he makes her suffer because he's afraid to face his partners like a man. What's more, I believe every word she says about it."

"So do I. You can tell it's so by

The Key to the Traffic Question

The Detroit Super-Highway Said to Be the Solution of the Evil That Is Strangling American Communities

TRAFFIC congestion is strangling every American community. Laws cannot solve the problem, for there are not, in the United States, jails wide or high enough to encompass 115,000,000 persons.

Detroit gave to the world the motor car. It is history now, the story of eccentric genius tinkering on the back end of a lot with a converted buggy. The motor vehicle has brought forth, within a single generation, its millions on millions of progeny, scurrying over the highways of the earth, thrusting themselves in dense and endless files down the thoroughfares, bearing off in a single day the virtual population of a city, transporting the merchandise to the farmer, the produce to the merchant, tilling the soil and skimming the roads.

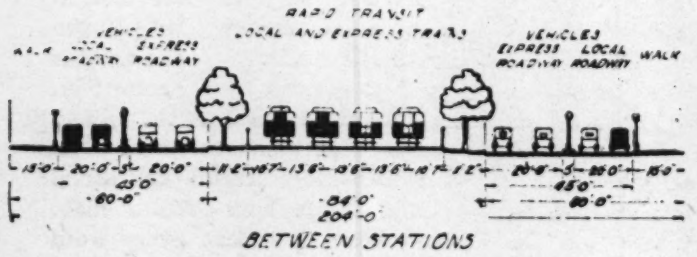

There is no parallel to this story. It is the story of Detroit. It embraces an era in the world's social history. It is the age of the motor vehicle.

In common with every important community, Detroit faces the Frankenstein of its creation. More than any other community, Detroit has felt the urge to solve the problem it has conjured up. Detroit believes it has found the answer. What it has found it offers for the consideration of every other community. The solution offered by Detroit is the super-highway.

In its effect, it means simply decentralization of population instead of (primarily) decentralization of traffic; for the second will follow the first. The new American city, by coherent, related urban and suburban transit development, will transfer its huge surplus population into more healthful, comfortable residential districts anywhere within a 30-mile radius, and will still be able to gather in the whole for its commercial and industrial purposes within 45 minutes or an hour.

The super-highway is based on two fundamental conclusions, accepted by every authority on traffic problems in the country.

Motor vehicle traffic has far outgrown road facilities, and increases much faster than the facilities to care for it; no facilities in sight under methods customarily employed can keep pace with it, let alone overtake it.

Between stations all arteries are on same plane. Positively all interference from cross-street traffic is avoided along right of way, allowing rapid transit to proceed unhindered for miles.

The prime quality of the modern automobile is speed. High speed travel must be accepted as an essential feature of the motor traffic highways of the future.

These are the broad principles on which a solution must rest. The Detroit super-highway fulfills them. It is more than a city plan; it is a plan embracing and embraced by neighboring counties and independent communities, all of which cooperate for the welfare of the whole area, not merely to mitigate present evils but to provide for the needs in 1950 and in 2000.

The super-highway is an exclusive right-of-way, 204 feet wide from property line to property line. It provides for pedestrian traffic, for express rapid rail transit, and for local rail transit; for high speed uninterrupted motor vehicle travel, and for local motor vehicle travel; for loading platforms, safety zones and parking lanes.

All the motor vehicle traffic is one way on each driveway, and its segregation or classification persists the entire length of the super-highway. The dimensions follow:

A central space of 84 feet for the exclusive use of rapid transit lines on rails, and the tree and shrub planting to screen it.

A 5-foot roadway for express motor traffic on each side of the central space, making 40 feet.

Perspective drawings accompanying this article picture all the features of the super-highway.

Detroit's rapid transit commission, in an admirable report, says:

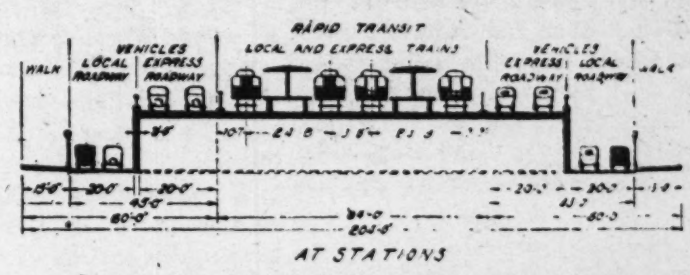

Engineer's prospectus of "super-highway" designed to obviate traffic congestion in era of rapid transportation. A thoroughfare 204 feet wide is shown, provided with conduits for express and local rail and motor vehicular traffic. The city of Detroit is planning 174 miles of "super-highways" as a solution to traffic ills of today. Though the undertaking will cost millions, rights of way are now being set aside to provide against increasing costs of the future.

"High speed on rubber tires can not be attained any more than on rails unless all interferences from intersecting surface traffic are eliminated. Therefore, just as rail transit requires an exclusive right of way, with all grade crossings separated, so all high speed or express motor traffic, to be safe, requires a similar right of way. The perspective drawing shows how this is to be accomplished, giving the express motor traffic a clear road, a cross which it is impossible for other traffic to pass."

Between stations all classes of traffic will use the same level on the surface. But the various travel lanes will be properly defined and related so that vehicles can travel through the local roadways into the express lane for rapid distance movement, and out again through the local roadway when approaching their destination. The operation in the express lane will be continuous. Vehicles will merge into and flow along with the stream, and finally leave, but never cross it. It will represent the maximum of efficiency in motor vehicle operation.

Wheel traffic cannot cross the rapid transit line at grade, but may pass under at the half-mile intersections, and likewise pedestrians may cross by means of overhead or underground passages where conditions warrant such crossings. At stations located every one-half mile apart, more or less, both express motor traffic lanes and rapid transit tracks will be raised sufficiently to pass over the cross streets. Local motor traffic lanes will meet the intersecting street at grade so that if they wish they may cross under the rapid transit and express motor traffic lanes at such points. Rapid transit and express motor services will not be subjected to any crossing interferences. They can attain high speeds. Where on the average narrow highway can block traffic here there are two two-car lanes in each direction, four such lanes in all or a width of eight motor vehicles. Traffic tie-ups, the chief delaying factor in road transportation, will be virtually eliminated.

Cross-section of "super-highway" illustrating arrangement of rail and motor vehicular traffic at stations to be provided every half mile. A feature of the station arrangement is the lowering of the local motor roadway to the level of the cross-street which tunnels the broad right of way.

Enabled to attain high speed, continuously, and in safety—and speed is always relative to conditions—the city worker can reside 20 and 30 miles from his place of employment and still spend not more than an hour at the outside in reaching his work. For, in addition to the ample provision for motor vehicle traffic, the eighty-four-foot central strip provides for an eventual four-track rail transit, two express lines in the center and two local lines, one on either side, all four being in the center of the super-highway, and screened from it by trees and shrubs.

Thus, the super-highways, built in cooperation with the neighboring communities through which they pass, will outreach the furthest residential line of the city workers. The city ceases to be a city in the old sense and becomes a metropolitan area, encouraging its people to build homes in the surrounding country, with all the concomitants of fresh air, good health and independence. An area such as this destroys at a stroke the implied antagonism between urban and rural districts and makes them a common ground with common interests and a common population. Super-highways, of these dimensions, will release those

Life History of Marcus Loew, Theater and Photoplay Magnate Reads Like Story From Horatio Alger Novel

"If at first you don't succeed, try, try again."

THIS familiar phrase strikes at the paramount issue in the life of Marcus Loew, an issue that carried him over a sea of defeats in youth to the goal of fame, fortune and influence which he now enjoys.

Fickle fortune did not beckon until every measure of defeat had been meted out to the little man who now controls the largest chain of theaters in the world. The story of his life should prove most interesting to those who, after tasting their first defeat, are content to cling to the fringes of semi-success forever after.

Mr. Loew saw the attractions of the theater very early and at the tender age of seven he might have been seen almost any Saturday night in the gallery of the old National theater in New York investing a hard earned dime, and applauding along with the rest.

A year later he set up in business for himself and sold newspapers, working from sunrise until school time and then after school working with his papers until midnight.

So it went for three summers. When Mr. Loew was 9, he left school and except for some lessons with a private tutor, who enriched himself to the extent of $2 per month from each pupil, that was all the schooling Marcus Loew ever had, or needed.

His first regular employment was with a map printing concern. The pay was 5 cents a day. He was there for a year when the spirit of industrial unrest broke loose in the place and the boys struck for 40 cents a day. They were promptly locked out by the proprietor and Loew, then 10 years old, was out of a job.

He then entered into his first partnership in the printing business with a lad some years older than he. From a little hand press printing visiting cards the new firm had soon acquired a foot press, and finally started a weekly paper of eight pages, called the "East Side Advertiser."

Loew, a weakly boy and small for his age, was hardly fit for the slightest physical labor. Instead of running the press, he was the editor, copy reader, proof reader, manager, subscription agent, advertising solicitor and writer of advertisements. In his spare hours he used to write the paper. His partner set up the type, and ran the press, and supplied the necessary foot power.

The "Advertiser" had a surprising success with a circulation that grew steadily to 500 copies per issue. Loew bustled around among the ice cream stores and novelty shops of the East Side and cornered enough advertising to make the sheet pay well, sometimes in cash—more often in trade.

MR. LOEW later disposed of his interest in the "Advertiser" and worked in a dry goods store for $4 per week.

When he was 12 he went to work in a factory handling furs and making dress trimmings. There was no power in the plant and his particular task was to turn the crank of a machine for eleven hours per day. In this employment Marcus earned $4.50 per week and to this day he insists that he really earned it. Loew's parents were still living and every penny he brought home was needed there.

Gradually he worked his way through the plant, and because of his inquiring mind had soon learned every trick of the trade. At one time he was weaver of dress goods; then at 16 he was made chief of the factory's fur department.

Presently he took the few hundred dollars he had saved and started in the fur business for himself. He was then 18. At 19 he failed. His debts were $8,000 and his stock brought little more than $5,000. There remained unsatisfied debts of $1,800 after the bankruptcy proceedings. Marcus Loew was broke but not beaten.

Opportunity did not come to Loew in any strange or blustering way, but in the course of his daily work; once because he had paid his debts of plain, old-fashioned honesty, once because he had indulged in a piece of plain old-fashioned softness of heart.

It happened in this way: One of the largest of his creditors at the time of his failure was a fur dealer. The man knew that young Loew's business had been more or less extravagant, and when he drew down three-quarters of his account, he counted himself lucky to come out so well.

A few months later, when the fur dealer was desperately pressed in his turn, Loew called on him and told him that he had come to pay the balance of his debt. Young Loew had a place as a fur salesman, was making $100 per week, and was paying up the last dollar of the obligations from which he had been legally released. The creditor thought it was like finding money. The two became fast friends and the man never forgot the outcome of the affair.

By the time he was 23 Loew had paid his debts and scraped together a few hundred dollars for another start. So he married, took his own capital and that of his wife and started at the fur business again. At the end of the first year he was wiped out. By this time, however, he had learned something about management, and he was able to meet all liabilities and close his account with a clear conscience and a balance of $7.

That was at the time when golf capes were in vague and Loew was soon at it again in a cape jobbing house. This time with a partner named Herman Baher. Then came the hard time of 1895—one after another the cape houses closed their doors. Only ten of the firms survived the storm, and Baher and Loew were among the number. The partnership lasted for ten years, and when it came to an end Loew was well to do, and something of a capitalist on his own account.

It was in 1904 that opportunity came to him, guided by the friend he had made at the time of his failure. The fur dealer knew some out-of-town people who were planning to start the penny arcade and Loew was invited to become a partner. He knew nothing about amusement enterprises at that time, but he, with his friend, took the chance which turned out to be the golden opportunity that lead to his present success and fortune.

HE invested to the extent of $40,000, and the amusement place was opened on the south side of Union Square, where it still stands. All told, the men who built it plunged to the extent of $105,000, and it paid them back their money within seven months. Then Loew saw what "Opportunity" could do for those who had the whip hand of her and he exploited it without mercy. He built an arcade of his own in 23rd street near Seventh avenue, and another uptown. They cost him $150,000, and before they began to pay he again stood on the brink of financial destruction. Things were looking very black for him, and then he discovered Cincinnati. There were pen-

Amazing New Light On the World's

Professor Schliemann Brings From the Atlantic's Depths What He Thinks Actual Relics of Mysterious Atlantis, the Land the Ocean Is Supposed to Have Submerged

THE late Professor E. Schliemann was famous not only for his discovery and excavation of the ruins of ancient Troy, but also for the remarkable theories he fathered concerning the long-lost continent, Atlantis, which he believed to have existed in prehistoric times somewhere between Africa and America.

Since the death of the elder Schliemann his researches concerning Atlantis have been continued on a broader scale by his son, Professor Paul Schliemann. For 15 years the latter has been devoting himself to this subject, and in a book soon to be published in Germany he will present for the first time the results of his work.

The article by Professor Schliemann, presented on this page today, is a summary of some of the more important facts to be presented to the world in his forthcoming volume. What he has to say, particularly concerning the relics he claims to have recovered from the depths of the Atlantic, is sure to stir the interest even of scientists who have heretofore been disinclined to credit the existence of Atlantis.

Professor Schliemann visited America some years ago and spent a long time trying to trace a connection between the ancient civilizations of Central America and Atlantis. At present he is on the western coast of Africa, pursuing his researches about the continent which he believes to have been the cradle of the human race and to have been sunk ages ago beneath the waters of the Atlantic.

By Prof. Paul Schliemann,

The Noted German Archaeologist

SEVERAL years ago I declared my belief that the world's lost continent, the so-called Atlantis, lay between the western coast of Africa and the eastern coast of South and Central America and was long ago submerged by the waters of the Atlantic.

At that time I had only archaeological theories resulting from a comparison of different ancient art objects to support my belief. Now, however, as a result of a long series of submarine explorations, I am able to support it with many important pieces of evidence which have been brought up from the ocean's depths—from the lost continent itself.

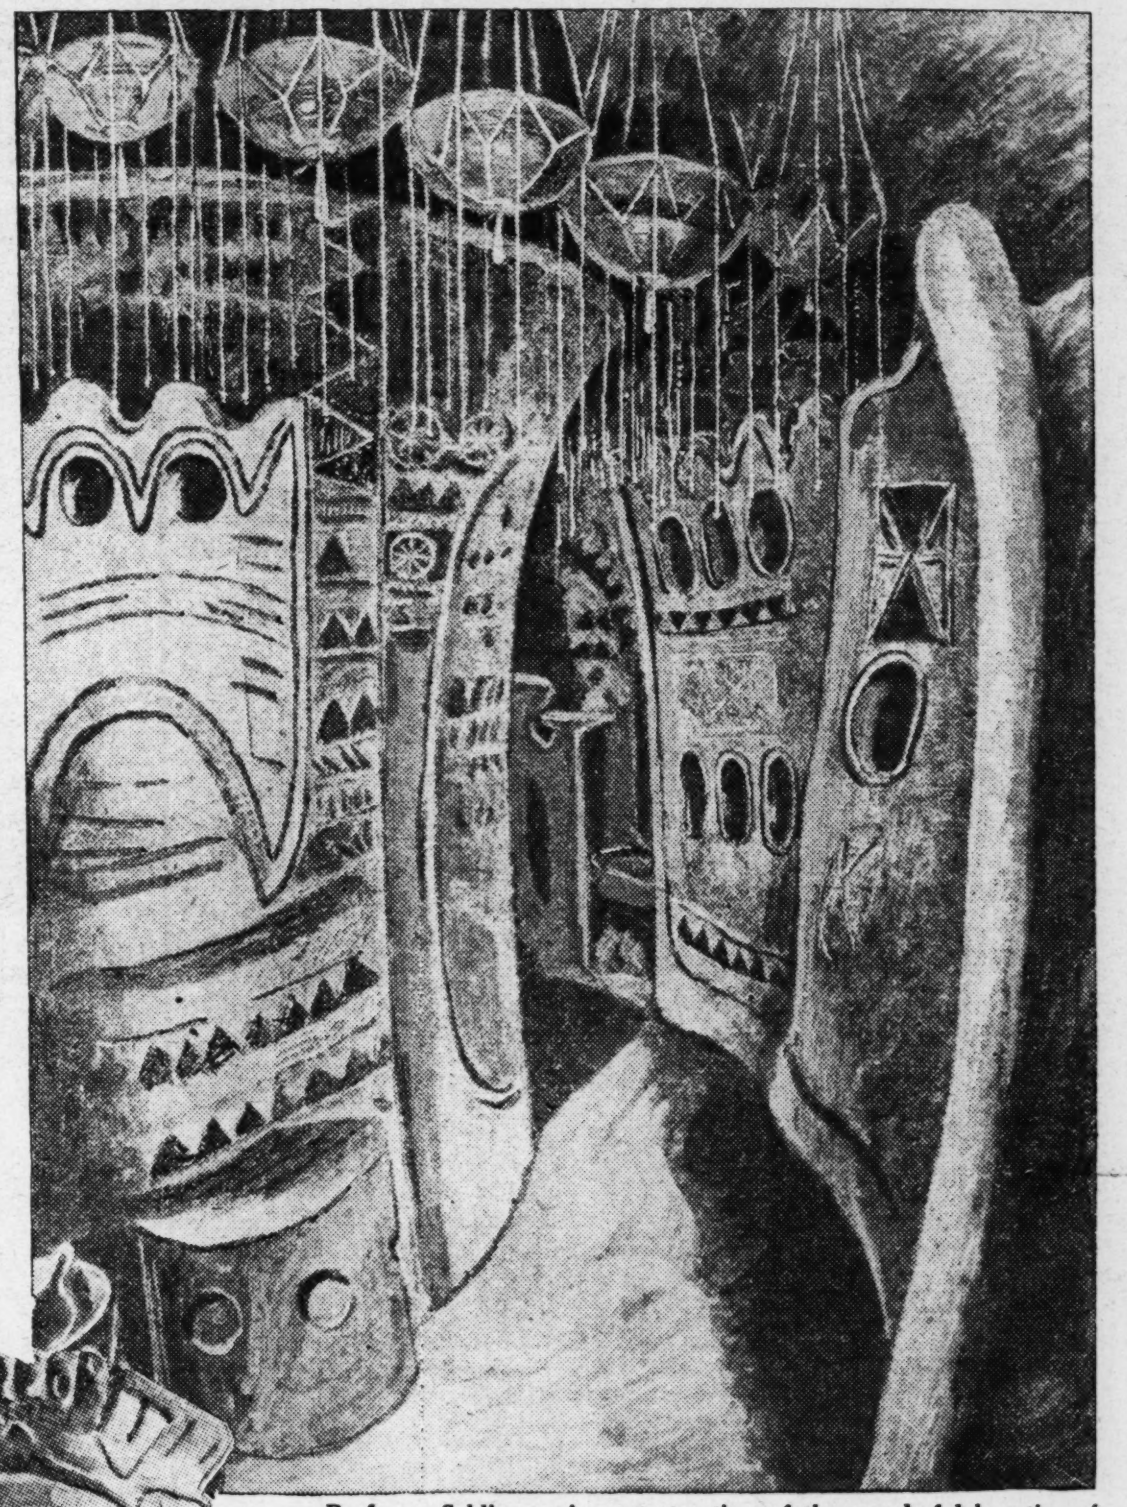

All my later study and investigation add strength to my original belief that until 20,000 years or perhaps much longer ago a vast territory stretched between the African and American continents.

Whether this was one unbroken expanse of land, a continent or a land bridge, or a chain of innumerable volcanic islands, cannot yet be determined; but I have no doubt that in prehistoric times the volcanic plateau which now forms the Atlantic's bed in this region was an inhabited part of the earth's surface—a great area that was later submerged by some tremendous cataclysm.

I have succeeded in bringing up from the bottom of the ocean, mostly from the tops of the undersea mountains, relics which prove that once upon a time they were inhabited by men and animals of the same species now found in Europe, Asia, Africa and the Americas.

In fact, I believe that this long vanished land was the actual cradle of the human race, the first home of our aboriginal ancestors, the place from which they eventually spread all over the earth. Here it was that man originated and made his first amazing progress toward culture.

I have discovered and photographed on the tops of the undersea mountains the walls of certain caves that show every evidence of having once been inhabited by men. On the top of one rocky mountain, about 40 feet under water, I discovered fragments of a remarkably well preserved cave temple, the walls of which were engraved with instruments either of stone or metal. The architecture and decorations of this temple show that whoever built it had a highly developed taste and a good understanding of the principles of engineering.

Professor Schliemann's reconstruction of the wonderful beauties of one of the rock temples which he discovered in what he believes to be the sunken land of Atlantis, now far below the ocean's surface.

Central American figure of very ancient date, showing great similarity to statues found on the African coast and to works of art which Professor Schliemann has recovered from the bottom of the Atlantic.

My first discovery in the deep sea research was a huge square rock tablet covered with a thick layer of sea salt and shell animals. After cleaning it I found a bas-relief of five running figures, a remarkably harmonic and designed composition. It showed that it was broken loose from a great wall, evidences of which we found here and there on the bottom of the ocean.

About a mile or so further away we discovered another similar bas-relief of two running men and an animal between them. This tablet was of the same volcanic granite of which the whole bottom of the ocean in this region is formed. Both tablets gave every evidence of having originated in this region and not been brought there from some other land.

About 50 miles east of the spot where I discovered the latter of the two tablets I came upon a plateau that is only 30 feet under the water. Here I came upon a strange rock, upon which are deeply engraved figures of animals and a sea devil. At first I thought these might have been formed thus by the action of the water on the rock, but further investigation proved them the work of prehistoric artist.

THE whole formation of the rocky sea bottom indicates some volcanic disturbance, but it was unable to destroy all traces of human and animal life. It is very difficult to study the sea bottom. We are limited to the depths divers can reach. We know practically nothing of the deepest valleys of the ocean. Even at a depth of one mile everything is a mystery.

The most astounding discovery of my deep-sea explorations was a mountain peak, on the side of which I came upon the remnants of a rock temple. All that remains is a small portion of what must have been a spacious and elaborate affair. What I saw was evidently one of the smaller chambers, with huge carved pillars, niches and vaults, that led deeper and deeper into the rock. The floor was covered with the fragments of primitive art objects, all covered with a yellow coating of the deep-sea sediments.

Here was one of the places where the people of the lost Atlantis worshiped their gods. Now it is inhabited by devilfish and other ghastly creatures of the ocean's depths.

Standing at the entrance of this ruined rock temple I was for a moment overcome by the idea that here I stood probably at the threshold of a gateway into evolutionary mysteries and confronted a sanctuary of men of whose existence we know nothing.

That this had been a place of worship was evident from its serene style of construction and its symbolic decorations. Besides, there were no traces of any household furniture or kitchen utensils. If not a temple, this could have been only a courthouse or the seat of some other governmental activity.

Near one of the volcanic peaks, which must have been among the highest of the submerged land, we came upon many pieces of statuary and tablets. The most remarkable of them was the statue of a man so coated with the sea's sediment and so worn by the ceaseless action of the waves that its original outlines were barely distinguishable.

Now let me come back to the earth and tell of the strange things that I discovered on the African and the Central American coasts adjacent to the region where Atlantis lies submerged.

First of all, I find that the excavated art objects of Central America and Africa show a remarkable similarity in workmanship and style. Take, for instance, the art objects that Frobenius discovered on the west coast of Africa and those that I discovered in Yucatan, say, 3000 B. C. They are so much alike that you would think the same artist had carved them all. The more ancient the art of Africa and America the more similar it is.

The figure of a sleeping queen discovered in Central America by me and dating back to 2000 B. C. is almost a replica of the Egyptian sculptures of the same period. The monster idols discovered in the sand of Sahara by the German expedition are almost copies of similar idols discovered in the ruins of ancient temples in Venezuela, and resemble closely those that I discovered in the ruined caves under the Atlantic ocean. Who can explain the cause of their close similarity?

THE German explorer Lehmann discovered that in prehistoric times a magnificently-built highway led from the interior of Central America to the very ocean coast as if it formed part of a route to some lands beyond the sea. In the same way I found two well-built highways leading from the interior of Africa to the west coast of the ocean and ending abruptly on the water's edge.

What was the meaning of such roads in, say, the year 5000 B. C.? Who were the men who had the intelligence and skill to build them?

On the west coast of Africa stand today ruins of huge rock towers, very much like our lighthouses, that date back to unknown ages. They seem to indicate that the inhabitants of the coast were in the habit of communicating with some other men far out in the ocean.

But navigation, according to our knowledge, did not exist in those primitive days. Then why the lighthouses? Who built them, and for what purpose?

All these are some of the many things that lead me to maintain that Atlantis was a realty and that a comparatively high state of civilization existed there in what we call the Stone Age, when the rest of the world was still in savagery. Its people were the first to attain any degree of culture, and they spread their ideas both to the east and west. Only this, it seems to me, can explain the similarity between the art of the two hemispheres in ancient times.

The pyramids of Egypt and the pyramids of Central America are universally known replicas of each other. On the stones of those pyramids are engraved hieroglyphics which resemble each other closely and can be deciphered by means of one and the same hieroglyphical key. Fragments of similar hieroglyph-covered rock tablets are to be found on the mountain tops of the submerged land in the Atlantic ocean. They seem to differ only because of their greater age.

Some years ago there was discovered under one of the pyramids of Mexico a wooden mask incrusted with a mosaic of turquoise carrying upon it a snake curiously coiled and twisted. This remarkable example of prehistoric art is now in the British museum.

The mask is a cleverly executed mosaic, the serpent body being distinguished from the rest by being a brighter blue. It represents a god of the Aztecs. The feathered serpent is clearly indicated by the rattles of the snake which appear above it. It is a crude copy of a similar mask which I found deep down in the Atlantic ocean about 300 miles off the African coast.

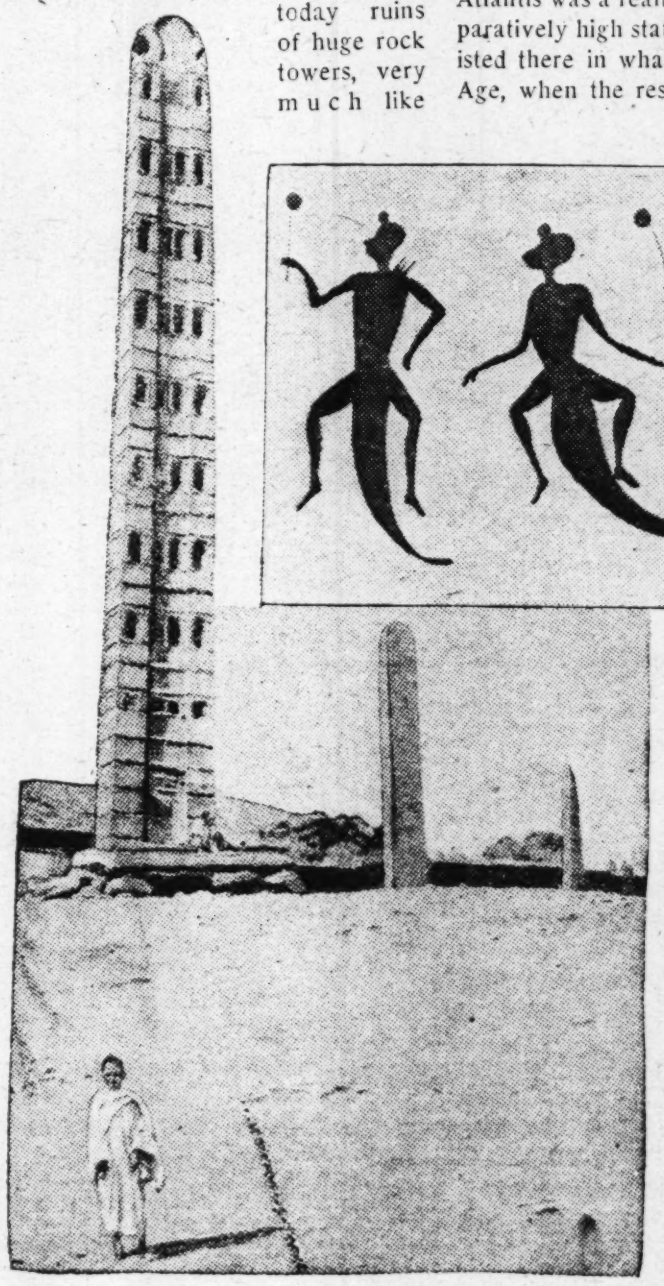

I have sufficient evidence to make me believe that the lost land between Africa and America was the aboriginal cradle of human, and perhaps the higher animal, life. From this region, after they had developed into sufficiently automotoric organic beings, they emigrated to all parts of the world. The first man was evolved on Atlantis.

Example of old African art, showing a strong resemblance to the sculpture of ancient Central America and that attributed to Atlantis, the land which may once have linked the eastern and western hemispheres.

Bas-relief found in a cave temple where Professor Schliemann believes the people of Atlantis worshiped—now a part of the ocean's bed.

Left, ruins of towers on the western coast of Africa that are thought to have been used to light travelers on their way to and from Atlantis.

The possible bust of an Atlantis beauty—found 50 feet deep in the Atlantic 200 miles off the African coast.

SILENCE reigned in and about the royal palace. The liveried servants went about their duties on tiptoe; the royal guards in their bearskin hats listened with keener ears than usual; and even members of the royal family joined in the expectant excitement which prevailed in the hushed stillness.

In the royal bedchamber the dowager queen sat by a window with a watch in her hand, ready to time for the waiting astrologers in the antechamber that faint cry which would indicate the first intake of breath and cosmic forces that would rule the life of the infant prince on whom the fate of a nation would hang.

For all this happened long ago, when it was customary for astrologers to cast the horoscopes of potentates and princes—and for so important a personage as the heir apparent the exact minute of that first breath had to be known in order that calculations should be absolutely correct.

At last the long-expected cry came.

"Fifteen minutes to three," cried the new grandmother, glancing at the ponderous chronometer in her hand. And the word was passed along to the waiting astrologers, who hastened off—their long robes aflying—to begin those abstruse calculations of planetary positions which they believed would foretell the characteristics and important events of the new life and whether or not the nation would have a worthy ruler in the infant whose arrival had been so anxiously awaited.

But, alas, for the frailty of human endeavor! Hours later the hands of the watch which the dowager queen had held still pointed to a quarter of three, and no one could tell when it had stopped. Consternation arose amongst the royal household, and to this day the horoscope of that particular king of England has never been correctly cast.

On the 13th of August, 1924, in the surgical cleanliness of a private hospital in Boston a modern father stood, watch in hand, ready to time the cosmic cry of his firstborn in order that his horoscope could be cast with greatest accuracy.

The arrival of this newborn had been carefully calculated by his parents for this auspicious day when the strength of the helpful planets Venus, Jupiter, Neptune and the Sun, assisted by the dominant Saturn-balancing romantic qualities were at their highest and the malefic forces, Mars and Uranus, were subordinate. Their own horoscopes had foreshadowed its arrival and even indicated the sex of the child.

The first cry of Robert Arthur Bennett came at 7:47 a. m. standard time, and immediately thereafter his father compared his timepiece with the correct time and found it accurate. This is the first birth chart, according to Mr. Bennett, that he is absolutely sure is correct as to time.

The parents of this child, for whom all manner of remarkable things are predicted, as we shall see later, are Sidney Kimball Bennett and his wife, the former Marion Meyer Drew. Both are members of that select little band of 30 known as the American Academy of Astrologians, and are well known and honored in their chosen profession. They met in the common field of astrology several years ago, found themselves to be particularly congenial, developed a friendship which changed to love and were married two years ago.

Most fathers and mothers watch the development of their offspring with curiosity and sometimes surprise. They hope they will turn out great musicians like Uncle John, and are vastly annoyed, after they have spent considerable sums on his musical education, to find that little John prefers to own a garage. Consider the shock to the Loeb and Leopold families when their sons proved to be murderers! That frightful crime and its far-reaching results might have been prevented, believers in astrology insist, had their parents known the dire tendencies to which their sons were prone.

But here is a baby whose characteristics and career are known to its parents from the hour of his birth. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett feel sure that their son, although he is but a few months old, has a fertile and keen imagination, that he will always be interested in psychic affairs and may be given to telling "stories" unless brought face to face with the necessity of sticking to the truth.

THEY think that he is destined to fame and honor, that he will be fortunate in friends and in money matters, having a great earning capacity, and that unless carefully guided he will make an unhappy marriage. They believe he will never be successfully defeated, never even attacked; and, in fact, that the thing to guard against is lest all things shall come to him so easily that he will not appreciate the value of hard work and true endeavor.

A disinterested astrologer, on seeing this child's horoscope as reproduced on this page, has said: "My personal opinion is that you have been blessed with an unusual child. He is a king in every sense of the word, and will sit in the rostrum with the mighty. But he is king in a spiritual sense rather than in the material. He will create his own dignity, achieve international fame, and in about his 29th year he will go on some great mission which will be of international character.

"His diplomacy will enable him to fill the position of representative to a foreign country and his logic enable him to become either a lawyer of a judge, should his education take a formal trend. He has such an unusual number of good aspects that no matter to what work he turns his hand he may expect the most spectacular success."

Mrs. Sidney K. Bennett, mother of the astrological baby

At this paper's request Mr. Bennett, in interpreting the horoscope printed on this page, has said:

"The most noticeable points about the horoscope of Robert are the conjunction of the sun at the time of his birth with the mystical planet Neptune, thus giving him a strong imagination, and the dominant position of the planet Saturn close to the eastern horizon, which balances the romantic qualities with the cold common sense and analysis of the true Saturnine type.

"Upon glancing at this chart, any astrologer would mark at once the strength of the helpful planets—Venus, Jupiter and the Sun—and the subordinate positions of the malefic forces, Mars and Uranus. He, like everyone else, will feel the effects of both good and bad elements in life, but he has the happy fortune to be able to overcome the less fortunate influences by the exercise of his own personality.

"The Sun in the sign Leo shows much love of luxury, elegance, the refinements of life, and also the ability to get these things, not merely the longing for them that sometimes causes so much unhappiness among those with the pre-Volsteadian 'champagne tastes and beer incomes.' This is the horoscope of a child who will be surrounded with comforts in early life and later, as a man, make an income sufficient to indulge his tastes.

Marilouise Chambers, who might, astrologers think, have been saved from a suicide's grave if her life had been star guided as Mr. and Mrs. Bennett intend their son to be

Would Countess Salm Hoogstraeten's life have been ordered quite differently if her horoscope had been taken the minute she was born?

"The placing of the moon in the sign Aquarius, when combined with the influence of the sun in Leo, makes him a better mixer than is usual of the true Leo type, and also a better reader of character. He will be very sensitive to the souls of those about him, never using logic as a guide to making friendships or associates, but always depending upon his reliable intuition. He will be changeable and nervous and often speak his mind too quickly, but such will be the power of his personality that much will be forgiven him. He will never lack friends, and will, moreover, be able to make supporters out of many who might at first be inimical toward him.

The birth chart of the Bennett baby on which his father and mother place such great reliance

"Neptune being the strongest planet in his chart will bring him in touch with all the occult and little understood elements of life. Its first manifestation has been to give to him parents vitally interested in such matters. It will later bring him into a career where the latest developments of artistic and creative talent are necessary.

"It would be almost impossible to state what work this might be, for Neptune has a way of bringing about strange developments, particularly in the business or public world, since it deals largely with inventions and creations. At present the latest interests under Neptune are the moving picture industry and the radio. When Robert is old enough to take up public work he will be allied with something as characteristic of the times as are these two occupations of 1924.

"He would make a sucessful actor, musician or artist, and should he apply his talents to a purely commercial field it would be something in which good taste and refinement were essential.

"He will not be an astrologer, but he will always be influenced by psychic conditions. As this may be a determining force, he will be carefully trained to understand the proper place of such things in daily life.

"The part of the chart referring to money matters contains the glorious Jupiter, the best indication for the attainment of material ease. While astrology does not indicate the amount of wealth which a man or woman may accumulate, it does show the manner of gain and the degree of comfort to be expected. Robert's chart shows his money to be made by his own efforts, not by inheritance or gift, and that he will possess more than he needs for his own personal use.

"It is doubtful if he will marry happily. His women friends will usually be older than he and there will be a number of strong attractions in his life, but marriage would be hazardous and brought about only after many delays and disappointments. There would be trouble in his life due to children, and, all in all, the emotional side is easily the least productive of happiness and success.

"With the ruler of his entire horoscope, Venus, placed in such an exalted position as it occupies, one can say without doubt that the chart's native will carve out a place for himself in the hall of fame of his contemporaries. He will work and play with the illustrious and his doings will be chronicled rather widely."

IN discussing her new son's tendency to unhappiness in emotional affairs, his mother says:

"Robert must be trained to handle the disturbing qualities of his nature in such a way as to experience the least possible amount of trouble from them. He will have a strongly affectionate nature and it will be difficult to educate him to the proper philosophy in regard to his love affairs. In contrast to a child with a cold, cruel nature he must be taught that his life is paramount and that personal happiness must be subordinated to his service to the world.

"Marriage will come after many love affairs and disappointments. His wife must be wisely chosen and only after many trials of her faith and loyalty. Should he become an actor or a musician his work will bring him much in contact with women of attractive personality and his life would be apt to show a series of ardent love affairs. Marriage, we feel, will be hazardous at best, but we shall do all we can to prepare him for a realization of this side of his nature."

Since the moment of his birth Robert has given his parents no trouble. He quite peacefully eats and sleeps the days and nights away, showing a steady gain. He is an unusually strong and healthy child, with deep blue eyes and has the long fingered hands of the artist.

Already he is greatly traveled for one of his age. When two weeks old he made the trip from Boston to Beacon, N. Y., where he spent the month of November at his grandmother's lovely country place; and in Oc-

The thought of the man she had married made her immune to all lesser fears. And, driven by that dominating motive, she found her strength equal to the seven miles of uneven, shifting sand. As she passed the last curve in the lane and saw the yellow squares of Miss Drummond's windows, she was stlil able to run toward them.

For a long, silent space she stood in the doorway, MacIvor half barring her from the warmth and safety of the wide room, Miss Drummond erect and motionless beside the lamp, her needle suspended above her mending, her face blank with question.

Under that grim, almost forbidding gaze, Jane Gail groped in vain for words. And quite suddenly she was spared the need of speech; she could cry now. And she found herself clinging tight to Miss Drummond's shoulders, felt the sure safety of strong, protecting arms about her.

"Be away with you, Davie MacIvor. You're not needed here."

The voice snapped like a whip over Jane's shoulder. She heard the door creak and close, MacIvor's heavy step on the gallery floor, and, easily now, her own voice telling the story, prompted here and there by an abrupt and pertinent question. She discovered that she was in her old room, by an instant need of decision and competency.

She found matches on the mantel and lighted a lamp. The yellow light revealed the disorder of the room, the swollen, discolored face of the man who eyed her, swaying a little as he leaned against the table.

"Where you been, all this time?" he demanded, his voice grating. "What that Miss Drummond was putting her efficiently to bed while she listened. And presently Sallie fetched a tray of food, which, amazingly, Jane could swallow, under Miss Ailie's orders.

"We'll talk of this in the morning," said Miss Drummond. "You'll be needing sleep more than speech, tonight."

"I had to come back—I couldn't go anywhere else—"

"You showed sense there, at all events," said the old lady. "And now you'll be showing more of that same by going to sleep. We'll talk of this in good time."

The door closed, and a profound fatigue seemed to descend on Jane Gail with the darkness, a fatigue that was strangely benign and grateful against the deep sense of security that lay on her, the comfort of lavender-smelling linen and warmth. She heard, remotely, a blur of lowered voices in the room below, distinguished MacIvor's heavier tone and Miss Drummond's brisk, snapping speech in interjected answers. She drifted into unconsciousness with the sound in her ears, and wakened under a slant of sun that startled her with a sense of guilt as she guessed the hour by its angle.

By day her problem seemed more complex, if less terrifying. She faced it helplessly while she dressed and found it waiting for her, when she came downstairs, in the person of her husband.

The big living room was empty and she opened the veranda door, to cross the gallery to the kitchen, where, she guessed, Miss Drummond would be at her morning housekeeping. Sheppard Gail stood face to face with her as she stepped out.

For a moment her mind stood still. He was seemingly himself, showing no signs of his yesterday's excesses, except that his eye were bloodshot and his hand shook a little as he fumbled with his hatbrim.

"I fetched over your mare, Jane. And Cash is driving the wagon for your trunks. You ready?"

She met his eyes squarely. "I'm not going," she said evenly. "That's over and done with."

He grinned. "Too quick to suit me, Jane. Reckon we both got a few years left to live. Go get your things and we'll get started."

"I'm not coming," she said again. "I saw and heard enough, last night, to decide that point quite finally."

"You mean you're going to quit me just because I got to drinking some? Don't you reckon a man's got a right to celebrate a wedding, Jane? I'm right sorry if I scared you—"

"I'm not coming. You'd better go. I don't want to see you again. I want to forget—if I ever can!"

His eyes narrowed suddenly. "Quit fooling, Jane. That kind of talk might be all right if we weren't married. Reckon you aim to forget that, too. But it ain't so easy—forgetting you're married. Go get your things and let's get started."

She shook her head and would have moved past him toward the kitchen wing, but his hand fell on her arm and she felt his fingers tighten.

"Don't try that on me, Jane. You come along home, where you belong."

His voice grated. She made no effort to oppose his grip of her wrist. Strangely, now, she was not in the least afraid of him. Before she spoke Miss Ailie appeared at the kitchen door. Gail half turned to face her, still holding Jane's wrist.

"I come over to fetch home my wife, Miss Drummond," he said flatly. "Reckon you-all ain't heard—"

"I've heard much, Sheppard Gail," Miss Drummond wiped damp hands on her apron. "Overmuch."

He scowled. "It don't matter what she's told you. I've come for her."

"I hear you say so, Sheppard. And you've had a brave ride for your pains, I'm thinking."

"I thought so." His lips drew away from his teeth. "You're putting her up to it, are you? Trying to keep her here—"

"You've some penetration, then. I'd be blithe to keep her, if she needed the asking. So far she's done well without it. And I'll be asking you to ride on, Sheppard Gail. It's cleaning day with me, and I've small time for gossip."

HE jerked abruptly at Jane's arm. "We'll go without your hat, if you don't want it. You come along now an' quit this fooling."

Jane was still unafraid of him, almost minded to laugh at the bluster of his tone. She saw Davie MacIvor behind him, and a stab of fright shot across her mood, as though MacIvor's coming had somehow precipitated a danger of which till now she had been unaware. Gail dropped her arm and whirled quickly.

"Reckon I can talk up to you, anyhow," he said slowly.

"I take it right unfriendly of you, Dave—keeping my wife away from me like you're doing."

His voice was almost gentle, yet Jane was sensible for its menace. MacIvor came up the steps deliberately, his face set.

"You choose a strange word, between us, Gail. I have not claimed friendship with you, that I remember, nor have I reason to think you feel it for me. But as to this lady, I will have no room for doubt. She is here, in my aunt's house, by her own will and act, and with my aunt's consent. It has no more to do with me than this."

Gail laughed, a thin, harsh note of triumph. "I figured you wasn't hunting for trouble, Dave—not that kind, anyhow. Step one side while I take my wife along home."

He reached for Jane's arm, but MacIvor's hand dropped on his wrist.

"If Mrs. Gail goes with you it will be by her own wish and will, Gail. I will not interfere, nor yet will I see her carried by the strong hand. It is for her to say if she stays or goes."

"I'm staying," said Jane quickly. "That was settled finally, last night."

For a moment she fancied that Gail would strike. His eyes narrowed and glittered, and his hand moved ever so slightly toward his hip. MacIvor, facing him, did not stir. There was a tense instant of silence, and then Gail laughed.

"Reckon I lose, then. It's a lady's privilege to change her mind in a hurry. Maybe she'll change it again. I can wait. And I'm kind of apt to remember things, Dave—little things like this."

He swung away almost gaily to his horse. Jane watched him spring to the saddle with an unwilling glow of admiration, in spite of her shamed disillusion. He was more like the man she had married—the thought came home to her like a blow. And David MacIvor, turning gravely to her, lent it force.

"Good morning, Mrs. Gail," he said slowly, and walked past her into the house. For an instant, as she watched Sheppard Gail's horse cantering toward the woods, Jane was almost sorry that she had not ridden with him.

"And he shall be like a tree, planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season. His leaf also shall not wither and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper."

The sober, marching tempo in which MacIvor read the Scripture passages at evening prayers changed on the final phrase. Jane Gail felt a ring in his voice, as of personal defiance, as if he took literally and to himself the prophecy and promise of the psalm. Indeed, for once, the personal application of the words, always a vivid reality to MacIvor, she knew, seemed almost as reasonable and real to her as if King David had been thinking about MacIvor when first he sang that song.

"The ungodly are not so, but are like the chaff which the wind driveth away."

SHE felt the deep bite of the contemptuous figure. The Psalmist had groped for a simile that would lend extraordinary power to his declaration that righteousness was profitable wisdom, and sin a costly kind of folly. And he likened the godly man to a tree, deep rooted, fixed and fruitful through drought and storm. He drove home the contrast by calling the ungodly chaff, the helpless plaything of a puff of breeze, producing nothing, impermanent, trivial.

While MacIvor prayed the words echoed in Jane's mind, lifting against her will the picture of Sheppard Gail

Continued Story

By Hugh MacNair Kahler and Donald G. Herring

—the man who hated the land in which his roots might have struck deep, who dreamed of idle wanderings in far places, pursuing only the transient, shallow pleasure of a whim. Chaff, driven before the wind—trees planted by rivers of water. Again, even in the measured, formal tone of prayer, she caught that effect of triumphant, unshaken confidence.

She wondered whether by any chance MacIvor's philosophy could be right, whether there was a God who intervened in human minutiae, who helped those who, like MacIvor, asked no help until they had spent their strength and courage to the full. MacIvor and his grim god, against Sheppard Gail and his luck . . .

Under Miss Drummond's roof there was the atmosphere of a fortress facing attack. All day, even when her thoughts were most intent upon her own concerns and the consequence of her haste and folly, Jane Gail had felt the tension of a joining fight, the presence of a major issue which, alien as it was, somehow lessened the importance of her own problem. Tonight after the tight silence of the supper table, the awkward interval that followed before prayers, she had almost forgotten Jane Gail's affairs, as she watched MacIvor's face and read in it his acceptance of the challenge to do battle for his trees. Usually, after prayers, there were only brief good nights between these three. This evening, with the somber phrases of the psalm in her ears, Jane hesitated, aware of a need for speech.

"You're going to fight, David? You won't sell your timber?"

She saw the muscles tighten about his jaws. "I mean to fight," he said slowly. "And more than that, Mrs. Gail."

She winced at the final words. He had not once failed to use the formal prefix since she had come back, as if to remind her who and what she had chosen to be. But again her interest in the broader issue drew her thought from herself and her altered status in the household.

"You mean that you can win?"

"Just that. Before—" he seemed to trip on the name—"before the other side can levy their taxes on my trees they must hold a county vote and win consent to the new courthouse and the highways they have set up as their pretext. And I will beat them there."

"I thought—" she stopped in turn. "It was going to be hard to discuss this thing, if they could not introduce the name of Gail. She took her resolve firmly. "I thought that the Gails controlled the county politics—"

"True, by a narrow margin. But that is in the main because the folk who would oppose them have had small interest in such matters. Yonder in the hills are many who see eye to eye with me—small farmers, hard-driven to keep soul and body joined, who can ill spare a day's labor to cast a vote in which they have no great concern. Men of my blood, in part. They will stand by me in this. The Gails—" he stumbled again on the name—"the Gails will be cocksure."

He straightened, and the thin lamplight deepened the bitter lines of his face. Miss Drummond spoke dryly from the stair-foot.

"Be warned by them, then, Davie MacIvor, and vaunt yourself when you put off your harness. It is late for boasting, and over-early, too."

Jane followed her to the upper floor, where they separated with only a brief and formal good night. She felt alone and alien as her plight came home to her. Last night she had been too spent to think. Throughout the day her thoughts had been diverted and preoccupied by other things, but now as she lay awake she found her mind clear and ordered, engaged with a new realization that, without knowing it, she had won something in this house, and then, as unconsciously, thrown it away, to evaluate it justly only now that it was lost.

During her weeks here she had become in some sense a member of a family, had been admitted to a status very little like that on which she had been received again, after her desertion to the other camp. She was here, now, on a basis of formality, received and tolerated only under a law of hospitality and asylum. Before, she had been part of it, welcome for her own sake, the object of a genuine regard on the part of these two people, whose superficial traits had prevented her from understanding, till too late, their intrinsic worth.

Shame came to her as she thought of how she had smiled in secret at their homely ways, a shame intensified and embittered by a corollary memory of her ready acceptance of Sheppard Gail's surface qualities as the true index to the man below them. She forced her thought away from him and back to Miss Drummond and MacIvor and the problem of her new relations with them both. She was sufficiently practical to realize the futility of regret when there was a definite and tangible difficulty facing her, demanding a working solution.

Fifty hours ago she had been sorry for herself because circumstances compelled her to live in this house, with these two. Now, soberly, she pondered on her chances of winning back her place in their regard, saw it, at last, as something once possessed, something lightly forfeited, something worth a stubborn effort to regain.

In this new light she seemed to understand more than the relationship which had existed between the three, to find a comprehension of things more fundamental—of the relative importance, in human life, of purpose and pleasure, of work and play.

The dull routine of the house and farm, that had oppressed and wearied her as she looked on at it, revealed itself now as touched with a rugged dignity. There was something fine in Miss Ailie's passion for clean walls and floors, in her interest in details of pantry and kitchen. There was a homely splendor as of romance in MacIvor's blind and obstinate devotion to his fields and timber. Strength—the word came to her with a new force and appeal, a quality that made other traits—those traits that had seemed so sufficient and important—now trivialities of little weight. The only thing worth being, she thought, was strong. If you were that, in the best sense, in David MacIvor's sense and Miss Ailie's, you would be everything else that mattered.

THE picture lifted of Sheppard Gail, alone with his bottle and his negro mute; of Warren Borden, paying with years of life for the comfort of a flabby, indecisive will; of Jane Gail herself, and the price that was still to pay for the weakness that had drifted her into intimacy with Sheppard Gail, that had surrendered lazily to a whim of impulse rather than assert the littel strength it would have need to stop and to consider.

Before sleep came to her she had dealt mercilessly with herself. What she had received without earning at Miss Ailie's hands and at MacIvor's, what she had sacrificed without a thought, was to be reconquered now, as a debt due no less to them than to herself. She would live in this house no longer as a guest, gladly or reluctantly sheltered; she would pay her way in work, in loyalty, in understanding and respect. A random word of MacIvor's reading came to her. "Thy people shall be my people and thy God, my God." She smiled in the darkness at the idea, but there was a reassuring comfort in the words and they seemed in some mysterious fashion to relaease her to the peace of sleep.

It was not easy. She found herself held stubbornly away from the work of the house, barred by a formal courtesy against which she made slow, toiling progress. Sometimes, as her efforts were rebuffed, she fancied that Miss Drummond was jealous of her duties, clung to them as to something precious which she would not share. There were times when it seemed as if Jane must be driven back upon herself and her unwelcome thoughts, but the resolve endured in the face of these discouragements; she held to the thought of that one magic word. She was strong; she would never be weak again.

And presently, as if the older woman yielded against her will, Miss Drummond's attitude relented slowly, till there were times when Jane Gail could almost forget that their relationship had changed. Gradually she was allowed to look on, and then to help, in the housework which Miss Drummond lifted to the dignity and interest of a profession. She began to understand something of the common sense that underlay those activities that seemed most reasonless—the sober, practical necessity of cleanliness, the art of stern economy in little things, the trick of managing a pack of shiftless, naturally slattern servants, the craft of ordering a hundred minor tasks so that they merged into a smoothly fluent stream.

But with David MacIvor she made no visible gain. She saw that he avoided her, now, deliberately and intelligently; they met at the table and at household prayers, always in Miss Drummond's presence, always separated by a barrier of unyielding reserve which resisted every effort on Jane's part to break it down. He spoke to her only when she made it necessary, and never without the needless repetition of her married name, as if he would remind himself and that she had put herself, once for all, out of his kind and class.

THE only perceptible lessening of this constraint was an increasing willingness to discuss the impending election in her presence, instead of waiting for his talk with his aunt until

Jane had gone to her room. Even in these three cornered conversations, however, he addressed Miss Drummond and seemed to ignore Jane except when she required him to answer a direct question. But she was patient, and she saw, in time, that he was beginning to grow at least accustomed to her presence, less on guard against her. And his anxiety over the coming struggle preocupied him more and more, so that he talked of it with a growing freedom and frankness, as he returned from his electioneering among the Scots farmers on whom he counted for his defense.

"They are ill cattle to drive," he told Miss Drummond, after a long day's absence in the hills. "And they see the near penny before the distant shilling. I have talked to little purpose this day, Aunt Ailie."

Miss Drummond bit a thread deliberately. "You have less skill of talk than most, Davie MacIvor. I am thinking that you'll be better at the farming and the fighting. And that's a pity, too, when a limber tongue can spare a man more than a ready hand." She sighed. "There's whiles, Davie, when I wonder what the Lord God was thinking of to gab out of all men except the kind that have little else. It's a great pity he did not make Eve first, and have the benefit of her advice while he was putting Adam together."

David MacIvor laughed, and the sound of it startled Jane Gail, so that she looked up from her sewing basket in blank surprise. It came to her that she could not remember having heard him laugh before and her conception of MacIvor underwent, in that moment, a considerable readjustment. He became the first time wholly human.

"If he had made you first, Aunt Ailie, I'm thinking there would have been no want for advice, at all events," he said.

"There would not," said his aunt emphatically. "Not that I would be criticizing, you understand. No. No doubt he did the best he could, but there's no denying that a woman would have managed better in some dee-tails."

MacIvor laughed again, and his eyes met Jane's with a glint of wholly secular amusement. It was like meeting another person, Jane thought; she wondered whether, under the gravity he wore so patiently, he was hungry, like other men, for honest mirth. For a moment she felt far older and wiser than he; there was something pathetic in the half-shamed lapse into laughter, as if MacIvor had been forced into his solemnity against his wish, by outer strains and pressures.

She saw him, now, as the product of the harsh, distracting influences that must have surrounded him from birth—a man driven in upon himself, warped and twisted from his natural bent by an inherited and ruling passion. His laughter, like his youth, had been sacrificed to timber, until this obsession of his had become a dominant obscuring force. It was absurd that a few square miles of standing pine would be held so all-important that a man's life could count for so little in the balance against his woods. Given a normal environment, MacIvor might have been as lighthearted as anybody—as Sheppard Gail, even—Jane shrank back from comparison. MacIvor, under any stress of circumstances, would never have been like Gail. But her awakened compassion prompted her to unconsidered speech.

"David, sometimes I almost hope they'll vote against you," she said slowly. "It seems horrible that a man like you should sacrifice yourself as you do on a patch of woods! If they beat you, you'll have to let the timber go—have to take the money for it—and, no matter how you hate it, there'll be compensations. If you win, you'll just go on like this—wearing yourself out to save your trees."

HE was instantly grave again. "I have heard that same from Aunt Ailie, Mrs. Gail. I thought that it was clearer to you—my reason for sparing the timber. I am not blind, for all the love I hold for my woods. With these hands I have cut many and many a tall pine. But I save the forest—"

"But a forest is nothing but a great many trees," she interrupted. "I don't see—"

"The forest is the living thing, composed, to be sure, of many trees, but something more than just that, too. I do not know if I can make it clear, but it is as though the forest were likened to a man, and the trees to the cells of his body. It is easy for the man or the forest to heal even sore wounds, so long as life endures, but once life is gone there can be no healing. Trees spring up, grow old and die, but the forest, unless we kill it, goes on forever."

"Of course, I can see that. But the point is that I don't see why it should go on forever. Somebody will cut down those woods, some day, even if you manage to keep them as long as you live. And it seems a shame that you shouldn't have the good of the money."

"If I have my will of it, Mrs. Gail, no man will ever clear those woods of mine. Give me but five good years, or better, ten, and I can make so much sure, at least. For those woods are the hidden reservoir of all our streams; they give up their stored moisture slowly under the sun and let it fall again at rain—"

"I know about that," she broke in eagerly. "I know that when your woods are gone these sandhills will be a barren desert. But what else are they now? Nothing grows here—the land, even with your woods standing, is worthless."

He laughed. Again she was surprised and pleased by the sound of it.

"You say that, when you have seen my young peach trees? Worthless, barren land yields no such growth, Mrs. Gail. Land of any sort is like a machine, in which water and sunlight and death are mingled to breed new life. Your northern soils, to begin with, hold more plant food than our sand, but rich or poor, all soils must be fed before they yield, as a machine is fed. The sun lies warm on these hills for nine months of every twelve, and one mule can pull a plow through new ground. As long as we have water, and as long as the sand is fertilized and cultivated rightly, there is no farming country in the world that can be more fertile."

For a moment the earnestness of his tone and words convinced her, and then she remembered a careless comment of Sheppard Gail's.

"You've been thinking so for years and years, but the land is still barren, isn't it?"

"I had to learn, like other men. My first trees died for want of proper feeding; another experiment was wasted for lack of means to fight the borers and curculio. I forced another orchard over fast, and a hard winter killed the spongy wood. But I have learned now. This summer I shall ship away sound fruit, and take from every crate the profit on a pine tree. Let these people see me do just that a year or two, and they will need no preaching to persuade them. You will see these bare hills, where the timber has been wastd, green again and under great orchards; you will see the roads and schools you talk of, and thrifty farms feeding strong men and their sons, where now there is scant pasture for wild swine."

He sobered. "You will see these things; that is, if I can save my timber and the water springs it feeds. If they can force the timber to the saws, then we shall have here a desert, indeed."

JANE GAIL succumbed to the certainty of his conviction. Gradually, at their mealtime meetings, she led him to elaborate his theory until she came to understand something of the reasoned logic behind the farming processes that had seemed witless and wasteful; the cover crops that were plowed under in the spring; the heavy expense for fertilizers; the cattle that were supported at a loss each year. And she saw, too, that his efforts to enlist the support of his friends in the hill district were unsuccessful. They were too narrow of vision to realize his sacrifice. One of them, a lean, gaunt jawed farmer who stopped for dinner, let her see the attitude of all.

David MacIvor had counted on this man, Thomas Gilchrist, as a weight and influence in the farther edges of the county, and Jane saw that it was a sore disappointment to him when Gilchrist declared pointblank and determinedly that he would vote for the bond issue.

"It's natural that you should be against it, MacIvor. You and your timber must pay your just share of such cost, and it will be large, of course. This is but fair. The heavier burden should fall on the stronger shoulder. You have held your pines untaxed through all these years while their value has increased and multiplied. Now it is but common justice that you should pay a little."

MacIvor's argument fell on dry ground. Gilchrist had farmed the hill sand overlong to be persuaded of its possibilities. He shook his head stubbornly at talk of peach trees, and departed at last after something like a quarrel. Througout his stay at the Drummond house he had avoided direct speech with Jane, although she tried, again and again, to draw him into talk with her. Once or twice, when she met his eyes, she read in them a visible disfavor which angered and puzzled her at once. When he had gone Miss Ailie attacked her nephew's position with sudden venom.

"Now maybe you'll believe that the election is to go against you, Davie MacIvor, and send word, like a sensible body, to your timber buyers. You can ding the Gails yet, if you will, man! By the time thier tax gatherers come down on you there need be no stick of timber left for them to levy on, and the money in a sure place, out of their reach."

MacIvor shook his head slowly. "I am not beaten, Aunt Ailie, even though they carry the county against me. I will fight them farther than they think, and harder, it may be, too. I am breaking three hundred acres of new land and in four years I shall have fruit enough to carry taxes on my timber and something to spare besides. I shall ding them, as you say, but in my own time and my own way, laying ax to no pine tree that I hold."

He left the table without waiting for her answer. She followed him with a glance of amiable exasperation, the corners of her thin, firm lips trembling a little.

"There's whiles when I itch to take the flat of my hand to the lad." She suffered her lips to relax in a reluctant grin. "And again there's whiles when I tell the Lord God it was a grand day's work when He got Davie MacIvor on his side."

The sound of hoofs in the drive broke the expressive silence which lay between the women under the hanging lamp. Miss Drummond lowered her sewing to her lap and straightened to listen, her head tilted.

"That will be Davie MacIvor," she said. "And by the pace he rides he'll be fetching ill news of the vote."

SHE carried a small glass lamp to the door and held it above her head. Jane resisted an impulse to follow and hear MacIvor's report at its first telling. She was again conscious of standing outside this quarrel, of being an intruder, welcome, perhaps, in victory, but barred from the closer intimacy of defeat. It was hard enough to be beaten—for this defeat would strike at her as cunningly as at MacIvor himself—without being denied her share in the common regret. She was at the stair when MacIvor came in, and against her will she turned to read his news in his look.

She saw instantly that he had lost.

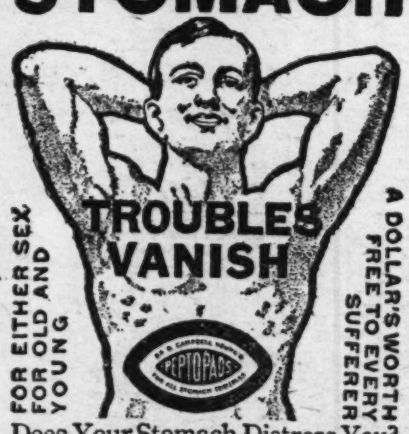

"Oh, David—I'm sorry!"

He inclined his head gravely. "I made sure of so much, Mrs. Gail, without the telling."

Miss Drummond closed her door and set her lamp on the table. She was voluble with questions. MacIvor answered soberly, without passion or heat.

"They had twenty-eight votes to spare," he said. "No more than that." His face tightened to a new grimness. Miss Drummond, for some reason that Jane could not fathom, glanced briefly at her and back at her nephew before she spoke again.

"Then the hill farmers did not stand with you?"

Jane observed that McIvor, too, glanced at her before he answered, as if there were some connection, invisible to her but apparent to both the others, between those dour Scots hill folk and Jane Gail.

"Thomas Gilchrist worked hard for the Gails," he said slowly. "It was their vote—the Gilchrists and Ogilvies and Camerons—that carried it."

Miss Drummond nodded. "I thought as much. There never was a Gilchrist could see beyond the hawk's neb of him, nor a Cameron that was not easily led by the same handle. Well, what's by is by, Davie. And there's this to think of—they've done themselves as ill a service as they've done to you. When the timber's gone, they'll curse this day, and serve them right."

"The timber's far from going, election or none, Aunt Ailie. They've still to beat me. Let them clap on their tax till they weary—I'll pay it."

Below the stubborn defiance of the words Jane felt a flat weariness, new in her experience of the man. Miss Drummond evidently heard it, too.

"You're far spent, Davie, and you'll be the better for your bed. We can do without prayers, this one night, I'm thinking—"

"It's the one night when I'll be needing them most," he said evenly. Again his glance moved to Jane and seemed to give her opportunity to escape if she should wish. She came quickly back to her chair, instead. He opened the big Bible with no hesitation for the place, and the weariness was gone from his voice as he read, the language of the psalm strangely natural on his lips. Listening, it dawned on Jane that this man's speech had actually been formed by the starkly simple Saxon of the King James text. He spoke, by habit, in this same idiom he read.

"Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil! For thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me . . . Thou preparest a table for me in the presence of mine enemies. . . . My cup runneth over. . . . Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life."

She carried upstairs with her a persistent, unreasonable conviction that this man had not been beaten. Through the board floor she could hear a low-toned conversation, and again the feeling that she was alien to the household depressed her. MacIvor had kept something back, something that he would not let her hear, and yet would share willingly enough with his aunt. She remembered how they both had glanced at her; when the defection of the Gilchrists and their clans had been mentioned, and once more she felt the presence here of some association that connected her with those hard-headed hill farmers, almost a sense of reproach, which persisted in the face of her logical self-acquittals. It was still in her thoughts when she came down in the morning.

MacIvor had already ridden abroad on his farm business, and the two women breakfasted alone, in silence except when Jane forced a moment of talk. She did her share of the housework, still troubled by the feeling that some change had come over the relations of the household since yesterday, a change not to be explained by the defeat at the polls. Toward ten, when there was an interval in her daily routine, she went out to the garden, responding by instinct to a mellow spring sun, the spiraea and forsythia in bloom, the song of the mockers thrilling from the gables. It was impossible not to yield a little to the reassurance of reviving, passionate nature; she thought of Pippa and her song, the God in his heaven and the world with which all was right. And, with the words rising to her lips, she looked up to see Sheppard Gail entering toward her down the drive.

SHE stood very still, waiting for him, aware that something had happened to shadow the sun and turn the birdsong flat and sardonic in her ears. He saw her, waved to her, as gaily as in the days of their old, lighthearted companionship, and swung down before the hedge with a cheerful greeting in his former tone, as if all that had come between them had been forgotten, had never happened.

She did not answer. An ache came to her throat, as at something beautiful and young and cherished, that had died, as needlessly as such things always seem to die, as cruelly. It was like seeing a ghost of her momentary romance as if the man she had seemed to love, the man she knew she had never loved, were here before her, smiling the same abashed, appealing smile she had all but forgotten and yet remembered so mercilessly well.

"Good morning, Jane." He stood still, holding his horses' bit. "Don't shout. I'm under a flag of truce."

She remembered him as she had seen him that evening at the house and the recollection strengthened her.

"If you want to see Mr. MacIvor—"

"I don't. I never did like his company, Jane, and this morning I'm plumb prejudiced against it. I rode over to talk to you.'

"There is nothing to talk about, between us," she said evenly. "You've wasted your ride, I'm afraid."

"I can afford to waste a lot of riding, Jane. And maybe there's more to talk about than you think. I want you to come back. That's why I'm here."

She did not even shake her head, watching him as if she had not heard.

"Don't take it thataway, Jane. Wait till I tell you. You saw me when I was—drunk. You think that's how I really am, all the time. I'm not blaming you for that. Folks keep saying that a man ain't ever his real self till he's drunk. It ain't so, of course. A drunk man's poisoned; if there's one time when he ain't himself, it's then. But I don't look for you to believe that—not yet, anyhow. I got to prove to you that I ain't that kind of a man, inside me. And that's why I come, Jane—to get my chance to prove it."

She did not answer, but the plea touched her. She remembered Warren Borden. Surely th man who had degenerated under disease and poison in his last months was not the real man, there, the man she had trusted and loved all her life. And she had, for a little space, loved this man who stood in the path before her.

"I want you should come back home, Jane, and leave me prove it to you, the only way I can. Wait—" he moved a hand as the refusal rose to her lips—"that's all I want—I know I got to win you back, all over again, and I aim to do it. But it's different now we're married. I can't hold up my head before my own folks, the way things stand now. I'm ashamed, Jane. But if you come back, you'll be just as safe from me as if you stayed here with Miss Drummond. You got to take my word for that, but you can do it, Jane. You think I want a wife I got to take by force, a wife 't hates me? Well, I don't, nor any other man I ever knew about. That's story book talk, Jane. Real folks don't feel thataway. I'm askin' you to come back home and stay there, like a guest in my house, till I prove to you what kind I am, one way or the other. That ain't askin' so much, is it? When you promised me so much more?"

She shook her head without speech.

"You won't, Jane? Why not? You afraid to take my word?"

"I haven't any reason to trust it," she said slowly, "but it's not so much that. I'm not thinking about myself. I'm thinking—about—about these people here. Twice they've taken me in when I had nowhere else to go, made me welcome, without question or condition. Now, when they're in trouble, I couldn't leave them if I wanted to. I like them both. I trust them. I feel at home here—"

He nodded gravely. "I know. You think I'd have left you stay here a minute, if I didn't know what kind of folks they are? Think I'd have stood for being laughed at, the way I have, if I wasn't sure how they treated you? If you didn't feel like that about both of 'em, Jane, they'd be something wrong with you. But you don't see it right, all the same. If you aim to do Dave and his aunt a favor, the biggest one you can do is to come with me, like I say."

Her eyes widened in question and doubt. He nodded soberly.

"I sort of figured I'd have to make you come home, after what you saw, that night, Jane. That's why I worked so hard to beat Dave in his tax business—I'm owning up to you, Jane, putting my cards right on the table. This is no time to lie. I needed a club and I got one. I've got Dave where he can't hit back—"

She shook her head at this, but he did not wait for her denial in words.

"Oh, he'll try to fight back, sure enough, but it's no use. We got him cold, Jane. An' it's up to you to say whether he goes under or stays up, that's all. I only want one thing, now. I'm all through wanting money and what money'll buy. I only want you, and I got to have you. I got to have my chance to prove that I aint like what you think, Jane. And if you feel like you owe MacIvor something, you can pay him back by doing like I said. If you'll come home, I'll leave Dave alone—leave him to hang on to his timber till he drops. They won't be any new courthouse nor highways nor taxes."

"And if I stay here?"

"Then I am to break him, like I can, if they's no other way I can have my chance to show you what I am. I'd do more than that before I'd leave you go, but I'd hate to, Jane. I feel like I owe Dave a good turn, too—the way he's treated you. I'd like for to pay him back, by leaveing him hang on to his pines and fuss with his peaches. But I'll break him, if you say I got to.'

IN spite of herself the threat warmed her. She had cared for this man, after months of close and friendly comradeship; on one isolated experience of what he could be when drugged and poisoned by bad whisky, she had discarded all her earlier opinions and beliefs concerning him.

"How could I trust you to carry out your bargain, if I accepted it?" she said slowly. "I'd only have your word—and I don't know how good it is. You see I'm being quite frank, too."

"That's what I want, Jane. I don't blame you. A man't drinks too much ain't responsible. But you got me, anyhow. If I don't keep my bargain, all that happens is I lose you again and for keeps. I can't hold you by force, even if I wanted to. You don't promise me a thing. If I can't convince you, I lose, and Dave MacIvor wins, anyhow."

She shook her head again. "I can't. I won't. It would be too mean, too contemptible, to desert them now, on the chance that you'll do as you say. I've got to stand by—"

"And what good is that going to do Dave? What use can you be to him in a fight like this? You're just one more weight on his neck—one more to feed and think about. You don't see it straight, Jane, or you'd never've come back here in the first place. You don't realize what you let Dave in for, when you come back."

"I don't see—" she began, puzzled. He leaned toward her.

"No, you don't. You don't see that when Dave MacIvor took you in, he signed a permit for me to kill him any time or place I pleased, without even facing a trial for it. You don't see't it ever since you been here. Dave's been waiting for a bullet to hit him in the back, knowing that he had it coming to him, that any jury would say so, even in the north. You can't take a man's wife away from him without risking that, and Dave knows it, as well as I do. And Dave thinks he knows I'm the kind to shoot him in the back, too."

She straightened. Many things became clear to her now. Gail was right. MacIvor had known, all along, that he was a fair target for a shot from ambush; Miss Ailie had known it, even better than he. And in spite of it they had let her stay, made her welcome, kept her from guessing what they feared might be the price of that sanctuary! Minor incidents, tones, looks, silences were suddenly explained in the light of this new understanding.

She recoiled from a realization of her thoughtless selfishness in thrusting herself again upon Miss Drummond's household. She had been, all through the fight, nothing but a burden and a risk; without her to complicate his problem it was even possible that MacIvor might have won in that election—she might easily have been the unconscious cause of his defeat. She plunged half blindly to a decision.

"I'll come, on your terms," she

the way he's behaving tonight. My dear, if my husband ever dared to treat me like that for just one half hour—"

"So would I! In a minute!"

But here the intervening gentleman tilted himself forward again, demanding to be told the meaning of this colloquy; he was being slandered about something, he insisted, and the confidential fete-a-tete had to be abandoned. There was one guest present, however, who had divined its purport and could even have repeated certain phrases of the conversation, though he had heard none of it.

THIS was the unfortunate Henry Beelsby: he needed to glimpse but once a surreptitious turn of eye toward Ella and then toward himself, and thenceforward he well understood that the gossipers' talk was of his wife's sufferings under his tyranny. He had been given clues enough to the significance of such talks, for not infrequently did Ella begin her information to him, when she was emotional: "Mrs. Compton says if her husband ever treated her—" or "Mrs. Selfbridge told me herself if she ever had to endure from any man what I—" and during the cocktail preliminaries in the other room he had seen his wife engage in hasty asides with the two ladies now opposite him. He guessed with an accuracy not difficult what she had told them.

"All right!" he thought, not quite murmuring the words, though his lips moved slightly. "Go on about me, if you think it does you any good!" This was addressed to the two opposite, though he looked not at them but at a porcelain basin of tulips upon the table between them and himself. "Go on! See what I care. I'll show you!"

For him, just then, the universe consisted of but two component parts: one was a single point of suffering consciousness, himself, the mere incarnation of a cold in the head and throat and bronchial tubes; while all else was a conglomeration of various manifestations of selfish happiness. And the most selfish of all the selfish happinesses in the world was that of his wife; her laughter rang the loudest and so incessantly that his feeling about it was partly amazement. "Dog-gone if I believe women are really human beings at all!" For, as with many other husbands, his wife was "women" to him; and her ways sometimes appeared to be supernaturally alien, opposed to all that could or should be expected to arise out of the nature of mankind.

He longed to punish her, and at the same time dreamed of dazzling her. He built beautiful and bitter air castles, seeing himself push his chair back from the table, rise abruptly, and address her in tones that would awe the merry company and frighten Ella into a staring paralysis: "I have just one thing to say to you before I leave you for good. One year ago I invested a thousand dollars in an Oklahoma oil corporation. Today I sold my holdings for exactly one million, eight hundred thousand, five hundred and seventy-six dollars. I've never told you what the stock was doing, because I wanted to test your character. I have found it wanting. You have not only dragged me around at night till my health is ruined, but I don't believe there's a woman at this table you haven't complained of me to. You can keep our cottage and the Ford; but as for me, I have had a limousine sent out from town and it's waiting in front for me. I'm going first to an apartment I've taken at the Washington Arms, where your lawyers can find me any time this week. After that I shall be living in Paris, thank you! I have the pleasure to bid you good evening."

Ella was far from unconscious of the hatred sizzling toward her from that obscure gap in the table's jocosity where sat her husband. But no infamous line was marked between her eyebrows now; she was radiantly pretty, and, except when she flashed one of her brief glances at him, she might have been thought the happiest woman in the room. Yet she principally consisted, all the while, of the hottest indignation. Since he had consented to come, why couldn't he behave decently? One thing is meaner, she thought, than generosity extended grudgingly, and that is generosity extended hatefully. But as a matter of fact, it wasn't even generous in him to come, because he wasn't really sick—he'd been able to go to his business and to run about on errands afterward—and he'd told her, himself, to accept the Corbitt's invitation, when she asked him about it last week. Henry was tired and his cold bothered him; she admitted so much; but since they had to come, why should he take his discomfort out on her? Trying to make everybody believe she dragged him around when he wasn't fit to be out! A fine way to care for a woman—to make her his whipping boy for a cold in the head!

It wasn't just this one time, either, she said to herself. Making people think she dragged him around was one of his old tricks, not a new one by any means? She had to be always on the defensive, always fighting against him for the good opinion of their friends and acquaintances. And who could tell how soon that shifty, treacherous thing, opinion, might veer to his side and she appear what he was striving to make her appear—a giddy creature, too cruelly slefish to care how far or how hard she dragged a sick and unhappy husband? This moping of his, she thought, was the most insidious form of attack a woman could well be called upon to face. And unmanly! "Unmanly" was the word most inthe undercurrent of her thoughts as she kept up her noisy and gesturing badinage with her portly host.

SHE knew that the kind of burlesquing into which Corbitt and she had fallen, with the rest of the table loudly conniving, was the kind most offensive to her husband. Even before the company had come into the dining room, she had exchanged mock endearments with the jocund Corbitt, whose heavy upper eyelids were lax awnings over a naughty old twinkle; and he proved heartily inclined to extend their joke to cover the evening. They were upon the point of running away—he had carried the merry fiction so far—and, with the aid of the company, particularly of Mrs. Corbitt, who shrieked that she was "well rid of the old rascal," they were discussing the luggage necessary for an elopement honeymoon in Cuba. Thereupon, with the addition of some Scotch whisky to his previous interior equipment of synthetic gin, Mr. Corbtt's gaieties inclined perilously in the direction of French farce. That is to say, his skates carried him toward thinner ice, where he was most willing to go and perform.

The general merriment, also reinforced from Glasgow, was by no means sobered by his excursions upon this tricky surface. The more daring were his caperings, the louder the whoopings that encouraged him; and Ella was at once his ready partner in the fancy skating he did and the most vivacious of his applauders. Shouting with laughter, she urged him on to worse and worse, herself adventuring with him and once or twice going even farther than he; for he saw how her husband glowered at her from the side of his eye, and it was this sidelong glowering that stimulated her to attempt extremes. She reached them, it may be said, and they were so relished by the other banqueters that the table became riotous. Mrs. Corbitt was delighted: this happy uproar made her dinner a memorable success; and there were tears still bubbling upon the host's fat eyelids when his most inspiring guest and her husband departed. He went to the door with them.

"You certainly are a thoroughbred, Ella!" he chuckled hoarsely, as the Beelsbys stepped out into an icy wind. "Don't forget you and I are absolutely dated up for that Havana trip as soon as my wife signs the release for me!"

"But I thought you were too eager to wait for that!" Ella called back over her shoulder; whereupon he gave her a final bellow of laughter, and closed the door upon the rosy light that glowed out from it into the stormy darkness. Then Ella climbed into the frozen little car, to find herself alone with her husband and midnight.

"Keep on!" he said to her, as the "starter" buzzed ineffectively. "Cut up some more. Shoot some more jokes about you and Corbitt on a Pullman. Keep on laughing. Don't stop just because I'm here!"

"You were in there, too," she said, shivering. "For heaven's sake, can't you get the car going? There's a cold wave struck the place since we left home; I'm freezing already."

She huddled herself in her cloak, but leaned away from him, not toward him, for greater warmth; and beat with her thin slippers upon the floor of the car. "It's got so bitter cold!" she complained. "The thermometer was dropping before we left home and I'm sure it's below zero now. I really am freezing, Henry. Hadn't you better get out and look under the hood?"

"I guess you can stand it a minute or two," he said, continuing the manipulation of the ineffective starter. "You're no colder than I've been all night, I guess. Why don't you go on being funny about your trip with Corbitt? It seemed to warm you up in there, so why can't you—"

"Why can't you hush up?" she interrupted. "Stop talking and see what's the matter with the darn car!"

"I don't wonder you're afraid to hear me talk," he said.

"'Afraid!'"

"Yes, afraid! Anyway, I should think a decent woman that talked the way you been talking in there tonight would be a little afraid of what her husband would say!"

"Oh, hush up! That starter sounds as if it's never going to work. For heaven's sake, get out and see if the radiator—"

"You want me to 'get out,' do you?" he said, with a little bark of laughter that made him cough. "I guess so!" And then, though all the while he kept the starter whirring its rhythmic harsh accompaniment to the quarrel, he turned upon her fiercely. "I just want to warn you, madam; and it'll be the only warning you'll get. You just ever try it again! Just once!"

"Try what again?"

"Acting the way you have tonight. You better understand I mean what I'm saying, too! I've stood about all I'm going to of your dragging me around when I ought to be in bed; but I'm not talking about that now. What

I won't stand is the raw jokes you were having with Corbitt. You just try one more line of vaudeville like the one tonight with that fat old fool and I will get out, and I'll 'get out' for good!"

"Do it now!" she said, wholly enraged. "Don't wait! Don't wait, because I'll go straight back in that house and begin it again if you do. Get out now and stay out!'

"You don't think I mean it?"

"All you mean is to freeze me to death," she said. "You're ready to bite iron because I had a perfectly innocent good time and made the rest have a good time, and you want to freeze me to death to pay me up for it! That's manly!"

"Ella," he said, "I will get out; I'll get out now, and I'll never—"

"I told you to, didn't I? Get out and stay out!"

"Now I swear I will!" he said desperately. "I swear I'll get out and I'll—" But at this moment the engine caught the impulse from the persistent starter and, beyond all its apparent potencies, sent forth a roar that shamed the mere howling of the blizzard wind. The small vehicle pulsated as with a giant's heart; then, chattering, it moved, and presently, as it progressed, became quieter; but its two occupants did not speak again.

ELLA huddled away from her husband, shivered, and ate her thoughts. He threatened to leave her because she had been the life of the party, did he? He had evidently forgotten his own jokes with that brass haired little widow they had met at a lakeside hotel where they went for the two weeks of his vacation last summer, jokes of a flavor identical with hers and Corbitt's. Henry had called her silly for mildly objecting to them, since they meant nothing; but now when she used the same material to whoop a dinner to success, he swore to leave her for it!

The wind, still rising, beat upon the car in such gusts as almost stopped it; the small interior was noisy with a wild whistling; but the wife and husband were silent throughout this bitter drive. To the wife's eyes the figure of her husband was but a formless concentration of darkness, except that his stoop above the wheel was sometimes dimly revealed, as they passed a street lamp; but in her thoughts of him he became a demoniac sculpture, black with all the horrible selfishness of men, for to her he epitomized it all, and was its incarnation. Men married beautiful young girls, girls with youth and charm enough to make any choice; and then when youth and charm were departing, used up, and the chances for a new choice pretty slim, men said: "Do thus and so or I'll get out!" And sometimes they got out! "Well, let him!" she thought desperately. "I could get some one else—I guess I could! Anyhow, whatever I'd be up against, I'd be through trying to make something out of him!"

Beelsby drove into the alley behind the colonial cottage, climbed rustily out, and opened the door of their tiny garage. Without speaking she shifted her seat and drove into the little shed; then they hurried into the house by way of the kitchen, and with physical relief found themselves once more warmly sheltered. Ella began to call the dog, but he failed to make his appearance.

"Where is he?" she asked.

Beelsby was again upon the fragile little stairway. "What?"

"Where's Shanty?"

"How do I know?"

"Didn't you let him out just before we started to the Corbitt's?" she asked.

"No, I didn't. You let him out yourself."

"I didn't do any such thing," she said angrily. "You let him out. Did you let him in again?"

"No. I didn't. I didn't let him in and I didn't let him out. You let him out!"

"I did not!"

"You did!"

"Oh, hush up!" she cried, and both of them were the fiercer for it. "If you've let that poor dog stay out in this zero blizzard all the five hours we've been gone just because you were too furious with me to let him in again after you—"

"Oh, you hush up!" he said brutally, in turn; but he came down the steps, went to the front door, and opening it, began to call against the wind: "Shanty! Hyuh, Shanty, Shanty!"

Then, as there was no response, Ella came shivering into the draft from the open door and added her soprano entreaty: "Hyuh, Shanty! Come, Shanty—good old Shanty! Hyuh, Shanty!"

But suddenly, as her glance lowered to the drift covered floor of the veranda, "Why, there he is!" she cried.

Shanty was lying upon his side, flattened, with snow blowing into his open mouth; and Ella hrieked as Beelsby carried the rigid body into the hall and set it down upon the hooked rug that had been her Christmas present to her husband.

"He isn't dead?" she wailed.

"That's just what he is," Beelsby said grimly; and though he had been fond of the dog he was glad, for a moment, to crush his wife with her fault. "You were so busy picking on me when we went out you never noticed you hadn't let him in again, and so he waited here five hours, and froze to death—while you were having a grand time with Corbitt!"

"Henry!" she cried, and now her startled eyes were streaming indeed. "I don't know which of us let him out—I just remember seeing him go out—and then we both forgot him—but it's I that killed him! I gave him that bath, and he was shivering when he came to me and tried to comfort me, here in the hall, and that was just a little while before we opened the door and let him out. We—"

"'We!'" Beelsby echoed fiercely. "'We!' I tell you I didn't—"

"Oh, what does it matter to Shanty?" she sobbed. "I killed him when I gave him that bath and didn't have sense enough to take a little care of him afterward! I did it! I did it!" She threw herself upon her knees and began to caress the wet and shaggy head of the little figure lying before her. "Oh, Shanty, dear, dearest!" she sobbed. "You were so kind to me! Who'll I have now to spend the long days with me when your master's in town and I'm all alone here? You were such a darling, patient companion! You loved me—you know you did, Shanty! And I let you die for it! I did! I did! I did—"

She sobbed on until she felt her husband's hand upon her shoulder. "Get up from there," he said harshly. "You're making a fool of yourself. You didn't hurt the dog! I don't remember any more than just seeing him go out, myself. We didn't either of us let him out. We just opened the door, and he went out. It's not your fault; it just happened; and that's all there is to it!'

"It is my fault!'

"It isn't," he said angrily. "It isn't!"

"It is!"

"Shut up!" he cried. "Quit talking like such a pinhead. It's no more your fault than it's the man in the moon's!" He choked, and his eyes were watery—not because of his cold. "You make me tired! The trouble with you is you're too soft hearted! Quit blaming yourself for everything!"

Weeping heartbrokenly she rose, put her arms about him and clung to him. "Oh, I do make such horrible mistakes," she sobbed.

"Well, I guess plenty of us do that," he said, trying to growl, but sniveling instead, as he looked down over her shoulder at the stiffened form on the hooked rug. "Probably Shanty didn't freeze to death anyhow. More'n likely he picked up a dog button or a piece of meat with arsenic in it, or something."

As it happened, though neither of them ever knew it, this was the correct diagnosis, and a veterinarian would have told them so. But their error was better for them than the truth; and Shanty's mistake had its singular value in their destiny, for it carried them over the climax of their anguishing adjustment to one another. They did not understand this, or even note it, either then or later; but with the passing of the little peacemaker came the passing of their worst quarrel. Never again did they hate each other quite as they hated each other that night.

said crisply. "If you'll wait, I'll ride over with you now."

"I'll wait, sure enough," he said.

She turned from him abruptly, hating him more and despising him less, stimulated by a new sense of adventure and a strange, warming consciousness of sacrifice and atonement. She was paying some measure of her debt, at least and at last; there would be difficulty, danger perhaps, in the course she was resolved to follow; there was immediately before the certainty that her action would be misconstrued by Miss Drummond and MacIvor. Somehow this pleased her; she would have no applause for what she did, and could not accuse herself of playing, so to speak, to the galleries. She reached her room without encountering Miss Drummond, and was glad of this; she wanted to defer her announcement until she was ready to leave, so that there would be no room for argument, no chance for explanations.

While she packed, swiftly and with method, she found her purpose steadily gaining in strength. Whatever mistakes she had to regret, she was making none in this. She was strangely sure that Sheppard Gail would keep to the letter of his word, that she had nothing to fear at his hand; there was even a remote and reluctant pride in the certainty that he wanted her respect and love more than he desired anything else, that, on the far chance of regaining what he had lost in that direction, he would forego his profit and his triumph at David MacIvor's expense.

She came downstairs with her traveling bag as David MacIvor entered from the gallery and, with his grave nod toward her, turned at once to speak to his aunt, who had stood at the window. Jane saw instantly that Miss Drummond had seen Sheppard Gail at the gate, that MacIvor was not aware of his presence. She was glad that she could make her announcement to them both; each, in some fashion, protected her against the other. She spoke quietly.

"I've decided that I must go back to—to my husband."

Mrs. Bennett says that all children born during July and August of this year are under good planetary aspect from the time of birth and will have great chance of securing success and renown. However, the name of Robert Arthur Bennett should lead them all, believers in astrology think, since his parents, with knowledge, wisdom and forethought, purposely brought him into the world at the height of these good aspects.

Perhaps in the years to come your children will speak with admiration of Robert Arthur Bennett. If so, you can proudly say: "I knew all about that young man. He was the wonderful astrological baby of 1924."

Penny Arcade to Millions

ny arcades there, but they were shabby,, dark, dirty and more or less disreputable, and he bought one for almost nothing. He broke the wall through for windows, invested liberally in pressed steel and white paint, took out the posts and put on a fecade that had a tempting look.

The money came pouring in at a rate that seemed almost incredible. In five months he had taken a quarter of a million dollars from his machines which collected only one cent at a time.

Loew later installed a moving picture show in his Cincinnati place, and it made a surprising success. Then he tried one in his arcade in 125th street, New York, with the same result. Then he began putting in store shows all over town, taking a room that was intended for a store and making it into a small moving picture theater, with a capacity of from 100 to 300 spectators. The man never did things by halves, and within a few months he had forty of these establishments. They paid him handsomely. He was fast becoming a rich man.

So it happened that when opportunity came to him for the second time, he had already earned a fortune that would content most men, but he plunged again and this time went deeper than ever.

One day a man came to David Warfield with a tale of woe such as you may hear from forty persons before breakfast any day along Broadway. He had been stranded in the wreck of a barnstorming company, came back somehow or other, struck town a week ago, and had a wife and four children, no job, no money, was down and out. Also he had seen every manager in New York and found as was to be expected, at the end of a slack season, that there was no hope of any work until fall.

Warfield rubbed his head a while and wrote a card of introduction to Loew, who had been his friend for years. Loew saw the actor, heard his story about his wife, children, joblessness and all. It was too much for Loew, who had handled hard luck stories himself, and he began to talk job.

There was no work at hand around the picture places, so since the man could neither sing, dance nor contort, it was decided to let him do a recitation in one of the picture palaces and bill him as an extra attraction. The actor proposed "Porphria's Lover" for a starter, and some little things from "Pippa Passes" as encores. Loew thought they ought to have something up-fo-date, so they compromised on "Gunga Din."

The audience did not go wild about "Gunga Din," but they did rather seem to cotton "Mandalay" when that was produced the second week. The man stayed for four weeks at one house and was then moved to another. When Loew saw there was an appreciable falling off of ticket sales, he used this, his first vaudeville act, to set it off. Today this same performer is a well-known star and names his own salary to the managers.

THIS was Loew's first entry into the field of his great success, that of motion pictures and vaudeville. The success of the first experiments in vaudeville encouraged him and, feeling his way as he went, he soon had many extra attractions in conjunction with his rapidly growing chain of motion picture houses. The success of his plan was almost immediate.

It was just that little touch of song and dance that kept his house full. Loew's interests soon demanded larger houses. His first real theater was the old Cozy Corner in Brooklyn at Pearl and Willoughby streets. The place had been run for years as a burlesque house of such a low type that it was finally closed by the police. With such a record nobody had wanted it and the house had stood vacant when Loew bought it, plunging almost to the limit of his credit to put the bargain through.

For years he had been fighting with other moving picture men to prove that cheap amusement need not be vicious or degrading to win success but the battle was not won and the old Cozy Corner with its evil associations looked like a hopeless handicap.

But Loew drove ahead with it. He spent hundreds for paint and carpenter work, toning up the appearance of the old theater, then he spent thousands in toning up its reputation. He hired Antonio Morio, the Italian tragedian, to appear there in repertory of Shakespearian and other classical plays of unquestioned birth, and he was tireless in dragging school teachers and other reputable citizens to the place to see his performances and praise the revival of dramatic art which he had restored to Brooklyn.

The name of the theater had changed, of course, and he washed out its reputation by four months of tragedy, but it was expensive laundry work. Morio and two companions supporting him, one playing in English and the other in Italian, and while salaries were not high, neither were the box office receipts. At a time when he needed every dollar, Loew lost $3,000 on his tragedy season, but he counted the money well spent. When he finally opened the house with pictures and vaudeville at 10c for every seat, the first large theater of its kind in America, his first day's receipts were 10c. Business picked up, however, and he netted a profit of something over $60,000 for his year in the house.

That gave him the cue for the development of a new amusement system and he began adding to his list of large theaters and selling off his small store shows. In 1908 he took over Blaney's Lincoln Square theater, which had failed and closed; then he took over the Old Harlem Casino, remodeled and fire proofed it, then opened it as another link to his growing chain.

Since then he has added theaters in every section of the country until now it is said that he buys theaters like bananas in bunches.

Some idea of what has evolved from the genuis of organization of Marcus Loew, erstwhile newsboy, furrier, and penny arcade owner, may be had from the fact that he now has more than 8,000 people on his payroll and controls theaters in almost every large city of the United States and Canada.

In New York alone more than 80,000 people are entertained each night in Loew theaters, and his receipts each day run into hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Marcus Loew, well named Pioneer of popular priced entertainment, is truly an example of what America has in the way of reward to those of perseverance and ambition.

The Key to the Traffic Question

long, tedious lines of motor vehicles which spend hours inching along toward and away from the urban centers.

The plan, built not for today but for all time, is applicable to any community secure in its destiny and confident that industry and commerce if released from the paralysis of traffic congestion, must increase. It is applicable to any community whatever that has learned the patent lesson that commerce and industry do increase along the line of ample traffic facilities. The super-highway does this, and it transforms the character of the metropolitan community and recreates many of those ideal living conditions which the piled-up city tended, perforce, to destroy.

The head of Detroit's rapid transit commission, Colonel Sidney D. Waldon, one of the foremost authorities on the subject in the world, is convinced that the super-highway is the practical and economical solution for city as well as country, and that the vital, supremely important factor is to obtain the necessary exclusive right of way without delay. Whatever the cost, it never can be cheaper than today, and must be more costly every year that it is postponed. The simple, economical movement of men and goods is the secret of the prosperity which itself produces the traffic congestion. You can't break the circle. The two subjects are one. Solution of the transportation problem presupposes the necessity, and the justification of the cost.

A new condition confronts modern civilization, a condition born of changing habits and new facts. The chief new fact is the motor vehicle, the only improvement in road transportation since Babylonian times, and its story has been witnessed, in its entirety, within a single generation! From Pharoah to Victoria the speed of travel was four miles an hour on the road and a working radius of action of 20 miles a day; today road transportation can average 40 miles an hour with a working radius of 200 miles a day. From Ramesee to William McKinley road transportation stood still.

The motor vehicle has become the symbol of necessity; the fruits of quickened and enlarged transportation are more than commensurate with the problem the motor vehicle has raised. We only dimly realize that the remote and rocky hills, far from railroads, that are now dotted with homes, villas and mansions, were barren and almost without value 25 years ago and today are carried on the tax rolls at substantial figures. But we do know that life is better worth the living. Man, himself of a roving, nomadic disposition, enjoys contact with his fellows as never before. He has burst the bonds that tied him to narrow localities. The nation has learned neighborliness.

The motor vehicle, pleasure and commercial, has become indispensable. It will continue to extend its usefulness so long as there are tasks left which it can perform better, more economically and more conveniently than any other existing means of locomotion. Traffic congestion and not the satisfying of public demand will set the limit to motor car use.

Reviewing the cities of this country it is apparent that neither imagination nor courage has been lacking. Conditions have outrun the plans of man, and a generation has sufficed to demonstrate that the past is inadequate for the present and threatens certain strangulation of the future. Detroit believes this; Detroit's neighbors believe it; and, believing, they have together set out soberly towards what seems a gigantic undertaking, convinced it is practical, economical and inevitable.

To that end the first step, securing the right of way for 217 miles of super-highways, has begun. Tomorrow the land will cost more. The first of the super-highways already are taking shape.

Detroit presents the super-highway for the consideration of the world, as the solution of the traffic problem and the salvation of American cities.

NO. 9—YOU NEVER MISS THE WATER TILL THE WELL RUNS DRY

A youngish frog once used to dwell
At the bottom of a deep, wet well
Which one day he made wetter stil'
By crying with a right good will,
And to curious Miss Jenny Wren,
Who happened to fly by just then,
He said, "I guess that you'd cry too
If you had to croak the way I do,
And if you'd lost your voice as soon
As you had learned to keep in tune.
If a well was dry like an apple tree
Think of the singer I could be!"
But Jenny said she didn't know,
She thought he had small cause for woe,
And with this bit of consolation
She left him to his lamentation.
From that time on no drop of rain
Fell into the well again
So it was very dry, of course,
But Mr. Frog was no less hoarse,
And as for singing—well, they say
He couldn't even croak one day.
And "Water wasn't missed," they said,
"Until the foolish frog was dead."

A REAL MONSTER OF THE DEEP

In the great seas of those dim ages when the world was young there were many strange and terrible looking fish. None of these monsters exists today, but we know about them, because their skeletons have been found buried in rock, for in many places where towns stand today the ground was the bottom of the sea, millions of years ago. When the seas began to disappear the mud at the bottom hardened into rock. In this rock the skeletons of some of the queer fishes that lived in those seas were also buried and hardened in the rock.

Among the fiercest of these strange fish was the fish-lizard, who was a ruler of the seas. He ruled by might, for he was a wonderfully fast swimmer and his great size and enormous mouth enabled him to capture the smaller fishes easily. He had two pairs of paddles and a big, broad tail which made him able to rush through the water with dizzying speed.

Had Large Eyes

Even his own mother couldn't have called the fish-lizard handsome. He had big, round eyes that seemed to pop out of his head. He had a huge jaw that might be armed with as many as two hundred and forty teeth, every one of which was sharp and ready for use. His whole head was so long that if you laid down full-length you wouldn't quite reach from his neck to the end of his jaw.

Not all the members of the fish-lizard family were so large. Some of them, the scientists who have studied these fishes tell us, were little fishes, about five feet long. We'd hardly call that a small fish if we went fishing, would we?

Had Powerful Enemy

The fish-lizard didn't have things all his own way, however, for he had a powerful enemy, the pleiosaur, who had a thick body and a short tail. He had a long, snake-like neck which he could stretch up out of the water when he was swimming. This gave him an advantage over the short-necked fish-lizard. But the fish-lizard had his powerful teeth, so when the two met there was a battle royal that would churn up those great seas as though they had been struck with a hurricane. How easily one of these animals could have wrecked a boat. If there had been sailors in those days they would have had some foundation for their tales of "sea serpents."

(Next week we'll learn about the ancient birds.)

TRY OUT SOME NEW SCHOOL YELLS

What's your school yell? Have you a regular, red-blooded yell that fairly yells itself? Having a good school yell means half the spirit when it comes to winning a football game.

If you're looking for a new one to try out the rest of the football season, or to start basketball off with a bang, maybe you can get some ideas from these yells, taken from different schools all over the country.

"Say, that's quite a good-looking car you have there. What's the most you ever get out of it?"

"Six times in one mile."

JEANETTE'S WARM SLEIGHRIDE

"I never went for a bobsled ride before," exclaimed Jeanette. "I think it's going to be a lot of fun."

"I haven't ridden in the bob for a long time," admitted her cousin Robin. "The roads are so good now that we use the automobile most of the time. But I thought it would be a treat for you, since you're spending the week-end in the country, to go for an old-fashioned sleighride. I'm afraid, though, you're not going to find it at all exciting. Old Gray isn't much of a horse."

He tucked Jeanette up warmly and they set forth, with a lively jingle of bells. They travelled smoothly along the road leading into the little town of Somerset. Just as they reached town, they heard the fire alarm. Old Gray pricked up his ears and increased his speed. Then around the corner and down the street ahead of them tore the fire engine.

As though a sudden charge of dynamite had been set off under him, Old Gray gave a leap and started racing after the engine. Jeanette gave a cry, "Oh, he's running away!" and grabbed her cousin.

Robin seemed to be convulsed with laughter. "Hold tight," he shouted at her. "Nothing to get excited about. I forgot that Dad bought Old Gray from the fire department when they got that truck."

Away galloped the horse and sleigh. The fire truck steered a straight course ahead of them and finally stopped at the end of the long street. The firemen were hardly out and had their hose attached before Old Gray and his load drew up beside them. "Well," laughed one of the firemen, recognizing the horse, "so Old Gray has joined the fire department again. Looks like we might need an extra pair of hands, young fellow. A neighbor turned in the alarm. The family isn't home, and the roof of the house is pretty much afire."

Robin and Jeanette hopped out of the sleigh and followed the firemen into the house. They promptly set to work carrying things down from the upper floor, as it was feared the fire might spread. They worked fast, Robin dragging down heavier things, while the firemen tore at the roof and plied their hose, and Jeanette tearing down curtains and some of the lovely things she knew a housewife would hate to see ruined by smoke and water.

The fire continued to spread, and by this time a crowd had gathered. Robin went down and kept them back, as they were ruining the yard, while the firemen continued their efforts to get the fire under control.

At last the stubborn fire was conquered and the firemen started putting up their hose. In the midst of their preparations for leaving, up drove the family who owned the house. They had been informed of the fire as they entered town and arrived in great excitement. "Well, I'm glad it wasn't worse," sighed the lady of the house. "I'm certainly thankful that my things were carried down. It would have just killed me to have those hangings and little rugs and everything ruined."

"You can thank these kids for that," said one of the firemen, as they started away. "They added themselves to the fire department and carried things downstairs."

"Won't you come back in?" invited the owner of the house. "We'd like you to have supper with us." So Jeanette and Robin went in, cleaned up, and had a big meal which just suited them, after all thier rushing around.

"Who said," gigled Jeanette, as they headed Old Gray for home in the twilight, "that a sleighride isn't exciting? And it's warm sport, as well!"

Checking Up

Little James had to go to church for the first time.

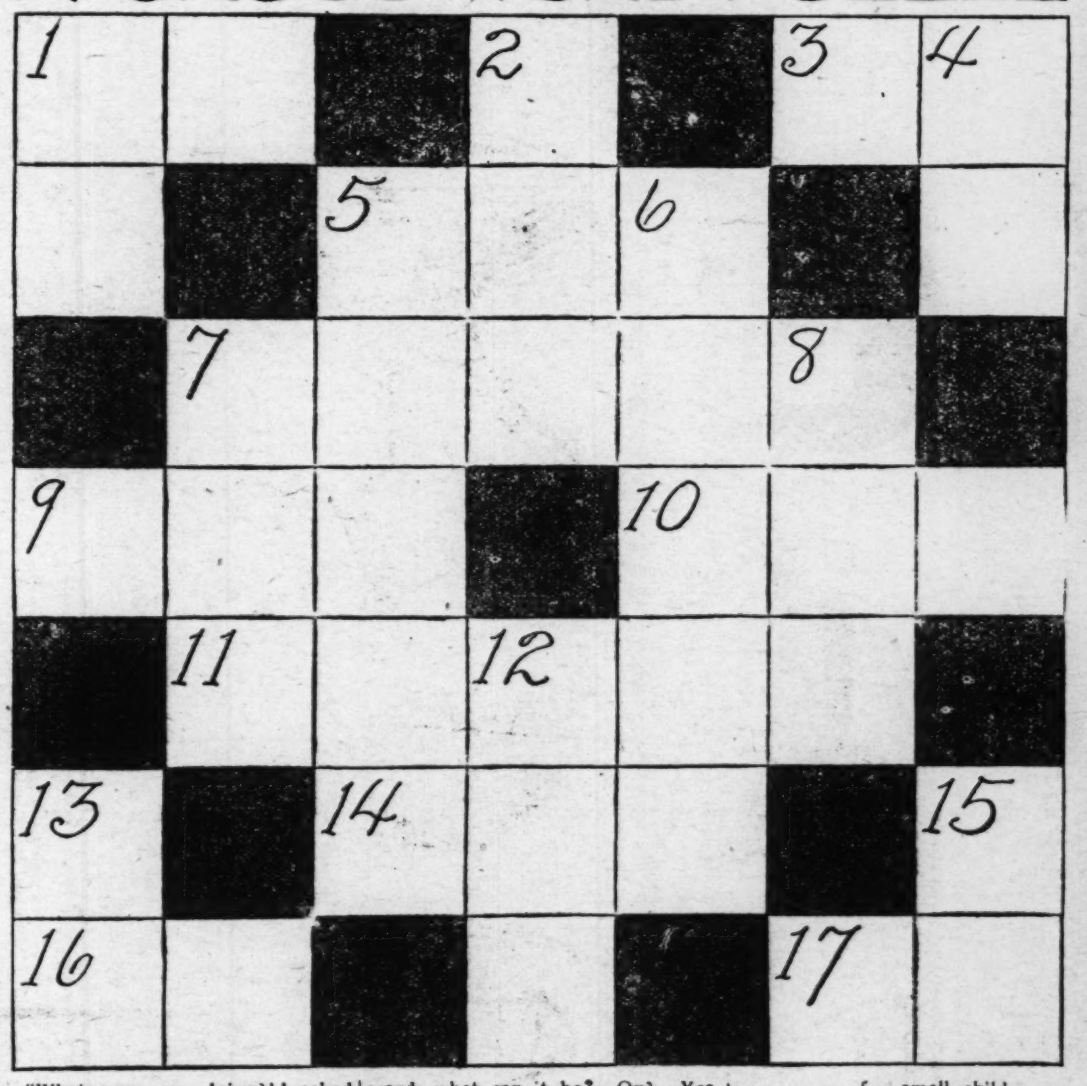

"And how did you like the service?" asked his father.

"Fine, let's go again next Sunday."

"Which part did you like the best?"

"Oh, when the man came around with the plate of money. I got a dime. How much did you get?"

A CROSS WORD PUZZLE

"What are you doing?'' asked June, as she found Charles absorbed in the above puzzle. "It looks like a linoleum pattern."

"This is a cross-word puzzle," Charles replied, "and I'm trying to guess the words. Each white square means a letter of a word, and each black one means the end of a word."

"What are the numbers for?"

"A number signifies the beginning of a word either horizontally, which means straight across, or vertically, which means straight down, or both. The definition of each word is given, and you are to write down a word that will fit into the spaces allowed. Then, if these letters check in figuring out the other words, you know your puzzle is correct. For example, Number One Horizontal means an animal. As there are only two spaces for the word, what can it be? Ox? Yes, and you know that it is correct because Number One Vertical means 'upon,' and that, having ony two spaces, could be nothing but 'on,' which also begins with 'o.' In this way they check. Isn't that easy?"

"It certainly is," cried June, enthusiastically. "That must be an awful lot of fun. Let's try the next one—Number Two Vertical. It means a feather scarf. What is it that has three letters and is a feather scarf?"

What is it? Suppose you try to figure it out. Below is given a line of horizontal and vertical definitions with which to solve your puzzle, and when you have it completed you will be able to check it horizontally and vertically.

Horizontal

1. animal
3. pronuon
5. small child
7. a vital organ
9. a falsehood
10. atmosphere
11. a narrow piece
14. chicken
16. negative
17. male

Vertical

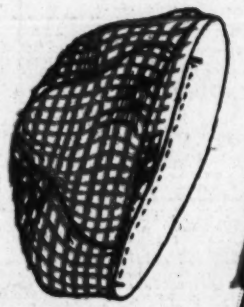

1. upon
2. feather scarf
4. preposition
5. digestive organ
6. means of transportation
7. possessive pronoun
8. tilt
12. bright color
13. within
15. exist

Elsewhere on this page you will find the correct words for this puzzle, but do not look for them until you have tried for a long time to work out this fascinating problem.

IN SNOPPYQUOP LAND — WHERE NOTHING SEEMS QUEER

"This is the forest primeval, the murmuring pines, and the snoppyquop." Only the pines look more like bamboos, and there are two snoppies instead of one. The lady on the toadstool (or is it a mushroom?—or a mush stool?—or a toadroom?) is Slangy Sarah, the bathing beauty. The little gent with the butterfly net is Nonsensical Nobnob, the censor. To go on with the opening poem, "Brown as a nut is his face, bearded with moss, indistinct in the twilight." Being a bathing beauty, Sarah uses a lot of slang. Being a censor, Nobnob tried to put a stop to it. His body is a bottle of bluing.

Slangy Sarah is full of pep, wim, wigor, and winegar. As she swings her dainty little feet, a steady flow of the loviest slang words a snoppyquop beauty ever uttered comes from her pretty mouth.

"Stop—stop—stop," yells Blue Law Nobnob. "Do you stutter?" asked Sarah. "Oh, I see—talking through that bale of hay is sure to produce static." "What—minx—make fun of my blue beard? As soon as I catch the rest of these slang words I will attend to you!" But just then the word "dumbbell" got caught in Nobnob's net, and the weight of it broke the whole business, and it fell on the censor's dome, reversing his makeup, character and even his name. As he was now "Bonbon" instead of "Nobnob." Sarah had no trouble in eating him up.

A FEW PUZZLE BLANKS TO FILL IN

Get your pencil and see how many of the following blanks you can fill in. Follow the directions carefully as indicated.

1. "'——— the hills we will ——— night and day,' said one of the gypsies to another." Fill the first blank with a word of four letters. Fill the second blank with the same letters, rearranged to make a different word.

2. "——— rabbits are often raised for ———." Fill the second blank with the same four letters used in the first blank, rearranged to form another word. Do the same with his sentence: "Alice made a trip ———, where she attended many ———."

3. Along the ——— he rode a ——— that bright autumn afternoon." Use the same five letters to form words to fill these two blanks.

4. Fill the blanks of this sentence with the same letter:

"R—sc—e p—led the b—at —ver t—b—st—n."

5. In this little four-line poem fill the two blanks with two words formed from the same four letters:

"Said Jimmy Jones,
'I do not ———;
In fact, I'll ———
You anywhere.'"

6. — — — — —. Here are five blanks. In the last three blanks place a word meaning devoured. Then add a letter in the blank in front of it and have a word meaning tardy. Then put a letter in the remaining blank, which is the first one, and have a word meaning something to write upon.

7. "The bullet grazed the———, tearing off some of his hair as it sped, and thus exposing the ——— skin.' Fill each blank with the same four letters, in each case arranged to make a different word.

The answers to these will be found just below. Don't look for the answers, though, until you've filled every blank. Of course, you can do it—unless your mind's a blank.

Collected Laughs From the Classrooms

Knew His Bible

Teacher: "When was baseball first mentioned in the Bible?"

Johnny: "When Rebecca walked to the well with the pitcher."

Correct?

Teacher: "Describe the manners and customs of the people of India."

Pupil: "They hain't got no manners and they don't wear no customs."

Educated

Kriss: "I see Gray graduated from college with very high honors."

Kross: "Indeed he did. He has so many letters after his name that his card looks as if he were advertising broadcasting stations."

True Enough

Teacher: "Alice, why do you spell 'bank' with such a big B?"

Alice: "'Cause pap said a bank was no good unless it had a large capital."

He Knew

Teacher (to John): "What comes in like a lion and goes out like a lamb?"

Johnnie: "The landlord when father pays the rent."

Telling Him

Play coach: "I told you to bring a song book to rehearsal."

Student: "Oh, I don't need it; I use my head."

Coach: "I didn't say to bring a blank book!"

"These are the little things that count," said the salesman as he demonstrated the adding machine.

A FREAK TRAIN THAT RUNS RIGHT UP A MOUNTAIN

Up in the White Mountains of New Hampshire there's a freak railway that runs on cogs. It was built by Sylvester Marsh, who was born in that region, but later became a Chicago business man. One summer vacation he went back to New Hampshire with a friend and went to the White Mountains of that state.

Marsh and his friend started to ascend Mt. Washington, loftiest of the north-eastern peaks. Night came on and a storm overtook the two climbers. They lost their way, but finally came to the top of the mountain by crawling on their hands and having a great deal of luck.

Invented The Railway

Because of this experience, Sylvester Marsh conceived the idea of building a railroad up the steep mountain, so that others might not have to go through the same disderness. The first quarter of a mile of track was built in 1866 and showed the scheme to be practical. The road was completed in 1869.

All the supplies, except lumber and water, which were plentiful, had to be dragged miles through a wilcomforts he had met. To carry out this idea, he invented an engine, a cog rail and an atmospheric brake and secured a charter to build his railroad. He devoted his entire time to this railroad, moving to Littleton, N. H., so he could supervise the work.

Road Is Unique

The three rail cog road is unique. The engines do not draw trains: the trains on this road consist of one car and are pushed up the mountain ahead of the engine. In coming down, the engine backs down ahead of the car, working against compression. The same speed is maintained both going up and coming down.

This railroad is the oldest of its kind in the world and has the steepest grade of any similar railroad. The grade is so steep that in order to keep the water in the boilers in a position to make steam, the boilers are set at a sharp angle, very low in front

Use Cog-Wheels

The third rail is not a rail at all, but a trough containing heavy cog-wheel meshes. The engine generates power to move a cog-wheel which meshes into the third rail in order to go forward. The wheels of these strange engines do no driving work—they merely support weight.

On the trestle called Jacob's Ladder the grade is 1,980 feet to the mile. The road runs only during the summer months, as it cannot operate when snow and ice get into the cog-wheel meshes of the third rail.

Employees Built Sled

A few years ago the employees of the road who were up on the mountain top looking after the property used to come down the tracks on a sled they constructed and clamped on the rails. The trip down on this sled took between six and eight minutes, an average speed of sixty miles an hour.

The regular trains take one hour and forty-five minutes to make the trip one way.

Arab Pearl Divers

Among the Arabian pearl divers there is a superstition that pearls come from a raindrop which fell while the oyster had its mouth open, and each drop of rain thus caught is a prize for the diver.

The outfit of an Arabian diver differs from that of the American, chiefly in the fact that it is so much less elaborate. The complete outfit consists of white overalls to cover the dark skin, as the divers believe sharks avoid white people; a clothes-pin for the nose, leather thimbles for scratching the shells' a basket to hold the shells caught, and a rope attached to a girdle to draw the diver up—that is all.

Div · Faces Danger

The diver is in constant danger when bringing the pearls from the bottom of the ocean to the surface. Most c all, he fears the shark, as during the pearl season a number of divers lose their lives, or are permanently injured by this powerful animal. Then, the water, in time, will make him subject to rheumatism.

When the diver goes down for pearls, he quickly fills the basket, tugs on the rope, and is pulled up. While his basket is emptied, he takes a short breathing spell, and then goes down again; and so on all day.

Open Pearl Oysters

When the pearl oysters are brought up, they are left on deck over night, and next morning are opened by means of a curved knife six inches long. Until a few years ago all the shells were thrown back into the sea as useless, but now they are brought to shore by the ton and deposited in some merchant's yard. The natives scrape off the outside roughness, pack the shells in wooden crates and export them.

When the pearls are brought to shore they are classified according to weight, size, shape, color and texture. In sizing them, the merchant uses a number of beautiful sieves which fit into each other. The smallest has holes as big as the end of a pencil, while the largest sieve, which is about six inches across, has holes as fine as mustard seeds.

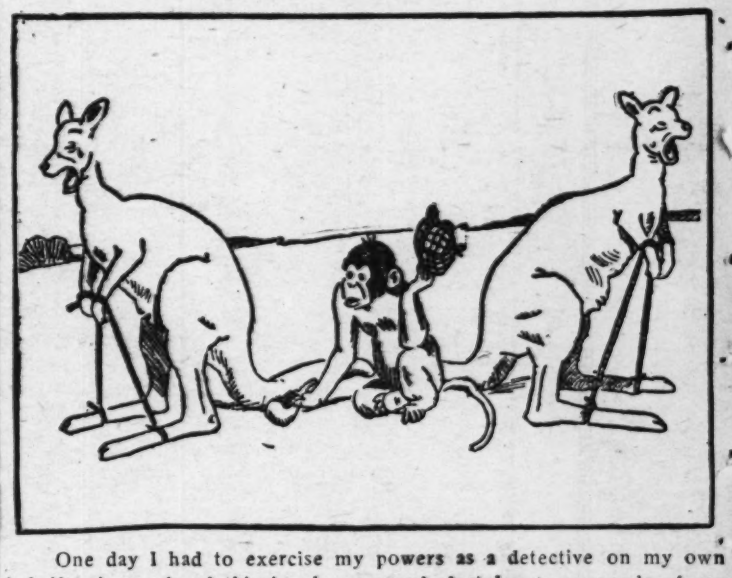

Merchants Carry Valuables

During the pearl season the Arab merchants sit cross-legged in their houses, sifting pearls, and arranging them into little piles.

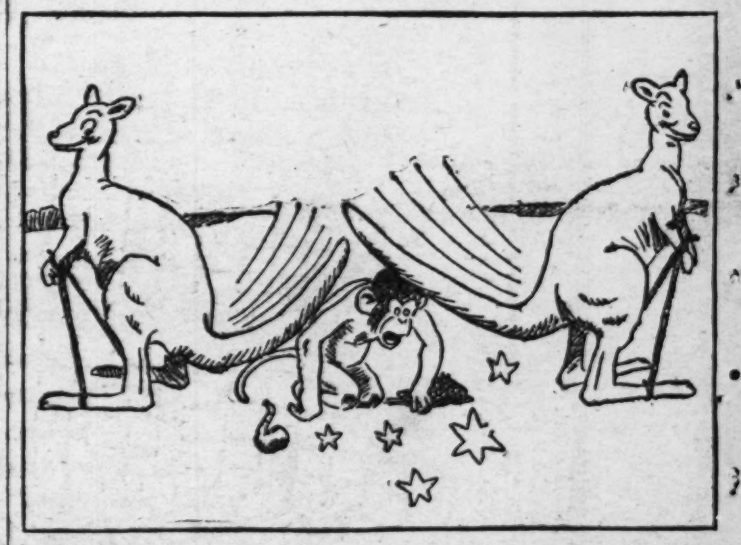

These merchants are indeed a queer kind of people. They carry the most valuable pearls around with them everywhere, tied up in turkey-red twill, unmindful of the danger attached. They have no safes nor banks, and to them it seems less dangerous to carry their valuables around with them and run the risk of being attacked and robbed. Such robberies, however, are very rare.

THE DETECTIVE OF JUNGLELAND

BY. MR. MONK

One day I had to exercise my powers as a detective on my own behalf. A couple of thieving kangaroos had stolen two pounds of my favorite tobacco and carried it away in their pouches. I thought it very saucy to steal from a detective—of all people! But I soon found the kangaroos, and as they were fast asleep, I tied them up well with cords. Tying them up soon awakened them and they began to howl. It was hot work, and I was just fanning myself with my cap, when I suddenly remembered something—but it was too late! I had forgotten how handy kangaroos are with their tails, and before I could make good my mistake, I felt several hard knocks on my head and saw stars. I remember one star in particular—it had six points on it, one for every knock the kangaroos gave me. Then I felt dizzy, and I was just singing to myself, "Twinkle, twinkle, little star" when everything went black and I knew no more until I woke up in the police station, without the faintest idea how I got there!

(Watch for more of Mr. Monk's adventures soon to appear on the Boys' and Girls' Page.)

LITTLE CHESTER GUMP

WILL BE

COMING HOME SOON

and then the pretty presents that he has selected for The Constitution to give his little friends who read about him in this newspaper will be sent out. Chester has received thousands of letters from boys and girls in Atlanta, over the state and in all the places where The Atlanta Constitution goes, and to the best writers will go the presents that The Atlanta Constitution will give in the name of this popular little boy of the colored comic section.

It Is Not too Late to Write

If you haven't sent a letter to Little Chester yet, sit right down and write him one, just like you were writing to a friend who had gone off on a long trip. Address your letter to Chester Gump, in care of The Constitution, and maybe you will win one of the splendid presents to be given just before Christmas.

The Presents Will Surprise You

The Constitution cannot tell you yet what the presents will be for it wants to surprise you, but it will tell you that they will be real fine presents, things that most boys and girls like, and presents that will last a long time.

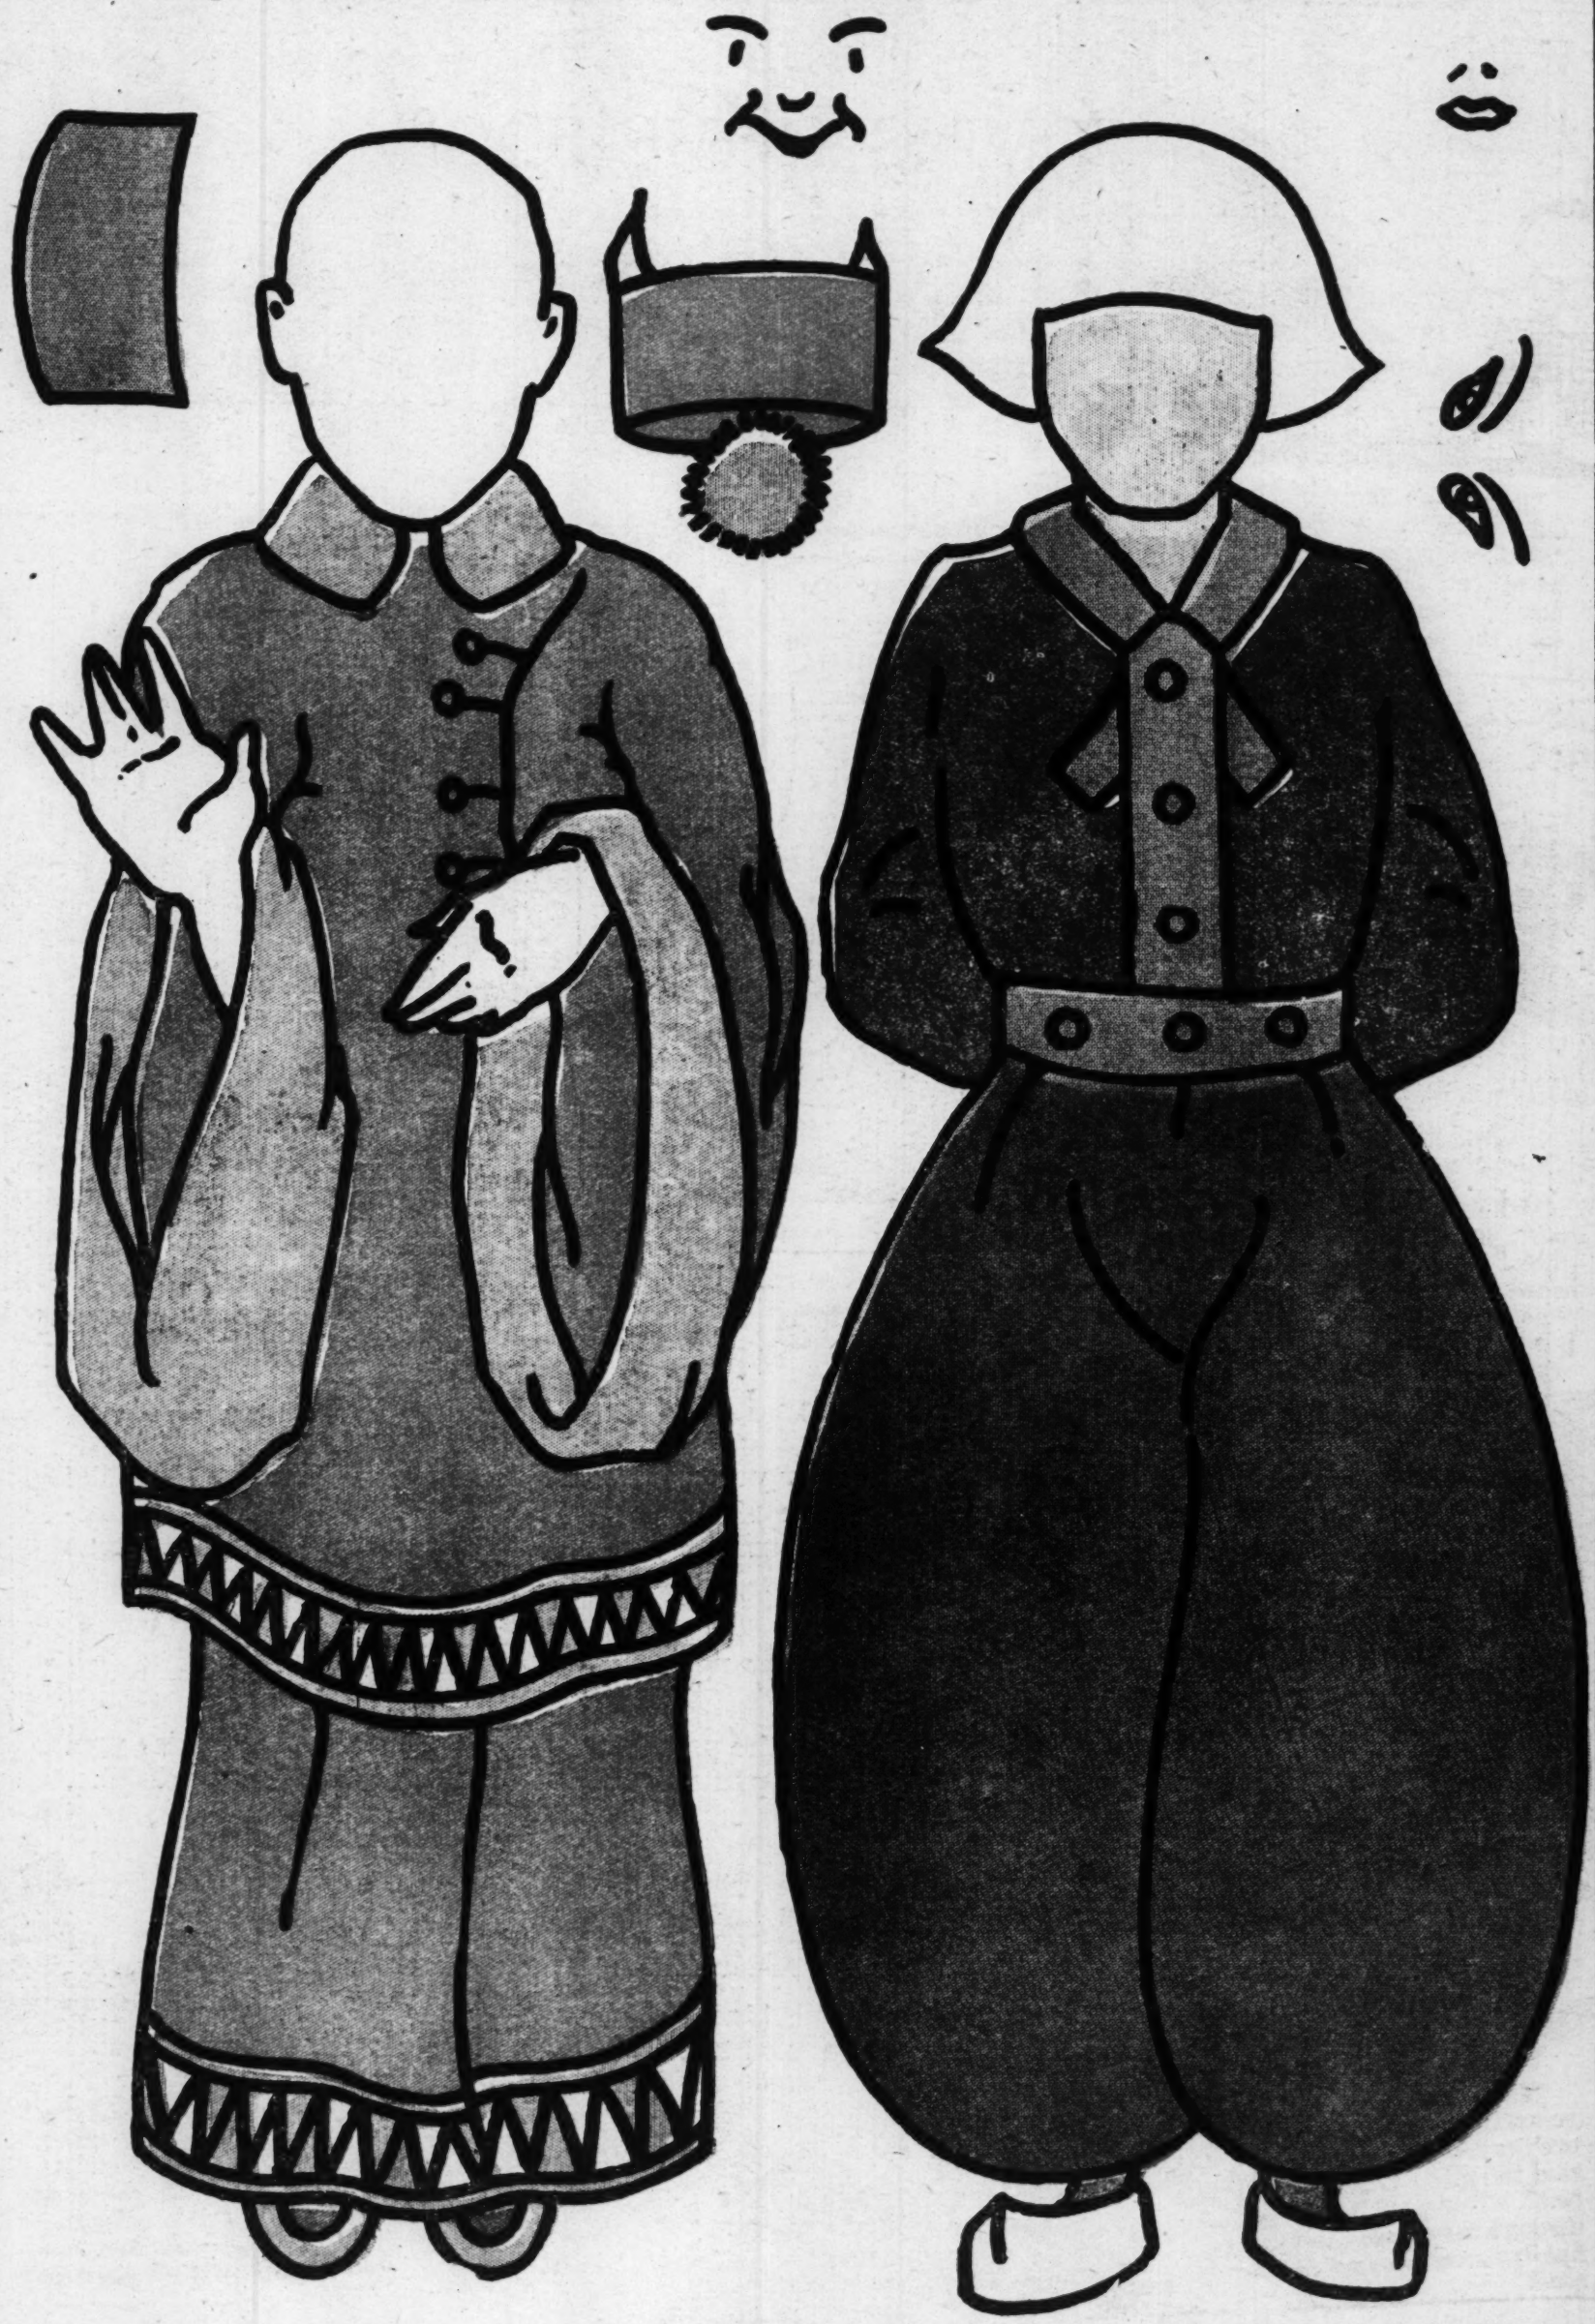

Watch for Chester in the Colored Supplement

Every Sunday you will see something new about this popular little boy, and right now, as you know, he is having a great time with his Uncle Bim down in Australia. Don't you think it fun to write to him? Send him a letter and tell him how much you would like to be with him on his long vacation.

Write Him a Letter Today

No Eyes, No Nose, No Mouth! Can You Supply Them?

This Chinaman and the little Dutch boy are in a bad way unless somebody can give them their missing features. Can you pick out the right ones and put them in place?

NONSENS!

"Come, brother, let's go out," said a little girl. "Shall we take a trolley?" he asked. "Oh, no, it's too heavy," she answered, letting the words fall slowly.

The sun was smiling as the two left the house, but before they had gone a mile it began to rain pitchforks. "See the boardwalk!" cried the boy, "we can hide under that." So they hid for a while, and just as the rain stopped they heard something.

"Did you hear music roll?" asked the boy. "I think," said the girl, "I heard an organ peal." "Peel what?" asked the boy. But something else had caught the girl's ear.

She rose and walked on, her head in the clouds. Suddenly she lost her balance. "Don't cry," said her brother, "I'll find it for you." "I've got it now," she told him, and so he changed his mind.

But he had fastened his eyes on a rose-bush, and he couldn't tear his gaze away. "Brother!" cried the girl, "we are losing time." That brought him to himself, and he hurried after her. "Did you ever see a horse fly?" he asked, as they went along. "A horse can't," said she. "But a tomato can. And just look at the butter fly!"

"The night will fall soon," remarked the boy, "and we are far from home." "Well," said the girl, "I can make a bed." The path led them through the woods, and they finally came to a fork in the road.

There they lay down and dropped off into dreams. They slept sweetly for hours and at last the girl awoke.

"What was that?" she called, shaking her brother till his teeth rattled. "I think you heard the day break," he replied. Finding that this was true, they rose and continued their journey.

LIKE THE DAYS OF '48
is this scene in Smackover, Ark., where the mud is so deep and gummy that oxen are still in favor as a means of transportation.

BEAUTIFUL
is the spot in New Iberia, La., where Evangeline is supposed to have landed in the hunt for her lover. Longfellow's scenes were laid mostly in this section. The photo was made during a play depicting Evangeline's life.

Slenderness will make you more attractive-

Are you worried because you are overweight? Afraid you are losing your charm, your youthful figure?

Stout women are at a disadvantage. Pretty clothes no longer fit them, their movements are awkward, their attractiveness deserts them. Friends are sympathetic.

But many of these friends have a secret method of keeping slender! They use Marmola Tablets (thousands of men and women each year regain slender figures this way). These tablets will make you slender again, too. Try them. No exercises or diets—just a pleasant, healthful way of becoming slender.

All drug stores have them—one dollar a box. Or they will be sent in plain wrapper, postpaid by the Marmola Co., 1700 General Motors Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

The
—and Her Complexion Still Looks Fresh!

When you go for hours without taking time to powder, the natural loveliness of your complexion is put to the supreme test. Unless your skin has been skilfully cared for the greasy, dust-clogged pores and tiny blemishes will be revealed. That inevitable shine will appear on your nose.

Make this test today!

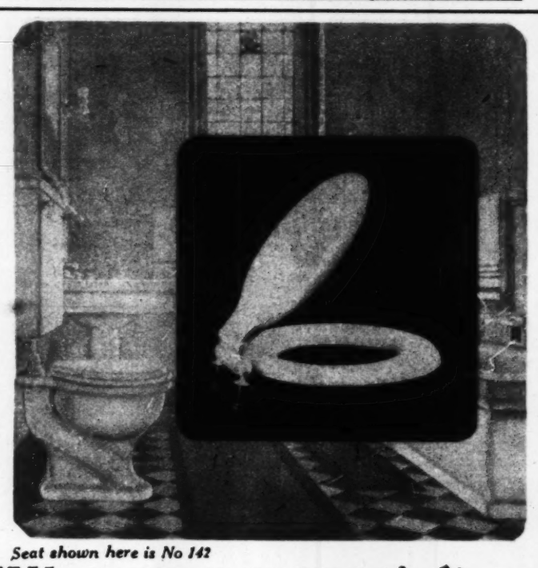

Enjoy a Crystal Bath Alcohol massage and you need not dread the embarrassment of unpowdered moments.

It thoroughly cleanses the pores of the day's accumulated impurities. It refreshes the skin and invigorates the hidden net work of relaxed muscles that control the youthful shapeliness of your face and neck. It induces the circulation of blood that is so essential to a rose-tinted complexion. It reduces enlarged pores and it keeps you always looking your best.

CRYSTAL BATH IS DIFFERENT
Some alcohols are denatured with chemicals that are positively injurious to the skin.
Prevents Enlarged Pores
Crystal Bath is different! It contains 95% grain alcohol and among other healthful ingredients one best known to science for cleansing, refreshing and beautifying the skin.

In addition to beautifying the skin, Crystal Bath removes even the slightest hint of perspiration odors.

What are guests' first impressions of your home?

IT USUALLY happens that guests have a chance to inspect your bathroom before they more than glance at any other room. In the bathroom they form their first impressions of your home. And those impressions are apt to last and to influence what they think of other rooms in the house, as well.

To improve the appearance of your bathroom, begin with the toilet seat. This is the least expensive improvement, but it makes the greatest difference in the appearance of the room. Old style wood, painted or sprayed seats absorb moisture, hold odors, and in time crack and splinter. They become a detriment to the whole home—they are unhealthy.

Adds new beauty and safety

Think of a seat that is white, permanently white, and which cannot become contaminated! That is the Church Seat. Its ivory-like sheathing (not a paint nor an enamel) will not absorb moisture, retain dirt or odors, crack or splinter. It is as easily cleaned as porcelain and lasts a lifetime. Such a seat makes a surprising difference in your bathroom.

Fits any bowl—Simple and easy to put on

No trouble at all to attach a Church Seat. You can remove the old one and put on a permanently white Church Seat yourself with an ordinary pair of pliers—or your plumber will be glad to make the installation at a small expense.

Ready to take home in handy cartons

Whether you rent a house, apartment, or own your own home, your toilet seat should be your personal property just like other bathroom fixtures. Church Seats are on display at most plumbers and at all plumbing jobbers' showrooms. Any plumber can supply you.

That you may see for yourself the new beauty and safety which this seat represents, mail the coupon. Do this now.

CHESTER HAS RECEIVED LOADS OF LETTERS BUT HE IS STILL WAITING TO HEAR FROM Y-O-U- HE HAS THREE DANDY PRESENTS THAT HE IS GOING TO GIVE TO THE THREE LITTLE GIRLS OR BOYS WHO WRITE HIM THE BEST LETTERS- ADDRESS CHESTER GUMP- % THIS PAPER-

OH GEE- THIS IS MRS. ZANDER'S PICTURE- GOLLY, I'D LIKE TO SEE HER- SHE ALWAYS TREATED ME SO NICE- WHEN I WENT TO HER HOUSE SHE USED TO GIVE ME THE NICEST DOUGHNUTS- GEE, SHE WAS A NICE WOMAN-

YES INDEED, CHESTER- THERE ARE NOT MANY JEWELS OF WOMANHOOD IN THE WORLD LIKE HER- I SUPPOSE IT'S A LONG TIME SINCE YOU'VE SEEN HER-

OH NO, UNCLE BIM- THE DAY I WAS LEAVING FOR AUSTRALIA SHE SAID SHE WISHED SHE WAS GOING TO MAKE A TRIP TO THAT WONDERFUL COUNTRY- SHE THINKS AUSTRALIA IS THE NICEST PLACE IN THE WHOLE WORLD-

I WISH SHE WAS HERE NOW- I'LL BET SHE'D LIKE TO LIVE IN THIS NICE BEAUTIFUL CASTLE, UNCLE BIM-

I'M AFRAID NOT, CHESTER- IT WOULDN'T BE LIVELY ENOUGH HERE- NO, I'M JUST A LONESOME OLD BACHELOR- I DON'T THINK SHE'D CARE FOR MY COMPANY- SHE'D PREFER A YOUNG MAN WHO COULD DANCE AND IS MORE UP-TO-DATE THAN I AM-

OH, NO SHE DOESN'T- MRS. ZANDER SAID SHE DOESN'T CARE MUCH FOR THE YOUNG MEN OF TODAY-

I'M SURPRISED AT THAT, CHESTER- HOW DO YOU KNOW? DID MRS. ZANDER TELL YOU?

NO, SHE DIDN'T TELL ME, BUT I WAS AT A PICTURE SHOW WITH MAMA AND MRS. ZANDER AND MAMA SAID SHE THOUGHT RUDOLPH VALENTINO WAS VERY ATTRACTIVE AND MRS. ZANDER SAID VALENTINO WAS ALL RIGHT BUT SHE LIKED A MAN WHO WAS MORE MATURED- MORE DIGNIFIED- A MAN WHO HAD REALLY ACCOMPLISHED SOMETHING GREAT IN THE WORLD- A MAN A WOMAN COULD LOVE AS WELL AS RESPECT-

I WONDER WHO SHE COULD MEAN-DO YOU THINK SHE COULD MEAN THAT FELLOW CARLOS THAT IT WAS RUMORED SHE WAS ENGAGED TO-

OH NO- I HEARD HER TELL MY MAMA THAT CARLOS WAS ONLY AN UNPLEASANT MEMORY-

BUT I SUPPOSE SHE HAS HUNDREDS OF OTHER ADMIRERS- A BEAUTIFUL CREATURE LIKE SHE IS WITH ALL HER WOMANLY QUALITIES IS A MAGNET FOR EVERY HEART-

I HEARD MY MOTHER TELL PAPA THERE WAS ONLY ONE GREAT LOVE IN MRS ZANDER'S LIFE-

I WONDER WHO COULD HAVE BEEN THE LUCKY MAN HONORED WITH SUCH A PRICELESS GIFT- I DON'T SUPPOSE SHE EVER SPARES A THOUGHT FOR ME-

GOSH- I GUESS SHE THINKS OF YOU A LOT- SHE HAS YOUR PICTURE ON HER BUREAU-

ARE YOU SURE OF THIS? ARE YOU PERFECTLY SURE THAT MRS. ZANDER HAS MY PICTURE ON HER BUREAU?

SURE I'M SURE- IT HAS A PRETTY GOLD FRAME AROUND IT AND IT'S THE ONLY PICTURE ON THE BUREAU AND SHE DUSTS IT OFF EVERY DAY WITH A NICE PIECE OF RED SILK- SHE WON'T LET ME PLAY NEAR THE BUREAU FOR FEAR I'LL BREAK IT-

AND TO THINK I THOUGHT SHE HAD FORGOTTEN ME-

SHE DON'T FORGET YOU- EVERY TIME SHE COMES TO OUR HOUSE THE FIRST THING SHE DOES IS ASK MY PAPA AND MAMA IF THEY'VE HEARD FROM YOU AND HOW YOU ARE AND EVERYTHING-

AH, MY LITTLE MAN, CHESTER- YOU'RE A BRICK- IF SANTA CLAUS DOESN'T TREAT YOU WELL NEXT CHRISTMAS I HOPE HIS REINDEER GO LAME- YOU REMEMBER THAT LITTLE ELECTRIC WAGON YOU WANTED? I'M GOING TO ORDER THAT FOR YOU TOMORROW- AND I DON'T THINK A LITTLE CANDY WILL HURT YOU TODAY, EITHER- HOW WOULD A NICE BIG 5-LB. BOX OF FRESH CHOCOLATES APPEAL TO YOU? GET YOUR HAT AND WE'LL GO TO THE MOVIES.

IF I JUST HAD A BOY OF MY OWN- SINCE HE CAME IT'S JUST LIKE LETTING A FLOOD OF SUNSHINE INTO A DARK ROOM- WHAT I WOULDN'T DO FOR ONE OF MY OWN- WHAT A CHRISTMAS HE COULD HAVE- WHAT A SANTA CLAUS I COULD BE- I'D ARRANGE 365 HOLIDAYS EVERY YEAR FOR HIM- I'D BE THE WORLD'S CHAMPION FATHER-
